Monetary Accord Reached

West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and French President Georges Pompidou Saturday agreed on the principle of fixed parties and said they would deal with the United States in a coordinated manner.

West Germany and France have held different views since August, when President Nixon announced a series of measures to strengthen the dollar. While West Germany permitted the mark to float, France gave two parties to the franc, including a government-sponsored one for imports and exports.

Pompidou and Brandt also demanded the earliest possible cancellation of trade obstacles erected recently — an oblique demand that the U.S. remove its 10% import surtax.

The two leaders will meet separately with Nixon later this month.

The Senate, trying to save the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts from an overdose of success, has approved by voice vote a $1.5 million grant. The special appropriation now goes to a House-Senate conference committee and backers are predicting swift approval.

George Boldt Asserts Self As Pay Board's Leader

A Pay Board source reports that Chairman George Boldt, criticized by some for weak leadership, has angrily asserted himself and promised to get the board moving toward settlement of major policy questions.

Boldt reportedly told the other 14 members of the tripartite labor-management-public board at its latest meeting that from now on he would personally determine how board policies are to be applied in specific cases.

Boldt will consider only major policy questions and Boldt himself will decide where to draw the line between policy and application, the source said.

Brazil's Medici Comes to U.S. as Leader of Growing Industrial Giant

Rio de Janeiro (UPI) — When President Emilio Garrastuz Medici visits Washington on Tuesday, he will speak for an awakening giant of a nation that is the object of both increasing admiration and of concern in the hemisphere.

Brazil has a Texas complex and its leaders think big. Their goal is to make Brazil a modern, industrial world power by the year 2000. This is not an idle dream. Military chiefs and technocrats wrote up a national development plan and put the year 2000 as the target year for greatness. They are dead serious about achieving that.

expand exports, build roads and dams, and push industrialization, especially in steel, shipbuilding, mining, petrochemicals and electronics.

Brazil in the past few years has built so many giant hydroelectric projects in the upper Parana River basin that it has excited protests by Argentine leaders that Brazil could dry up the River Plata whenever it wanted.

Medici has given his own slant to the program of the 1964 revolution and introduced a number of popular measures — a crash literacy program, industrial profit sharing (very limited in scope), and moderate land reform in the northeast and Amazon basin.

Full Backing From U.S.

The United States gave the Brazilian military regime full backing and a total of $2 billion in grants and loans between 1964 and 1971 — more aid than Brazil had received in all the years since World War II.

Brazil this year began to dish out some foreign aid. In a rapid-moving Latin American diplomatic offensive, Brazil granted $10 million commercial credits to Peru and Ecuador, offered to aid the development of a stock market in Paraguay, promised technical assistance in road building to Guyana, and granted five Central American countries commercial credits of $1 million each.

Internally, Brazil's military leaders consider the race for grandeur and economic development just as important to win as a foreign war. Serious opposition is branded a threat to the national security and dealt with sternly.

The press is censored and more than 1,000 political leaders have lost their political rights—voting, holding office, and speechmaking. Under the tough national security laws, police can arrest suspected troublemakers without a warrant.

demonstrations are practically non-existent.

When he took office in 1969, Medici promised: "At the end of my administrative period, I hope to leave definitely installed democracy in our country."

Since, he has stopped talking about redemocratization and consolidated executive power. Medici reopened Congress, closed in December of 1968, but he gave it less power than ever before. It is rarely consulted before major laws are introduced and decreed.

Brazil does not, however, have one-man rule. Real power rests in the military high command, which puts a high premium on maintaining unity in the officer corps.

An important element in present-day Brazil is what government advisers call the "idea force," or the "idea of force."

One such "idea force" was the construction of Brasilia, the interior capital, in only three-and-a-half years by President Juscelino Kubitschek in the late 1950s. The capital was designed to open up for settlement and development Brazil's vast unpopulated inland regions in a bold dramatic stroke.

"Idea Force" This Year

Medici, besides consolidating Brasilia as the real rather than just the nominal capital, has come up with an "idea force" of his own this year—the Amazon roads. These roads, the transamazon highways, the Cuiaba - Santarem highways, will open up vast regions of Amazon forest, much of which has not even been explored, much less settled.

For next year, the government has its "idea force" already cut out for it—the 150th anniversary of Brazilian independence. As a part of the celebrations, Brazil will hold a miniworld soccer cup tournament, called the "Copa de Independencia," and inaugurate a 1,200-mile stretch of transamazon highway that was completed in only two years.

Just a few years ago few production and agricultural output has been increasing steadily.

Brazil's Size Important

America and half the land mass. It is larger than the United States without Alaska. "We always keep Brazil's size in mind when we deal with it," said one high-ranking U.S. diplomat, noting that Washington's stock order in dealing with Brazil is "be friendly."

Garrastuz Medici represents the third of a line of army generals who have ruled Brazil since the revolution of 1964 that overthrew Joao Goulart. For the most part Medici has followed in the footsteps of his predecessors, Gens. Humberto Castello Branco (1964-1967) and Arthur da Costa e Silva (1967-1969).

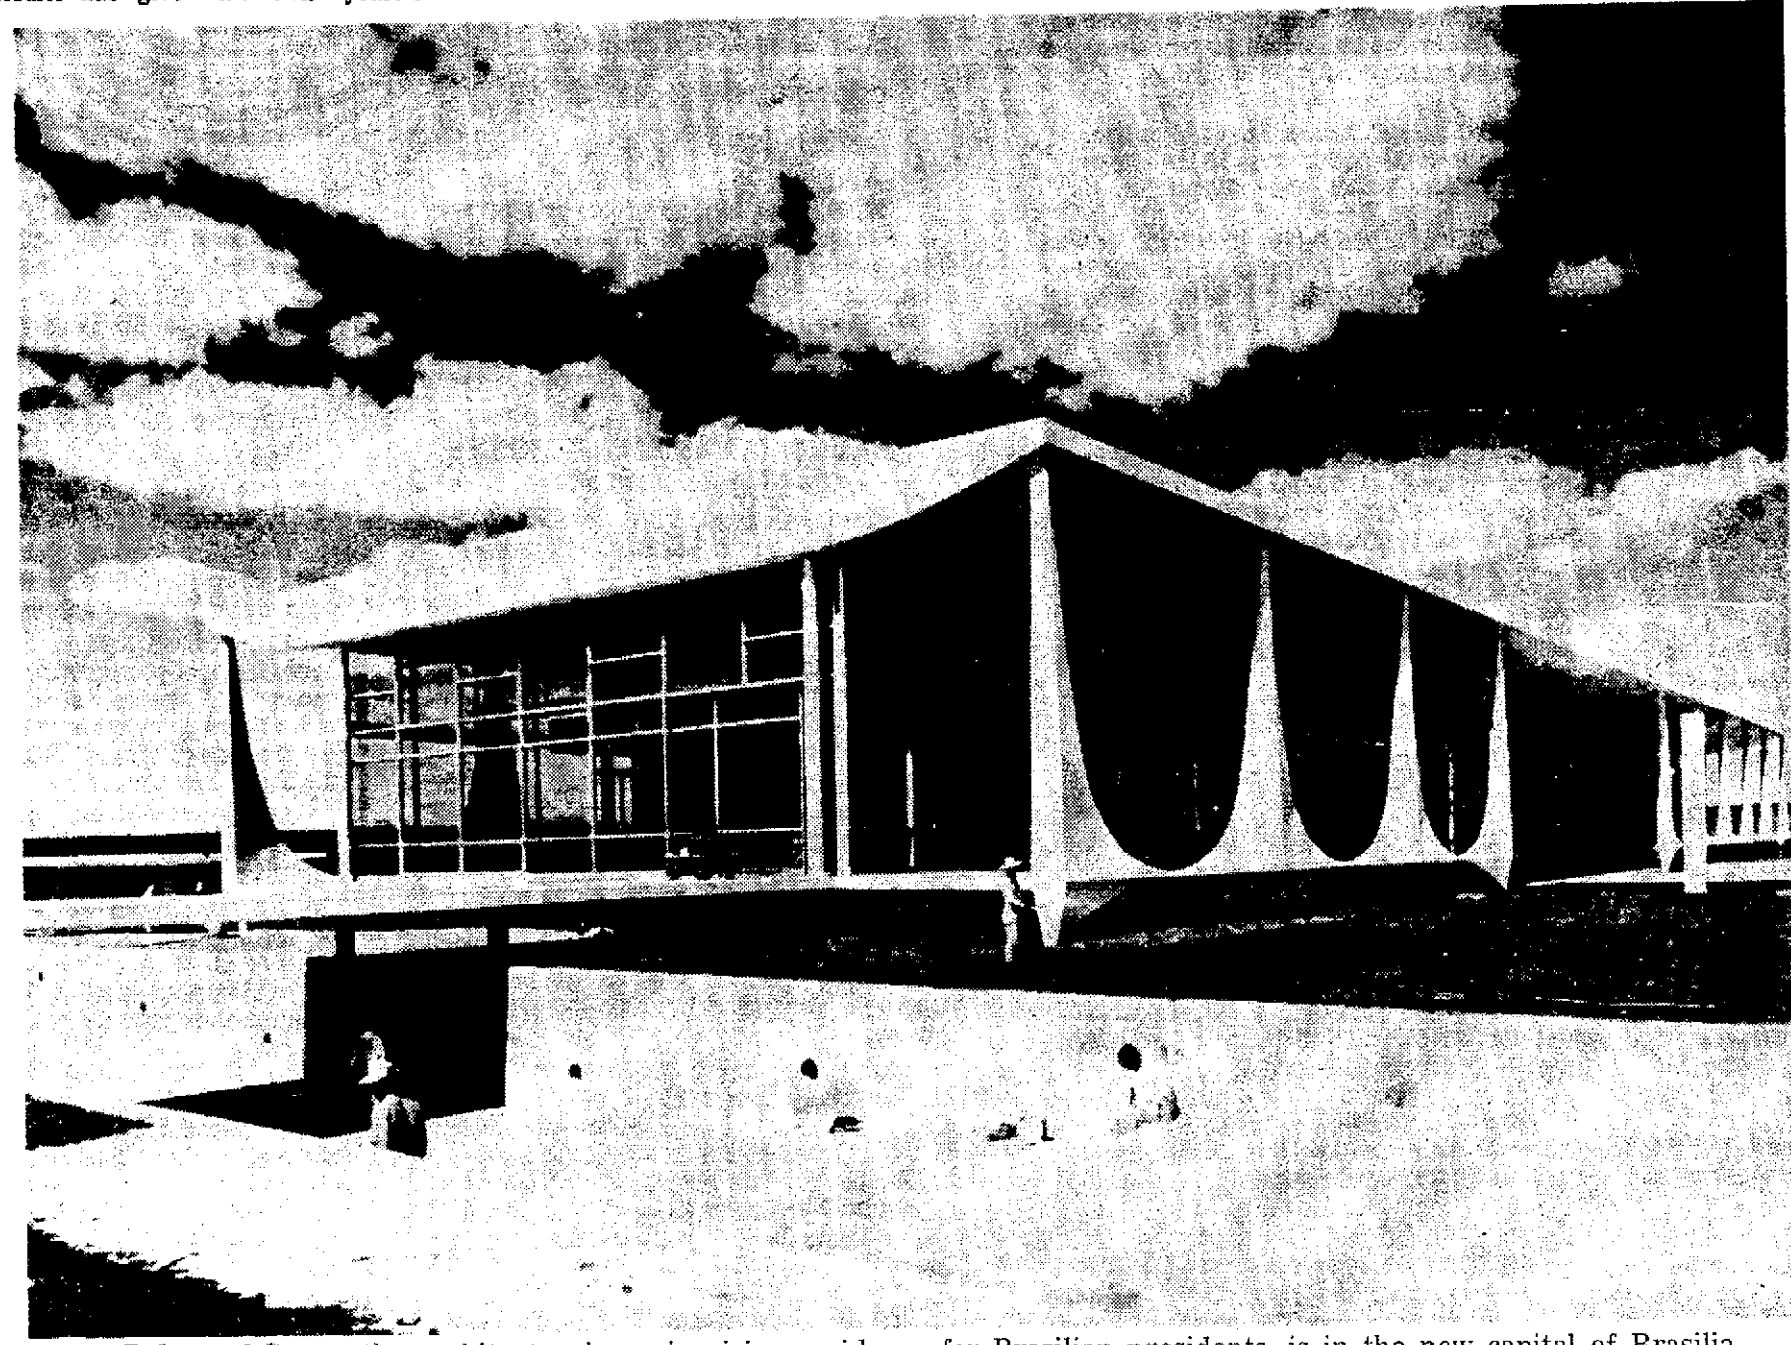

In the last four years the Brazilian economy, always rich in resources but often poor in management, finally has gotten itself untangled. The nation achieved a growth rate of between 8 and 10%.

Inflation, though still high by U.S. standards, has been dropping gradually, while industrial

Xeroxing Finds Breast Cancer in Early Stage

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — A Houston physician predicted that more breast cancers will be found in an early, curable state through Xeroxing rather than X-raying the breast.

Dr. John E. Martin told the Radiological Society of North America meeting he no longer used conventional film because of the superiority of Xeroradiography.

"We have been able to see cancers as small as 3 to 5 millimeters, which probably could not be seen under film," he said.

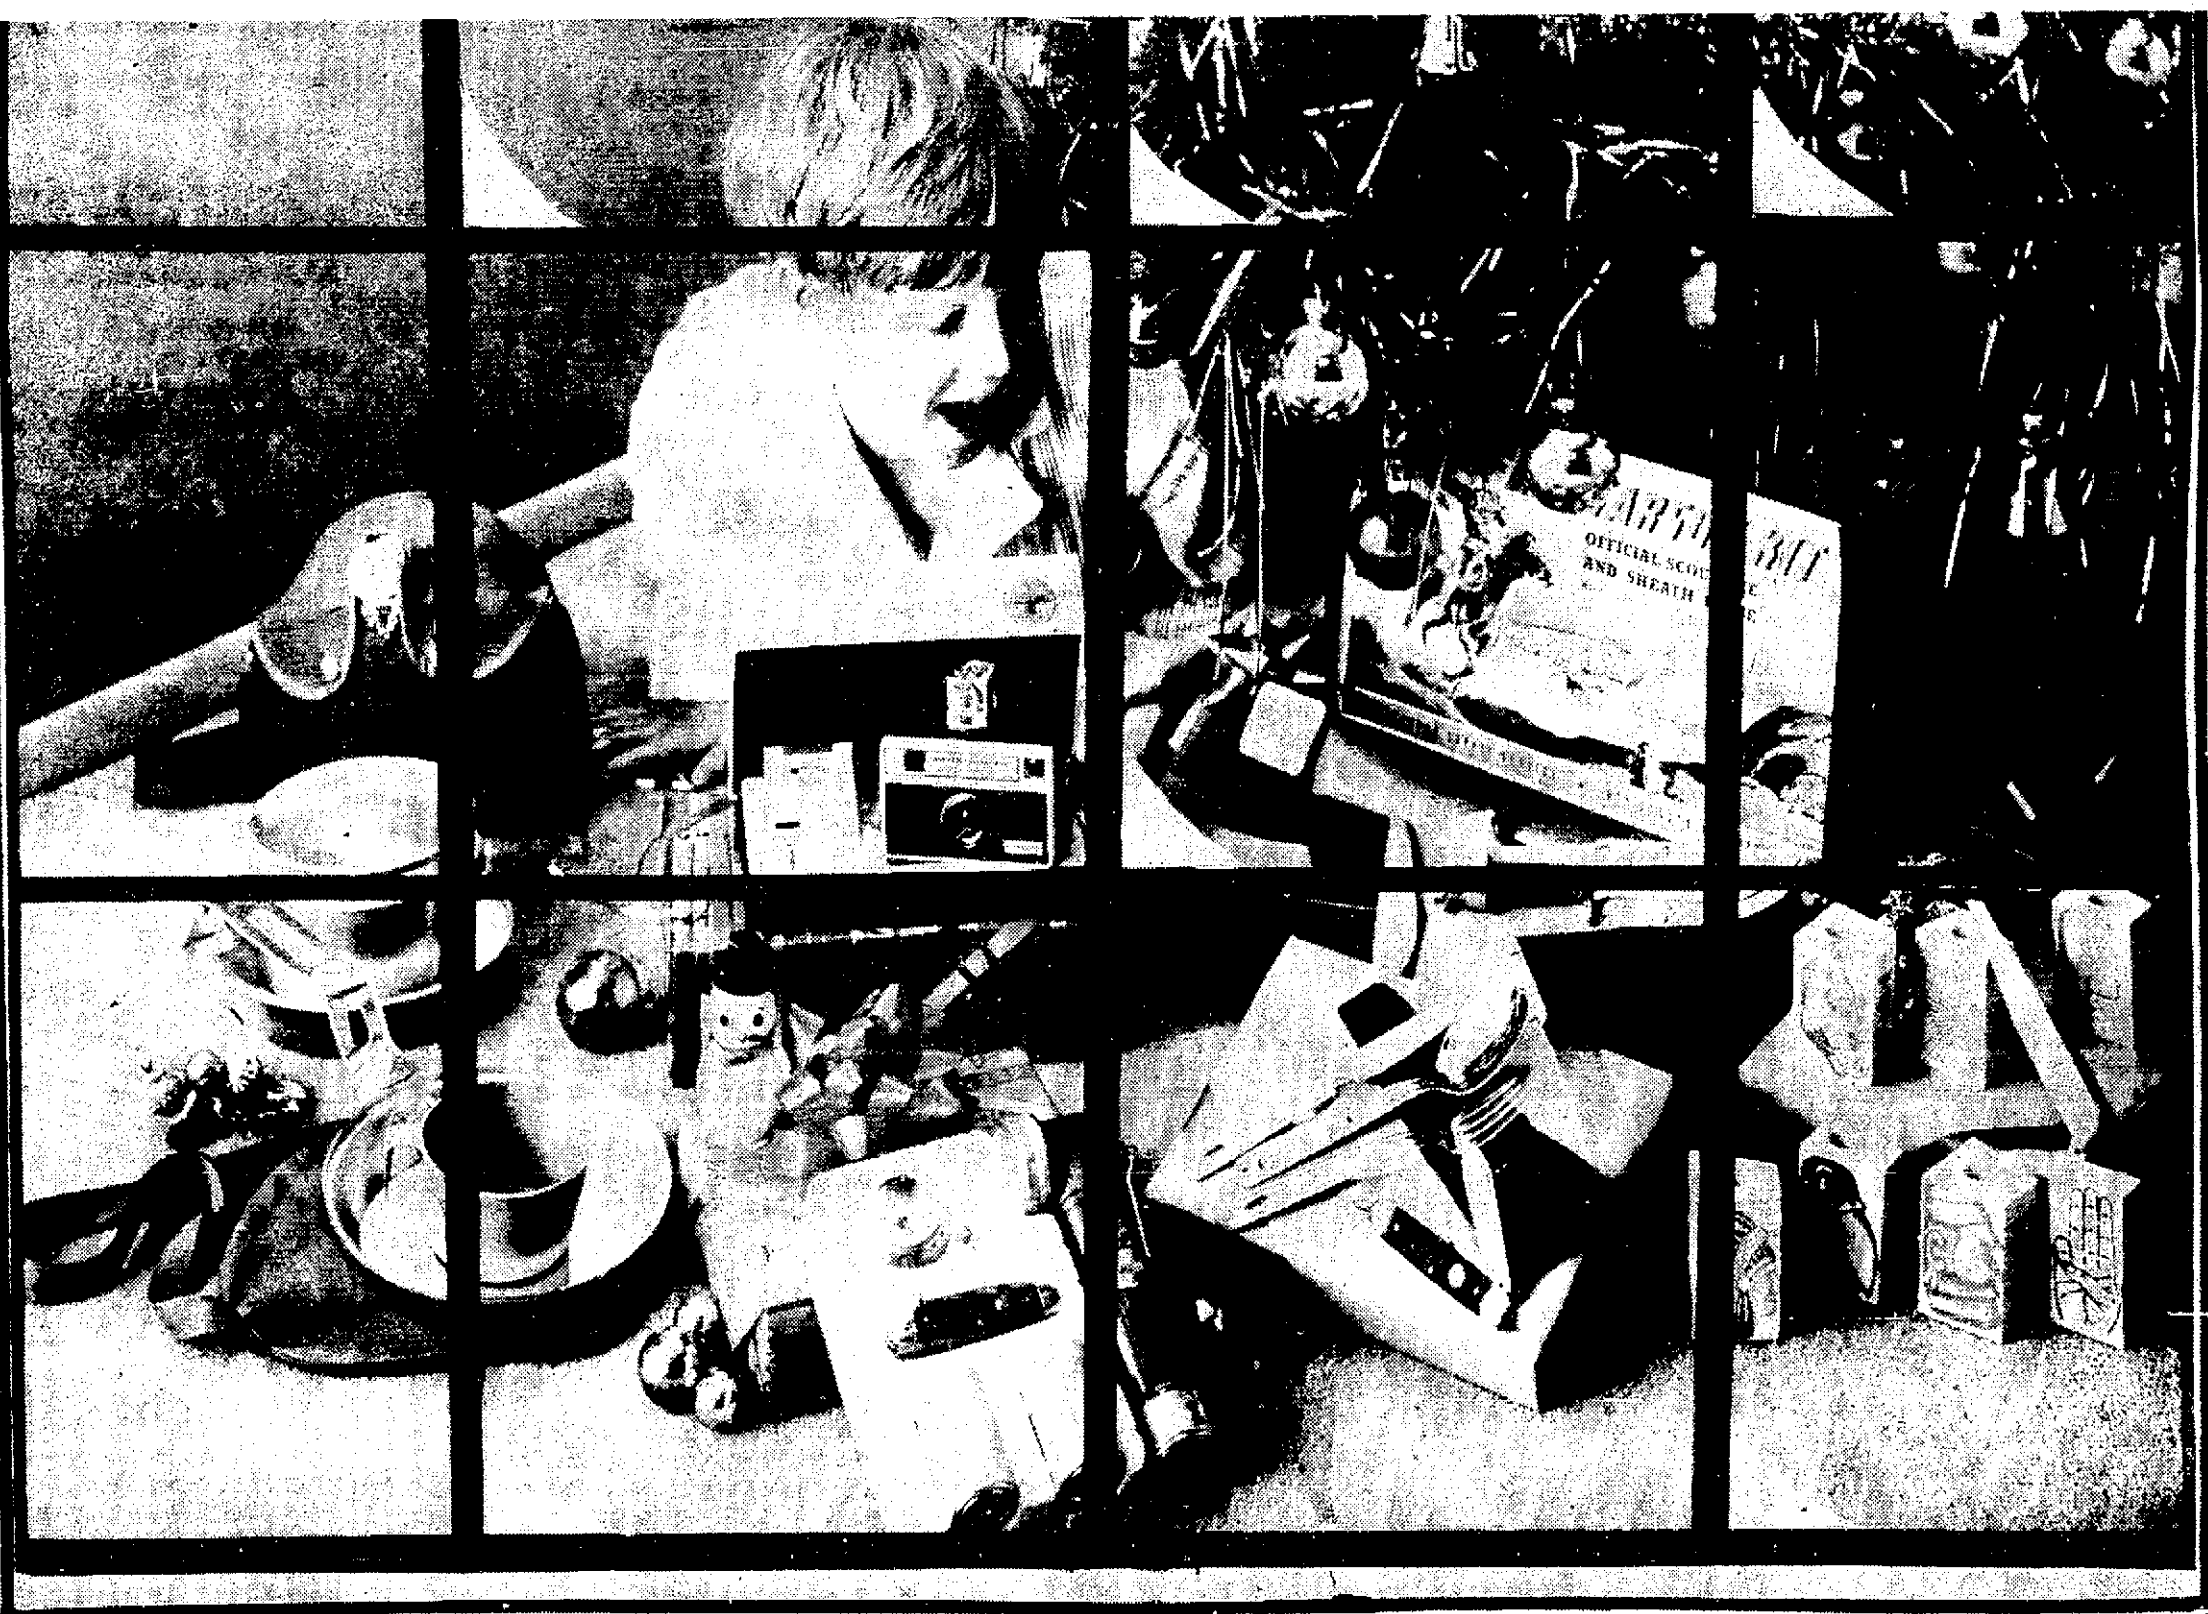

"In one study we found 54 cancers and 13 of these were clinically unsuspected," said Dr. Martin. "All were detected early enough so that they had not spread beyond the original site. Presumably these patients can be cured by removal of the breast."

Xeroradiography works on the same principle as the Xerox duplicator, said Dr. Martin. An electrostatic image is imprinted on a piece of paper rather than a film. The image need not be taken in a dark room for development as in the case of film but can be viewed instantly in a lighted room.

Radiation exposure to the patient is reduced by half.

The physician said manufacturers of the equipment are expected to begin distribution in January.

Trade With the Communists

American businessmen signed a $125 million trade agreement with the Soviet Union last week, signalling what may be one of the most significant—if so far little recognized—developments in the changing relations between America and the Communist world.

In one fell swoop, the new agreement will increase U.S.-Soviet trade by about 60%. And all odds are that there is more to follow.

Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans preceded the 100 high-level western businessmen, most of them Americans, to Moscow and now he is off to Poland, presumably again to set the stage for trade accords.

If Moscow is willing to increase trade with the U.S., there is good reason to believe other Communist nations will follow suit. And, while Peking does not follow Moscow's lead any more, international trade is almost certain to be a subject discussed when President Nixon meets in February with Chinese leaders.

U.S. agriculture has a special interest in seeing trade expanded. Recently the Russians bought $140 million worth of feed grains from the U.S., and they are expected to make other big purchases if credit can be arranged. A delegation of Soviet farm officials will visit the U.S. soon. China, with its population of near 800 million, is also a potential market for agricultural goods.

Aside from the interest of American farmers, there are two good reasons why Washington should work hard to expand trade with Communist as well as other countries.

One is the U.S. economy in general. If it is to be restored to high gear, exports will have to be increased. A major potential for expansion lies in the heretofore largely untapped Communist world.

The second reason is world peace. There is considerable truth in the cliché that nations which trade don't fight.

Mr. Nixon undoubtedly subscribes to the theory that if trade can be expanded and business relationships established, there will be an effect on the political policies of the Communist countries and their attitude toward the U.S.

Certainly if China and the Soviet Union became increasingly dependent on the commercial relationships with America, they would be less inclined to offend Washington or to engage in Asian or European adventures which would threaten to draw the U.S. into conflicts.

America's relations with the Communist world may at last be shifting from an era of tension as usual to one of business as usual.

A New State Tree?

Because of the onslaught of Dutch elm disease, some have suggested Nebraska designate a new state tree. The American elm, the present one, is highly susceptible to the disease.

Well, maybe this is a good time for Nebraska to turn over a new leaf, as it were, and choose some other deciduous (or evergreen) symbol.

Obviously it would be embarrassing if the time came when Nebraskans found themselves with a state tree that didn't even exist here. And Dutch elm disease has been reported in all but nine of Nebraska's 93 counties.

Next year is the Arbor Day centennial, and it would be a good occasion for the Legislature to address itself to this issue.

The big question, of course, is what to substitute for the elm. It should be something beautiful, hardy, historic, inspiring.

Any suggestions? Write to your representative in the Unicameral, preferably on recycled paper.

Alienation: Yes; Patriotism: Yes

The odyssey of a not-so-innocent abroad who, after seven years, found the new frontiers of consciousness in his native land.

W. P. Rock is a philosopher-scholar who has traveled widely in Europe and Asia. He studied at Cambridge, the Benares Hindu University and the C. G. Jung Institute, and is now a researcher at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, Cal. His story is adapted from The Center Magazine.

By WILLIAM PENNELL ROCK
(c) Chicago Daily News

Seven years ago I left the United States determined to be an alien for the rest of my life.

I am born elitist, descended from Francis Scott Key, and I come from the most privileged sector of American society. I enjoyed the very best America had to offer. Yet, like many others, I felt in some way oppressed by my country. I wanted to be an alien.

The instruments of oppression were (and are) ones to which Americans of a certain temperament—mine, for instance—are particularly sensitive: the stringent rules and regulations governing middle-class white consciousness; the pressure to conform to the image of man according to the revelations of Madison Avenue; the absolutism of the American way of doing things—what I call the law.

There were many reasons for returning to America. But more than anything, I discovered, not without considerable suffering, that freedom from the law is not accomplished by fleeing the law but by submitting oneself to rigorous examination — by uprooting the claims made by the law, examining them and choosing among them.

It was certainly important to do this outside of America, but I also was aware that this kind of rigorous self-examination was becoming as American as hamburgers and milk shakes.

From the first moment of landing, I felt as though I had been snapped out of a dream. Everywhere around me I saw the country in the throes of the conflicts I had myself experienced. Every element I saw was in some recondite way familiar to me. America is my country. It is my own contemporary reality. It is America itself that is going through "heavy changes," and no American has a map.

Counter Culture

It was soon apparent that the face of America had been changed most of all by the lotus-eaters and the law-breakers — the so-called "counter-culture."

There are many who dismiss the counter-culture as a series of fads. But this is too easy. The face of America is changing because the soul of America is changing.

I do not believe that the new left grasps the fact that America has changed more and faster in the last seven years than any country ever has changed, at least without the chaos resulting from a fundamental change in structure. The activists, for instance, do not admit that, as Jean Francois Revel has pointed out, the United States is now among the least racist countries in the world.

What is utterly unique about America is that dissent — the challenge to moral values, the modification of alternatives, the criticism of cultural standards — is taking place within the context of the American situation as a whole.

It is a fact that only America has the basic elasticity to change its cultural structure at this incredible pace, because the margin of revolutionary action, cultural, social and constitutional — that is, freedom—is greater in America than in any other country.

There is a revolution. And because the changes are not a settling of accounts with the past but with the future, it is also a renaissance. What I see, returning home, is some inscrutable combination of rebellion and revelation. What I see is new, frightening, and magnificent. It is the Great American Rebellion.

What is a "rebellion"?

It is a revelation consequent upon rebellion, and a rebellion consequent upon revelation. The rebellion is the traumatic rebellion against the law and the equally dramatic revelation of possibly new but certainly alternative ways of being human.

Toll of Excesses

History seems to have initiated this great rebellion by resolutely taking its toll of our excesses. It will surely be recorded by historians that the event that signalled the Great Rebellion was The Law incarnate as the Vietnamese war. It is the event that signalled America's nervous breakdown. It has provided a moment of choice for America. It marks at once the collapse of the old autocratic American way of doing things and a call for a new kind of spiritual authenticity. I see evidence everywhere that America, with all its frontier vitality, is rallying to this call.

The first symptom of the rebellion is schizophrenia. Every one of us to some degree has two identities — the quantitative roundhead evaluating his existence in terms of refrigerators, Cadillacs, television sets and stability; and his opposite number, issuing from his solar plexus and the dark regions of his loins, the hippie, the yippie, the freak letting it all come out natural.

The out-laws, in their collective dissent, are in such ferment within America's own shores that they have risen up within the country, taken hold of their great constitutional heritage and set out to alter America or abolish it.

Outbreak of Bizarre

The occasion for the fear and second manifestation of the Great American Rebellion is the outbreak of the bizarre.

A Boston lady—of purest white strain—is suddenly presented with her first grandchild, an adopted baby of interracial parentage.

In Harvard Square, in Sproul Plaza, in every place of prestigious intellect, crazies wander the streets zonked on acid. And they are not the products of the "other America," but the sons of lawyer Brown and the daughters of dentist Jones.

In the throes of the Great American Rebellion we hear everywhere the cry, "Nobody knows what is right any more."

The third, immediately apparent symptom of the nervous breakdown of the law-lovers is hysteria. It is everywhere. Even the most intelligent—particularly the most intelligent—are gripped by it.

In all the consternation of the Great Rebellion, I see yet another kind of response—one which I confess, fills me with a strange and new kind of patriotic pride.

I see an America beginning to be aware of the sacred where once it saw only the secular, to see through its sensibilities rather than its calculations.

One must be utterly blinded by the aesthetic prejudices of another age or deceived by the crudity of first beginnings to miss the fact that for the first time America is developing a culture. There is a fierce fermentation generating new art forms which do not depend for their validity upon their European pedigrees.

American society is now at the edge of a dangerous frontier, beyond which one sees a new nation, rising childlike, sophisticated, frightening, and amazing.

This is what it is like to be a patriot returning home.

A Test The Lottery Fails

Sen. John DeCamp has found both opponents and proponents of his proposed legalized lottery to raise funds for the operation of state government. But aside from the direct things that can be said for and against the proposal, there has been a kind of intangible consideration that has bothered this writer but which has been difficult to put into words.

Now, the words have, perhaps, been provided by a Catholic churchman quoted in The Christian Science Monitor. In a story reviewing a book on the worldly goods of the church, the subject of bingo is discussed, a source of revenue for many church and other groups.

"Bingo," the churchman is quoted as having said, "isn't a sign of greed. It's a confession of defeat, an admission that the parish can't keep its head above water."

This very precisely describes this writer's feelings about a lottery — that, regardless of all other arguments, it is a confession of defeat.

What a lottery means is that we lack the capacity to provide needed public services through established means of doing things. It says that we have failed with our tax system, that the system lacks popular support and that it cannot get the job done.

And that says a lot more. It says, if a lottery can produce funds that are needed, that we have not had the leadership we need to meet the legitimate demands of government.

Even if there were no moral objections to a lottery, it stamps as a failure the systems to proclaim himself a patriot. Yet, a patriot I am.

Not a Flag Waver

What, then, is the new American patriot? He is surely not a flag waver. He is devoid of nationalism because he realizes that before one belongs to any nation, one belongs to humanity.

The new patriot is always recreating America by challenging those institutions, whether of society or of the spirit, which are oppressive. That is why my desire of seven years ago to be an alien has at last been fulfilled by the paradoxical act of acknowledging my patriotism.

To be a patriot is to be forever engaged in remaking the law.

The most effective patriot not only accepts but participates genuinely in the rebellion that is now America.

We must resolve ourselves at the converging point of the lines being drawn and refrain from adopting any solution from the past. This, it seems to me, is the only way that a new America will be created out of this chaos — through patriotism — choosing, challenging, discovering.

America is proving its greatness by exercising its capacity to call itself into question.

It is a great country, not because of the chauvinistic platitudes we learned in grammar school, but because the black militant face of America has been able to challenge its fundamental structure, to arouse prognostications of an unfair trial and then to see itself acquitted; because the sacred secrecy of the government has been violated by the release of top secret documents in the name of freedom of expression; because for the first time in history, a soldier has been sentenced in wartime as a murderer by a tribunal of his own army for having killed human beings in the enemy camp.

America is great because America has the structural girth to contain the shocks resulting from its search for a new identity, because Americans have, I believe, the courage and wisdom to challenge the established and to accept the new.

I rejoice in America because I see its greatness being contested. I see America rising to the test. And I see America winning.

it augments and it tells the citizenry that there is no hope for that system. Rather than relying upon our political processes, the wisdom of our elected officials and the responsibility of our electorate, we turn to a system of false hopes and seek to capitalize upon the frustrations, emotions and weaknesses of our people.

What is the secret of success of a lottery? There is only one answer — the hope of winning a lot of money, of getting something free, of getting something for nothing, of gaining a fortune without effort.

All of those things may be a part of much of human nature but are they to be encouraged and relied upon as the foundation of our future? We hardly think so.

The real answer lies in an informed, interested and responsible electorate, one that will look for leadership in the men and women elected to office and one that will support programs of proven value. This is in contrast to a public that doesn't give a hang as individuals for anything other than themselves and elected officials whose only concern is a narrow-minded determination to win re-election.

A lottery would simply live off the worse that was in all of us, not the best. Once we have settled for that, we have lost the battle of life, regardless of the baubles that the lottery might buy for us.

Once we have reached that point, we have closed our eyes to reality, regardless of the seemingly lofty motives with which we have rationalized the lottery. A lottery may help get around but can never right what is wrong in our society.

OPINION By Joseph Kraft
President's Highly Personal Diplomacy

Washington—It is fit that Henry Kissinger made his public debut the other day by describing the plans for President Nixon's coming China visit. For the strong suit of the special assistant for national security affairs is affording President Nixon maximum freedom of maneuver in dealing with the Communist giants.

But it is also not inappropriate that Dr. Kissinger surfaces as troubles erupt in South Asia, the Near East and the Western Alliance. For the weakness of the present system is that the United States now gives inadequate attention to second-order business.

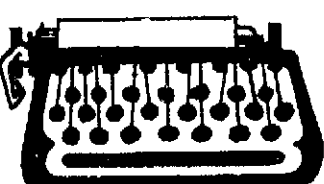

The best measure of the system comes in relations with the Soviet Union. Nixon is now heading for a summit meeting in Moscow where he should be able to push through an arms control agreement highly welcome to public opinion in the United States and practically essential for budgetary reasons. But Nixon is reaching this agreement in his own personal way.

The agreement comes with the United States in a posture of superiority in the nuclear field. This country has added to its nuclear force through the ABM, or anti-ballistic missile system, and through the MIRV device, for placing mini-warheads in a single missile. Though some big concessions are going to be necessary, it can be made to seem that Nixon got an agreement by taking the tough position his Democratic predecessors were unwilling to take.

The same kind of highly personal diplomacy applies to China. The President's visit has been timed to give him very good marks for the 1972 campaign. It was further concentrated so that he would be in touch with historic figures—Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Prime Minister Chou En-lai—in a way that enhances his own prestige.

Anything bad that happened moreover, is put on Secretary of State William Rogers and the United Nations. As a result hardly anybody can pick a fight with Nixon about China policy.

Only extraordinary efforts by Dr. Kissinger have made it possible for the President to apply the personal touch so thoroughly to matters of such many-sided complexity. The bureaucracy in the State Dept. and the Pentagon has been kept almost completely in the dark.

Provocative Topic in News

Even Dr. Kissinger's own staff has been shorn of men disposed to ask questions and air opinions. The tone there is now set by a willingness to salute and undergo fingernail inspection. One official of enormous potential value who failed to measure up to those standards was, in fact, dropped from the staff—namely, Herbert Levin, who was a former college roommate of Chou En-lai's translator.

The price of doing so much business so secretly in the White House becomes apparent when the going gets serious in areas that are not high on the agenda of Dr. Kissinger and the President. For example, it has been clear for months that India and Pakistan were heading toward war. It has also been clear that trouble could be averted if President Yahya Khan of Pakistan opened negotiations with the insurgent leader, Majibur Rahman. But nothing was done because the White House was not disposed to put pressure on President Yahya.

In the Near East, Secretary of State Rogers has been given a relatively free hand to try to arrange a settlement between Israel and the Arab states. In the process the secretary has given Cairo the impression that the United States could win agreement from the Israelis.

Now the Egyptians are threatening to use force unless the Americans put more pressure on Israel. And Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir has been at the White House putting pressure on the President to give Israel more arms as a price for continuing the negotiation. Secretary Rogers has set in motion.

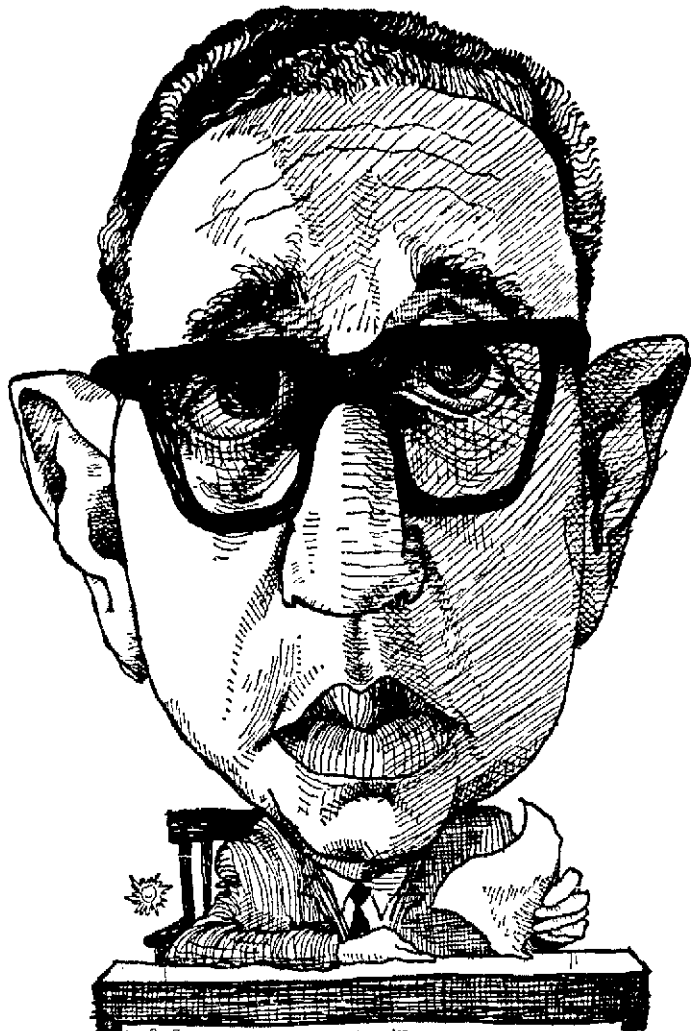

As to the alliance, the President and Dr. Kissinger have shown almost no interest in working out common problems of defense, trade and international money. The coming set of summit meetings with Canada, France, Britain, West Germany and Japan was scheduled only when the heavy-handed efforts of Treasury Secretary John Connally to impose a currency realignment had provoked hard-core resistance.

The administration still has no plans for working out a general trade agreement. Neither, despite all the talk by Secretary Rogers, is there a U.S. government position on how to organize a process of troop withdrawal from Europe.

On balance, the system has worked not badly so far. The improved relations with Russia and China easily outweigh the troubles arising in the rest of the world. But it is not easy to believe that so highly personalized a system can long continue without serious trouble.

HENRY KISSINGER

WORLD OF HUMOR By Art Buchwald
A Pep Talk for Nixon

Washington — In spite of all he has to do, President Nixon still takes time out of his busy day to telephone football coaches and offer them encouragement and advice.

While the President does this on the spur of the moment, it has never occurred to any football coach to telephone Nixon and offer him words of inspiration and solace.

"Hello, Mr. President, this is Coach Harold Elkins of the John V. Lindsay High School football team. I just wanted to call you and tell you to keep your chin up and don't get discouraged because you've lost a few lately."

"Thank you, Coach."
"Mr. President, my team has lost 39 out of its last 40 games, but I learned one thing. Never give up."
"Those are inspiring words, Coach."

"Now, I want to tell you something Mr. President, that you probably don't know about me. I always wanted to go into politics. But I wasn't light enough to make the team. I played some sandlot politics, and in my freshman year in college, I ran for a couple of offices, and so what I tell you now comes not from the heart, but from experience."

"The game of politics is just like the game of football. You win some and you lose some, and you usually lose more than you win."

"Mr. President, I'm going to go out on a limb and predict that you're going to be in the playoffs in 1972. If Connally can pull off Phase II, and Agnew doesn't get hurt, and the stock market goes up, and you can block George Meany, and if you can score some points against George Wallace, I believe you're going to be very tough to beat."

"Coach, I have to ring off now..."
"I want to make one thing perfectly clear, Mr. President. You're going to goof between now and '72 — everyone goofs in politics, as in football — but the man who wins is the one who says, 'I've goofed, but I'm still in the ball game.'"

"Coach, I've got Chou En-lai on 'hold.'"
"Mr. President, do you know what wins football games?"
"No, I don't."

"It's team spirit. Gen. Pershing once said that a team with a great morale is nothing if you don't have the spirit to go with it."

"He said that?"

"Right. Team spirit is contagious. If you, as president, say to your team 'Let's get them,' it can infect everyone in your administration from the vice president of the United States to Henry Kissinger's 10-year-old son."

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

"Fortunately, the vast majority of the students at the University of Nebraska have better sense than the few who promoted the shotgun distribution of that controversial birth control handbook on the Lincoln campus."

So said Omaha World Herald editorially. It continued: "The sponsoring student organizations could have selected a less inflammatory document. While the handbook's clinical material is judged to be medically correct, it is tinged heavily with the sort of simple-minded radical rhetoric one usually associates with the underground press."

"Birth control counseling may have its place on the college campus, under certain limitations and with deliberate consideration of the personal intimate aspects of the problems involved. But to scatter such a publication across the campus, sliding it under dormitory doors and putting it in student mailboxes, is suggestive of a mass invitation to 'safe' promiscuity," the editorial continued.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln student newspaper, Daily Nebraskan, editorially questioned the merits of a bill in the Associated Students of the University of Nebraska (ASUN) Senate to establish a loan fund to finance out-of-state abortions.

Although the proposal "has good motives behind it — only the very poor are now usually prevented by Nebraska law from having legal abortions because of the high cost of out-of-state abortions — it doesn't seem practical to have a loan fund for a specific purpose when the campus will probably soon have a student credit union for all types of loans."

The Nebraskan editor also pointed out that ASUN already has a tight budget and it is "doubtful that an abortion loan fund is the best expenditure ASUN could make."

"It seems to us that Bish (GOP State Chairman Milan Bish) has taken on a large assignment, if he wants to identify Exon as a spender," so wrote the Omaha World Herald on Bish's charges that Gov. J. J. Exon "has spent $36 million of a $47 million surplus left by the Republican administration... has increased the income tax 33 1/3%... has turned the state meat inspection program over to the federal government so he can spend that money somewhere else."

The World Herald continued: "The impression we get is that the public has come to think of the governor as an economist, an administrator who, if anything, is too tight-fisted on occasion."

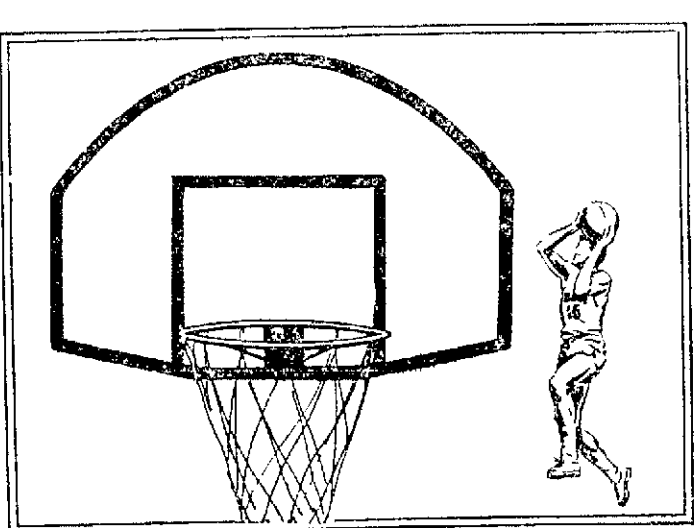

Out of a crowded field of six candidates for the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator, the Grand Island Independent thinks Wilcox Sen. Wayne Ziebarth might have the best chance to win — and an outside chance to beat Republican incumbent Carl Curtis besides.

"It's somewhat like the case of ex-Gov. Norbert Tiemann, who came from nowhere to win the Republican nomination and the governorship five years ago on the strength of a lot of charm and ability," the paper said.

The Nebraska Signal (Geneva) predicted "hot arguments" in the 1972 Legislature on Gov. Exon's proposal to repeal the sale tax on food, and it denies Exon's purposes in moving for repeal are entirely political.

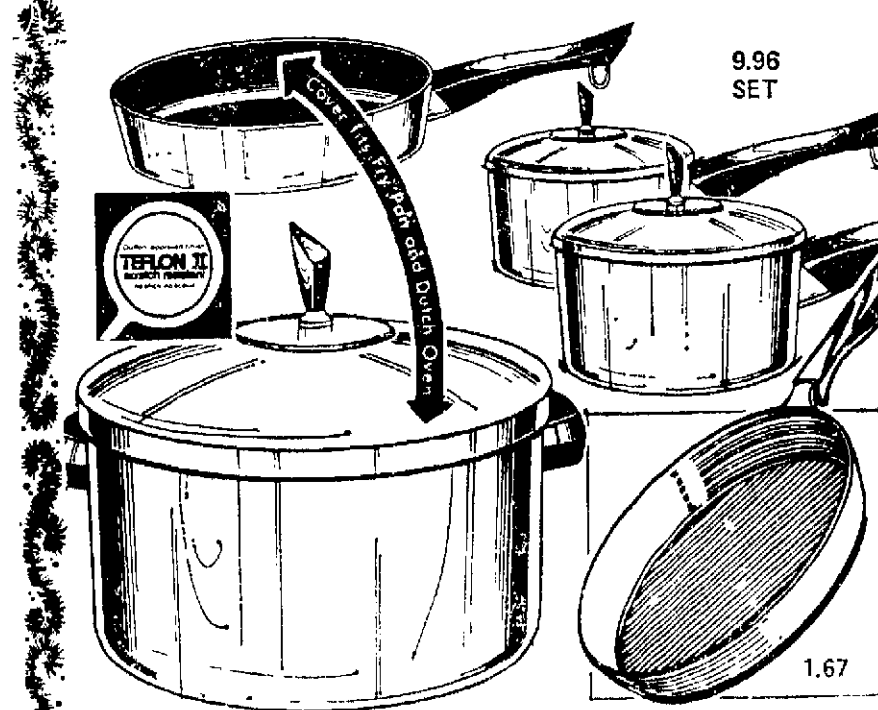

For instance, the Signal's editor said, states which exempt food from taxation have found the administrative and enforcement costs considerable.

"It is hoped political considerations will be kept at a minimum and that a sound judgment will be made, preferably with calmness and good judgment, rather than from the standpoint of what is most popular with the most voters," the paper concluded.

Navy Pushes For A Nuclear Carrier

(c) Chicago Daily News
Washington — The Navy expects to have a hard time with military spending critics in the U.S. Senate.
But it is getting set to go all out in a drive to win congressional approval of another nuclear carrier, a goal it has never given up.

This time, however, it is in a stronger position because it has persuaded Defense Secretary Melvin Laird and Deputy Secretary David Packard to include money for it in the fiscal 1972 defense budget that goes to Congress in January.

It is also hopeful that President Nixon will back the project. His support is crucial since Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., the influential chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, will not urge his committee to authorize another carrier unless the President himself asks for it.

The Navy realizes it has two major problems in selling critics such as Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., Clifford Case, R-N.J., and Walter Mondale, D-Minn., on another nuclear carrier when it already has one, with two more being built.
These problems are:
—The huge cost. Because of inflation, the cost of a new nuclear carrier is estimated at $950 million. This is about one-third more than the cost of carriers now being built — and the figure does not include the cost of the planes that would operate from the carrier or the escort vessels that would be required for it.
—The alleged vulnerability of a carrier. Critics contend a carrier would be a sitting duck for the missiles and submarines of the mighty new Russian navy. One senator asserts it would be "like hitting a bull in the backside with a bass fiddle."

14 Killed in Irish Blast

Belfast, Northern Ireland — A bomb wrecked a bar crowded with Roman Catholics Saturday night, killing 14 persons, including three children. It was the worst terror incident of the six-county province's 28-month agony.

Rescuers digging through the fire-swept rubble of McGurk's Bar in the city center said the death toll could go higher. Police said the bombing may have been a mistake by the Catholic-based Irish Republican Army.

"Some of the bodies were horribly mutilated and some blown to pieces," a British army spokesman said.
Seventeen persons were injured in the blast.
Police were investigating the possibility that the bomb was in a suitcase left at the bar, to be picked up later by a guerrilla of the outlawed IRA and taken to a target elsewhere. It may have gone off prematurely, they said.

Taiwan Crucial Issue of Nixon Visit—Chou

(c) New York Times
London — Premier Chou En-lai warned in an interview published here today in The Sunday Times that if President Nixon failed to resolve "the Taiwan question" in his talks with Chinese leaders next February, his mission could be a failure.
"This is the crucial issue," he said.
In the wide-ranging interview, conducted by the Australian author Neville Maxwell in late November, Chou warned that in the event of war between India and Pakistan, "India would in the end taste the bitter fruit of its own making."
"We firmly support Pakistan against India's . . . aggressive activities," he said, adding: "You know what our attitude will be if a war breaks out between India and Pakistan."
Characterizing the support of two sovereign Chinas as "contradictions in United States foreign policy," Chou said: "I think it is up to President Nixon to answer this question — otherwise, if he comes to China and yet the Taiwan question remains unsettled, how will he account for himself when he gets back?"

Noting that Nixon "knocked on the door," requesting the talks, Chou cautioned: "But we should not expect too much to come out of it. How could all problems be solved at once? There can be no such thing."
"But if he solves nothing, will the American people agree to it?"
The Chinese leader said that "the nucleus of United States policy" was to maintain "decadent and tottering old friends."

Money Problems May Precipitate Military Problems—NATO Chief

Brussels, Belgium (AP) — The 15 Atlantic Alliance countries, gathered for their big annual meeting this week, will hear a top-level warning to Americans and West Europeans: Get together on your monetary problems or you may fall apart on the military ones.
The message will come from Joseph Luns, the new secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). He does not think NATO itself can solve the monetary crisis but he hopes to send the foreign ministers and defense ministers back to their capitals with the conviction that their ministers of finance must find a settlement at the conference scheduled the following week in Washington.

An extended dispute, Luns will tell them, would weaken the alliance.

The monetary problem is linked closely with U.S. military spending in Europe. As European currencies rise in value and the dollar drops, the United States must pay out more dollars to buy the marks and pounds needed for the expenses of its 310,000 troops in Western Europe. The troops themselves turn more of the dollars they earn into foreign currency.
A German sports car bought by a U.S. airman in Wiesbaden, a drink sold over a Naples bar to a sailor of the 6th Fleet have both become greater burdens on the U.S. balance of international payments than in the past.

At the same time U.S. arms become cheaper and more competitive. This could help the U.S. balance of payments by helping U.S. arms makers sell bigger orders to Europeans.
Luns already has said that the Western allies must move, and move fast, toward a fairer division of the defense burden between America and Europe.
His theme may be taken up again Monday night when U.S. Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird arrives for the week-long meeting.

On Tuesday, defense ministers from 10 of the West European allies will meet at NATO headquarters in suburban Brussels. Last year this "Eurogroup" announced that its members would spend about $1 billion on defense over the next five years beyond what they had planned previously.

No similar announcement is expected this time, but the members will try in a joint statement to emphasize their efforts to comply with the agreed defense plan for the decade — a paper called AD70. The chairman of the group, British Defense Minister Lord Carrington, has said that it is not realistic politics to expect Europeans to make a new defense effort on the American scale.

More Than 6.6 Million Chevys to Be Recalled

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. (GM) announced Saturday it is advising the owners of more than 6.6 million Chevrolet Chevrolets to take them to dealers for installation at company expense of restraints to offset possible engine mount failure.
The recall — believed to be the largest in auto industry history — affects owners of approximately 6,682,000 1965 through 1969 regular-size Chevrolets and Novas as well as 1967 through 1969 Camaros.
The company said only vehicles with V8 engines are involved, adding that this excludes all Chevelles, Corvettes and six-cylinder models.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) last October advised owners of all 1965-1969 Chevrolets, Novas, Chevelles and Camaros to have the front engine mounts inspected.
The NHTSA said reports of engine mount failures had been received from about 500 owners, and many of them involved loss of control of the vehicle.

Annual Christmas Messages From POWs are in Doubt

Hong Kong (AP) — North Vietnam for 10 months has not broadcast a non political message from an American prisoner of war to relatives in the United States.

With Christmas drawing near, there has been no indication that the flow of prisoner yuletide greetings heard over Radio Hanoi for the past three years will be repeated this year.

The halt to prisoner broadcasts — with the exception of occasional antiwar declarations by captured Americans — coincides with U.S. complaints at the Paris peace talks that prisoners in North Vietnam are not being allowed to send normal flow of mail home.

Nonpolitical messages from captured American pilots held in North Vietnam had been broadcast more or less regularly since they were first heard here in the 1968 Christmas season. Most were simply greetings and messages of reassurance to wives, children, parents, sweethearts and friends.

Messages over Radio Hanoi that were antiwar in tone date to 1967 and possibly earlier.

Space Technology Used In Fingerprint System

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — A fingerprint system that harnesses space age technology in the fight against lawbreakers is set for its first nationwide test — from California to Florida.

If the test is successful and the system catches on, the weeks it can take to get positive identification of a criminal by using FBI fingerprint files could be cut to seconds.

The test begins Monday when technicians in the Los Angeles sheriff's office throw a switch that will send a signal to a satellite in permanent orbit over Australia.

or some other high-speed delivery device, courts might have to wait weeks for the manual processing and mailing from FBI headquarters in Washington of the needed fingerprints.

Generally, police officials say, it takes from two to three weeks to get back a positive identification if the fingerprints must travel all the way to the FBI headquarters.

The satellite experiment is part of an effort financed by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), the Justice Dept. arm that dispenses federal aid to local crime fighters.

It began last August when the LEAA announced a $360,000 grant to the California crime technological research foundation in Sacramento.

The foundation turned the project over to Public Systems (PS) of Sunnyvale, Calif., where the technical aspects of the system were worked out.

The testing to begin Monday will use a satellite "borrowed" from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

PS's project coordinator in Sacramento, Ronald F. Bykowski, said the forthcoming tests would seek to determine the reliability of the equipment.

Plane Crash Kills Two

Raleigh, N.C. (UPI) — A small plane tangled in the landing gear of a descending Eastern Airlines Jet Saturday, then fell away from the DC-9 and crashed in flames, killing the two occupants.

The Eastern jetliner was dented by the collision, but landed safely after circling the Raleigh-Durham Airport for about an hour to check its landing gear.

The four passenger Cessna super Skywagon involved crashed in flames near an airport runway, killing its two passengers. Their identities were withheld until relatives could be notified.

Tom Dewar, crew chief of the airport tower, said the Eastern pilot radioed that he thought he had hit something on his approach about two miles away and that he would fly over the airport at low altitude so the tower could take a look.

"We picked up the binoculars and we observed a small airplane hanging in the undercarriage of the DC-9," said Dewar.

"Just about over the middle of the airport the private plane separated from the DC-9, fell and crashed and burned."

Dewar said the Eastern jet then went through a lengthy procedure check of its landing gear and then landed safely.

The Eastern flight 898 from Miami was descending for a landing at the airport when the collision occurred.

Henry Boyd, airport manager said after the collision the two planes stayed in contact for about 4,000 feet to a mile before the small private craft fell away and crashed in flames near a runway.

Robert Heironimus meditates in front of a statue of Buddha in a small, secret shrine on the grounds of AUM in Baltimore.

Aquarian University Striving For Maryland Accreditation

Baltimore (AP)—The Aquarian University of Maryland — (AUM)—may be the first state-accredited school of esoteric arts and sciences in the country.

Robert Hieronimus, one of the school's founders, sees the project as part of an educational guerrilla struggle to gain acceptance for occult studies as a legitimate academic endeavor. In the meantime, he's willing to make some concessions to the Establishment.

"We can't call it the Aquarian University of Maryland," he said, citing official objections to the use of the term "university." Instead, the name is being changed to the initials AUM, a Hindu chant which means "One with God."

"We want it (accreditation) to infiltrate the other system," said Hieronimus, 27, a Baltimore artist known for splashing a profusion of occult symbols over walls, cars and human bodies.

He said the commune which provides AUM's facilities also opened a nursery in October, the second phase of "a cradle-to-grave educational system" ranging from yoga to Jung.

"They (the state Department of Education) think accreditation is possible by February," Hieronimus said.

Astrology Used

"I don't quite believe that, but with the astrological chart we've chosen, it's quite a possibility."

The school was incorporated at 4:59 p.m., Jan. 31, 1971, because astrologer Bradley Parker of Annapolis, Md., said the positions of the stars and planets at that time describe "public education along astrological and spiritual lines."

Dr. H. David Reese, an accreditation official in the Maryland Department of Education, said if AUM is "merely an institution which is going to have classes" without granting a certificate or degree, "that (state approval) could happen anytime." Reese said it would be up to other colleges and universities whether they would accept courses taken at AUM for credit under such an arrangement.

"Yoga and astrology are the two biggest courses," Hieronimus said, while indicating that spiritual meditation is expected of the more serious students.

"We're trying to teach man to look within to find answers," he said. "We live what we believe, and by raising our own consciousness we help others raise theirs," said the artist, one of about 12 members of the commune Savitria.

The three-year-old spiritual group rents a 3½-acre estate in a pleasant, wooded section of Baltimore near Pimlico Race Track and less than 15 minutes from the downtown area. Relations with neighbors and local officials are good, according to Hieronimus, who recently designed a campaign poster showing Aquarius, the water-bearer, pouring from his jug the name of William Donald Schaefer, a Democrat recently elected mayor of Baltimore.

Neighbors Suspicious
"At first the neighbors thought we were hippies," said Hieronimus, who sports a mustache which droops a full inch below his chin and hair halfway down his back.

"They don't understand exactly what we're doing, but they're willing to help. We're more socially conservative than they are, and that's what they didn't understand," he said.

Savitria, which means "house of the sun" in Sanskrit, occupies a refurbished, 60-year-old mansion with 27 rooms and provides a converted carriage house for AUM. Hieronimus, his wife Vicky and their infant son Plato live on the top floor. The bottom is given to the school coordinator's office and classrooms.

A large meditation room, which Hieronimus said would accommodate 85 persons, consists of a circle of three stuffed couches and several purple school desks and a variety of cushions forming a smaller circle inside.

The well-kept grounds include several fruit trees, a goldfish pond and a fenced-in playground with multicolored swings and a jungle gym for the nursery school.

Down a small path in some underbrush lies a small meditation shrine. A carved figure stands at either side of the entrance. In the clearing, a smiling Buddha on a pedestal faces a chair with the legs removed.

Courses range from numerology, tarot, Kaballah, extrasensory perception and the "lost continents" of Atlantis and Lemuria to more conventionally accepted courses such as Jungian psychology, Eastern religions and 19th century existentialism.

Natural Foods Course

A course last spring combined meditation and yoga exercises with practical cooking lessons for natural foods. The title? "Natural Ways to Health: Physical and Superphysical."

Esoteric studies were included in the Baltimore Free University in early 1970, but a split between spiritual and activist elements led to separate Aquarian University classes the following summer with an enrollment of about 200 and fees of $3 for registration and $2 per course.

Last fall, enrollment was up to 250 with a $5 registration fee and $5 per course. After the school was incorporated, spring enrollment jumped to 350 — "far beyond our capacity to do anything," Hieronimus says — with a flat $10 course fee.

This fall enrollment is restricted to the same level, with a $20 course fee and $5 building fund contributions.

Both Savitria and AUM have strict rules against drugs, exempting only moderate use of alcohol and tobacco. Aside from education, Hieronimus says, "our major value has been getting people off drugs."

Members of the commune range from about 18 to 36 years of age. They contribute to the group their earnings as psychiatric aides, draftsmen, carpenters, electricians, nurses and teachers.

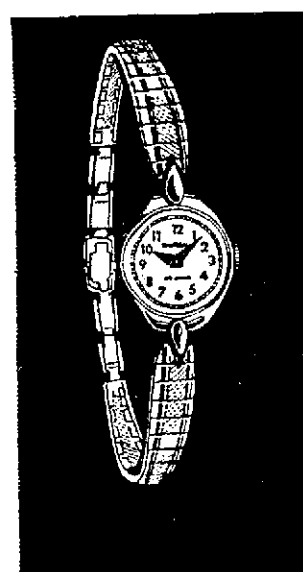

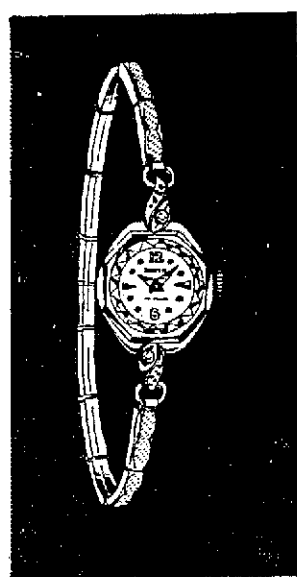

Thus they are firmly rooted in the world around them but choose to see it differently.

Young VIPs Help Demos

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Having young David Eisenhower in the family is an undeniable asset to President Nixon's reelection campaign, but some of the leading Democratic presidential hopefuls also have some VIP young people in their campaign organizations to help lure the youth vote.

Nate Wouk, son of novelist Herman Wouk, worked in the Washington campaign headquarters for Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington for several months before returning to school at Princeton.

Bud (Lawton III) Chiles, son of Sen. Lawton Chiles Jr., D-Fla., went to Tampa last week to work for Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine. Young Chiles has spent several months in Washington in the Muskie office and plans to enter Duke University next year.

Jamie Galbraith, son of economist John Kenneth Galbraith, is "campus coordinator" at Harvard for Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota. Other McGovern campus workers include Kevin Eagleton, brother of Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., at Claremont College in California, and Diana Robbie, whose father owns the Miami Dolphins football team, at Carleton College in Minnesota.

The McGovern Washington headquarters includes Andrew Schlesinger, son of close Kennedy associate Arthur Schlesinger.

Nixon Looks Like Winner In Economic Skirmishing

Washington (AP) — The skirmishing between President Nixon and the Democratic Congress over legislation for his new economic policy is about over. There was no unconditional surrender, but Nixon looks like the winner.

The big Democratic retreat was on a tax-cut bill Nixon said he would veto unless it were stripped of extra tax reductions and a plan for financing presidential campaigns with public funds.

Senate-House conferees knocked out some $12 billion of tax cuts the Senate had added — and which didn't have much chance in the House anyway. And they also whittled the campaign financing plan to such an extent that the White House strongly implied Nixon would sign the bill.

The dollar checkoff from income tax for presidential campaigns would be postponed beyond the 1972 election, under the conference version. Even after that the actual disbursement of funds would be subject to further legislation and possible veto.

It was a blow for deficit-plagued Democratic party chiefs desperate for help in financing next year's campaign.

Nevertheless, the House is expected to pass the measure, with its three-year, $15.8-billion tax cuts, this week and the Senate soon thereafter.

On another front, opponents of extension of presidential control powers, until April 30, 1973, were unable to advance and finally gave ground.

The Senate passed a bill with the extension and most of the accompanying arrangements Nixon sought. The House banking Committee, after some fierce internal scraps, approved a similar one.

Neither is wholly to Nixon's taste. Both would call for payment of most previously contracted pay increases frozen during Phase I. Nixon wanted the issue left to the Pay Board.

Moreover, the Senate measure explicitly and the House bill by possible interpretation would overrule Nixon's six-month postponement of a multibillion-dollar pay raise for civilian and military government employees, due Jan. 1.

But neither the differences between the two bills nor the divergences from Nixon's recommendations appear fatal.

The outlook accordingly is that Congress will send the President an acceptable package of economic legislation and still be able to adjourn in one or two weeks.

There was no equally clear light on the murky terrain of international monetary arrangements and trade.

But when Treasury Secretary John B. Connally returned Thursday from talks in Rome earlier assessments of deadlock had given away to talk — unconfirmed — of a breakthrough.

The stock market took heart and rebounded strongly out of a slump.

The United States wants its major trading partners to revalue their currencies upward in dollar terms and drop discriminations against U.S. exports.

They want the United States to accept some formal devaluation of the dollar in terms of gold and to drop the 10% import surcharge.

The gold question appeared to be the sticking point and the unofficial reports that the United States might consider devaluation sparked optimism that real progress might be made when the talks resume in Washington Dec. 17.

Meanwhile, the dollar dropped in European money markets on speculation that it would be revalued.

Senate Panel: 25 Million May Die in Pakistan

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Washington — The staff of the Senate refugee subcommittee estimated Saturday that war and famine in East Pakistan may cost as many as 25 million lives, which Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., termed "the greatest human disaster of modern times."

In an interview, Kennedy charged the United States has been "unconscionably silent" in "refusing to condemn the repression that the Pakistani army is perpetrating in East Bengal."

Chairman of the refugee subcommittee, Kennedy said he has received information West Pakistani atrocities in East Bengal continued unabated after the initial bloodbath of March 25.

Kennedy's staff said estimates are that 200,000 persons were killed initially when the West Pakistani military government of President Mohammad Yahya Khan moved to suppress the newly elected Bengali government.

Since then, according to staff estimates, the toll in East Pakistan has risen to at least 1 million, and information from the former head of the Pakistani mission in Geneva, who defected, is that 1.5 million have died.

In addition, 10 million persons fled East Pakistan into India and now occupy refugee camps where children alone are dying at the rate of 4,300 a day from malnutrition and other causes. Still another 10 million persons are homeless within East Pakistan, according to the staff.

The burden of 10 million refugees produced by West Pakistan's "policy of genocide," according to Kennedy, has led India to the brink of all-out war with Yahya Khan's regime.

So far, fighting between India and Pakistan has produced relatively few deaths, according to Kennedy's staff.

However, a protracted war would perpetuate the "total disruption" of East Pakistan's transportation system, Kennedy said, leading to massive famine.

Kennedy's staff estimates, based on reports from the U.N. and private agencies, that a full-scale famine in East Bengal might take 10 million to 20 million lives. In 1943, wartime disruption of food supplies produced a famine that killed 5 million in East Pakistan.

Heavily Implicated Kennedy finds the United States heavily implicated in the potential tragedy, particularly because the United States continued until last month to ship military supplies to Yahya Khan.

Kennedy said, "United States support of Pakistan during the crucial period materially contributed to the lack of (international) support for India's attempt to cope with 11 million refugees. So, the situation has deteriorated."

He charged, "the bitter irony is that here we've talked so long about 'self-determination' in Vietnam and the rest of Southeast Asia, while in Pakistan we are supporting a regime attempting to suppress and repress the process of self-determination."

Kennedy said the "inevitable outcome" in Pakistan is victory by the East Pakistanis, "either through a political settlement or through bloodshed."

If there is no political settlement, Kennedy and his staff foresee not only millions of deaths by famine and war, but an eventual reverse bloodbath, perpetrated by victorious East Pakistanis against their West Pakistani oppressors.

Air, Sea Blockade Put On East, West Pakistan

New Delhi (UPI) — India imposed a maritime and air blockade on both East and West Pakistan Saturday designed to cut communications between them and warned that Indian ships would stop and search even neutral vessels suspected of violating it.

With fighting in progress on all borders, the Indian parliament also approved a "defense of India" bill giving legal sanction to the emergency powers assumed by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government on Friday under presidential decree to carry out the undeclared war.

Defense Minister Jagjivan Ram announced the blockade of Pakistan in a report to parliament.

"The western and eastern fleets of the Indian Navy are now out on their mission to seek and destroy enemy warships and to cut the maritime lines of communication between West Pakistan and Bangla Desh (the name Bengali rebels give to East Pakistan) and to deny West Pakistani forces of occupation support from the sea," Ram said.

Ram announced that an Indian destroyer Saturday captured a Pakistani merchant ship, the S.S. Pansni, in the Arabian Sea and put a prize crew aboard.

A defense ministry spokesman said later that India's "contraband control" became effective at 2 p.m. and that it "empowers ships of our navy to stop and search a ship of any neutral country on the high seas."

Neutral ships found to be carrying "contraband" may be ordered to the nearest Indian port, he said.

"The air force has received similar orders in the air," Defense Secretary K. B. Lal said.

North Viets Trenching To Get at Cambodians

Phnom Penh, Cambodia (AP) — North Vietnamese troops are creeping closer to Cambodian fortified positions on the northeast front in covered trenches — similar to the tactics they used 17 years ago to defeat the French at Dien Bien Phu.

The Cambodian high command reported battles at two points northeast of Phnom Penh where the Cambodian front along a 30-mile stretch of Highway 6 collapsed last week.

One Cambodian was killed and 10 wounded in fighting outside Taing Kauk, a town 47 miles northeast of the capital. Now the northernmost point of the front still in direct touch with the rest of government-held Cambodia, the high command reported.

Another six soldiers were wounded, an official spokesman said, at the village of Santuk, 25 miles north of Taing Kauk, which is the southernmost government position in a narrow enclave.

Many of the troops engaged in the northeast operation retreated into this enclave last week.

The spokesman reported at least 200 recoilless rifle shells slammed into Santuk. Military sources added that to the north of the enclave, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces pinched off the village of Balang, only about two miles from the provincial capital of Kompong Thom, 80 miles northeast of Phnom Penh.

Reporters returning from Taing Kauk said Cambodia casualties there were suffered in an intensive mortar duel Saturday as the enemy played what one newsman described as a cat-and-mouse game with the town's defenders.

April, November Gallup Polls Compared

Jackson, Lindsay, McGovern Becoming Known to the Public

Princeton, N.J. — Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, Mayor John Lindsay of New York and Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota are making strides in surmounting the first hurdle faced by presidential hopefuls — getting known to the electorate.

The awareness scores registered by these three men are, in fact, not now far behind those registered by the three Democratic presidential possibilities who are not only widely known, but who also have consistently been the top choices of Democratic voters for the nomination — Sens. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Edmund Muskie of Maine and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

To measure the progress that leading Democratic presidential hopefuls are making in becoming better known to the nation's voters, a just-completed survey was compared with one taken in April. In each survey, representative samples of the electorate were asked to indicate which of the men on a list of 7 leading possibilities they have heard something about.

Sen. Jackson's gains in terms of getting known have been particularly dramatic. In April, 29% of all adults interviewed said they had heard something about him; today the figure is 52% — a gain of 23 points. Jackson's gains have come about equally in the East, South, Midwest and Far West.

Sen. McGovern has also made sharp gains in terms of public awareness, with his score increasing from 68 to 77%. McGovern's gains, like Jackson's, are not centered in a particular region of the country.

Lindsay has increased his score from 77% in April to 84% today. His most striking gains have come in the South and Midwest.

The table below shows the comparison in awareness scores, with the percentage point gain for each man tested:

Awareness Scores— April and Today
	Latest April	April	Today	Point Gain
	%	%	%	%
Kennedy	95	94	94	1
Humphrey	94	94	94	—
Muskie	89	85	85	4
Lindsay	84	77	84	7
McCarthy	82	78	78	4
McGovern	77	68	77	9
Jackson	52	29	52	23

A total of 1,411 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed in person to obtain the results of the latest survey, which was conducted in more than 280 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 19-22. A total of 1,599 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed in person in the earlier survey, April 23-26. The following question was asked in both surveys:

Will you please look over this list of persons who have been discussed as possible presidential candidates and tell me which of these men, if any, you have heard something about?

Nixon Getting Lots of Volunteers to Go to China

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — A lot of disappointed senators, House members, reporters, publishers, industrialists and government bureaucrats will be left behind when President Nixon takes off next February for China.

Several thousand persons already have volunteered to join the President's traveling party, including, says presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, "two regiments of newsmen."

A number of senators have been angling for an invitation. In visits to the White House, some have dropped broad hints about their expertise in Asian affairs and their previously well-disguised interest in Chinese politics.

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, one of the more straightforward pursuers of a place in the President's official party, is a recognized authority on ancient Chinese art, and he thinks someone should be included who can steer the visiting American group away from imitation Chinese art, which, he says, awaits unsuspecting tourists in the Peking and Shanghai markets.

Elsewhere in the government, middle and upper level bureaucrats are searching their resumes for past experience that they can relate to modern China. State Dept. employees with Asian experience are reminding their superiors of their availability. And it is said that even some Cabinet members besides Secretary of State William Rogers, who is going, have made overtures to be counted in.

Trade-minded businessmen — a caravan of American Marco Polos — are sounding out the White House on their chances of getting aboard. If expanded trade is one of the President's objectives, it is argued, the inclusion of a few businessmen on the manifest could be helpful.

None of this fits into Nixon's plans, as they were described by Kissinger on Tuesday.

"The official party," said Kissinger, "will be very small and confined to those officials who have direct operational responsibilities. So far no member of Congress has been invited. I do not expect that any members of Congress will be invited, but of course the President is always free to change his mind."

As for press coverage, that too will be limited, said Kissinger.

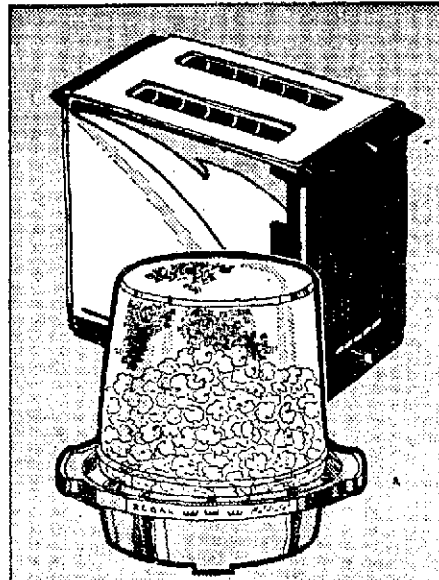

"... Something like two regiments of newsmen have asked to go along," he noted, "So we have presented the requests to the Chinese, and after the dimensions of the intrusion that may befall them had sunk in on them, the Chinese agreed to do the maximum possible within the extent of their technical capabilities and of their physical capabilities."

Is it lawful for a person to use binoculars while standing in his front yard trying to look into the bedroom window of a newlywed couple across the street? This man has five kids, by the way.

—Fenced, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Best bet is to invest in some window blinds and donate them to the newlyweds.

The problem says the city legal department, would be in proving the individual with the five kids is actually looking into the other house with the binoculars and not at something else more interesting down the street.

City Ordinance 9.52.220 states: "It shall be unlawful for anyone to loiter or trespass upon the property of another without the consent of the owner or tenant thereof; provided that window peeking in the windows of a private dwelling house, apartment or residence of another after sunset shall be prima facie evidence of trespass." The latter part of the law could be interpreted to mean the man with the binoculars is technically trespassing even though he is on his own land.

Tell us how the Lincoln Electric System (LES) can come up with an 11% increase during the price and wage freeze?

—S.G.S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: As a regulated industry, the Electric power system does not fall within the jurisdiction of the price freeze, according to LES district manager James Ekstrand.

And remember this is an 11% increase in the wholesale purchase price from the Nebraska Public Power Dist. (NPPD), supplier of Lincoln's power. This does not automatically mean an 11% rate increase. It has not been determined what the increase will mean in terms of higher bills to home users.

The rate hike must be submitted to the Federal Price Commission for approval before it is put into effect, however. Approval is expected since there has not been a rate hike in Lincoln for 20 years. The 11% figure is really insignificant over that long a period, Ekstrand said in pointing out rates actually went down about two years ago.

Also, businesses subject to Phase 2 controls, according to the Internal Revenue Service office, may increase their prices, but not their profits. It is the profit margin that is frozen and firms are advised prices may be hiked as long as profit margins are not increased over what they were during a base period — the average of any two of the last three fiscal years ending Aug. 15, 1971.

I received word the other day that my telephone number was to be changed. Lots of us in the 423 prefix area had to start memorizing new numbers. Why?—R.A., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Apparently, it was either memorize the new number or tattoo it on your wrist.

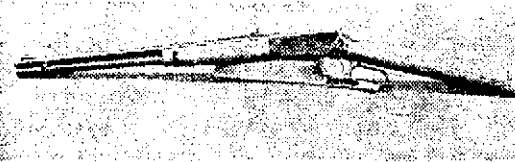

According to information given out by the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. last September, in order to maintain proper arrangement of the central office equipment, the company routinely makes changes in telephone numbers to coincide with issuance of new directories.

Changes are made only when it is absolutely necessary, the LT&T spokesman says. In fact, better service should be realized by the subscriber through more modern switching equipment, he said.

Someone told me that giving a BB gun to a youngster is against the law. True?

—J.F., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: True, according to the city legal department's interpretation of City Ordinance 9.28060, which states that a minor can't be given a toy gun out of which "any leaden or other dangerous missiles" may be discharged.

This apparently includes air guns as well as BB guns.

The 1936 ordinance may need updating, says an assistant city attorney. Perhaps an enterprising City Council member would like to tackle this change in city law.

Ebers: Better Orthopedic Service Coming

By BESS JENKINS

Any program producing enthusiasm in a pediatrician's voice over the telephone at 7 p.m. after a long day's work with well babies and sick children and their worried parents must merit watching.

And that's just what Dr. Dale Ebers of Lincoln, the pediatrician-medical director for State Crippled Children's Services (SCCS) hopes Nebraskans will be doing the next year as the new decentralized program without an Orthopedic Hospital base develops.

Dr. Ebers says he has been in Washington recently meeting with his counterparts from other states and "I found out what a really good service we have in Nebraska. Give us a year and I believe we will show that the reorganization brought about by the legislative closedown of Orthopedic created an opportunity to provide even better services to our young people."

The enthusiasm of Dr. Ebers and SCCS staff members like Medical Program Coordinator John Charles is based on an expanded traveling clinic schedule which apparently will take the medical-social welfare teams out to where the children needing these skills live.

Screening Service

As explained, any of the clinics throughout the state at any time can be used as a screening or triage service to determine if any Nebraska child, regardless of financial ability of the family, is in need of some care. This is encouraged by federal funding, though follow-through treatment would require eligibility before SCCS could assume the cost.

Like Charles, the Lincoln pediatrician says this is a period of transition for the program, demonstrated in the small census currently of orthopedic patients. It also happens to be a traditional slow period with the holidays just several weeks away.

For example, there were only five young patients left in Orthopedic Hospital when it closed down Oct. 29 who still needed some form of hospitalization. All the others were able to return home.

So the five, none from Lincoln, were sent to the University of Nebraska Medical Center's Hattie B. Monroe Home in the Children's Rehabilitation Institute (CRI) on the Omaha campus.

Daily care at Hattie B. only costs $15 or $25 per day, depending upon the level needed individually, compared to the $78 per day medical center hospital rate or the $105 which it will cost in 1972.

Referred to Omaha

Charles reports another 10 orthopedic patients needing surgery, followed by extended convalescent care in a Hattie B. setting, have been referred to Omaha to date. He said none were from the Lincoln or western Nebraska area.

He and Dr. Ebers said each child needing hospitalization for surgery or other problems covered in the SCCS program will be reviewed personally by the latter for proper referrals.

The key apparently will be the type and length of services needed after surgery and immediate care.

The Medical Center's CRI seems to be the only place in the state's hospital complexes today with the lower-cost Hattie B. type of convalescent setting, plus all the other necessary therapy services and school. Some children, Dr. Ebers said, may be able to spend this period in their homes.

"There are two major factors to consider here at all times," Dr. Ebers continued, "the very best care for the patient and the protection of the taxpayer's money financing the services so it will serve as many children as possible."

Orthopedic Surgeons

With orthopedic patients still making up the No. 1 caseload, SCCS has a good list of certified orthopedic surgeons on whom to call when a child needing help is called to their attention, says Charles.

For example: Scottsbluff—Drs. Calvin Oba and Paul Phillips; North Platte, Dr. Bruce Clawson; Kearney, Dr. Kenneth Ellis; Grand Island, Dr. Jackson Bence; Hastings, Dr. John Yost; Lincoln, Drs. Howard Mitchell, William Gondring, Frank Stone, Bruce Miller, James Styner and Fred Webster, and Omaha, the NU Orthopedic Dept., headed by Dr. Thomas Hood, and Dr. Stanley Bock, Children's orthopedist, and Dr. Dwight Burney.

Nebraska Elks, still very much in the SCCS picture as volunteers, especially in setting up outstate community clinics, may even be busier in the program's accelerated clinic program schedule ahead.

Cerebral palsy, with its multi-handicaps affecting more children than might have been served previously, will no longer be confined to clinics at Lincoln, Omaha and the three outstate cities of Norfolk, Broken Bow and Ogallala.

Others are being added during the next 12 months in this manner: January, Scottsbluff; February, Kearney; April, Broken Bow and Sidney; June, Hastings; July, Chadron, Columbus and Ogallala; August, Ord; September, McCook; October, Alliance; November, Grand Island, and December, Ainsworth and North Platte.

Dr. Howard Mitchell will continue to provide the cerebral palsy services in Lincoln and NU Medical Center will continue monthly clinics.

Team Approach

However, pediatrician Jack Trembath of CRI will coordinate all cerebral palsy clinics where those needing service will receive the aid of a team approach. On the team will be the pediatrician, orthopedic surgeon, psychologist, physical therapist and medical program coordinator — in this case, John Charles.

The pediatric cardiology clinic services offered four times weekly at NU Medical Center also will be on the road. The schedule looks like this: January, Norfolk and Scottsbluff; February, Kearney; May, North Platte; June, Hastings and Norfolk; August, Scottsbluff; September, McCook; November, Grand Island, and December, North Platte.

What are the other services? Eye surgery, provided in Lincoln and Omaha; cystic fibrosis services at the NU Medical Center, under Dr. Gordon Gibbs; semi-annual prosthesis clinics in both Lincoln and Omaha; quarterly rheumatoid arthritis clinics in Lincoln, again by a team approach provided by Dr. Bruce Miller, orthopedist; Dr. Art Weaver, rheumatologist; Dr. Charles Erickson, pediatrician, and Dr. Marshall Hiskey, psychologist, and monthly myelodysplasia (spine and brain defects) clinics at both Children's Hospital and NU Medical Center, Omaha.

The cleft palate services will continue in both Lincoln and Omaha, again with a team approach. Dr. William LeWorthy is the Lincoln plastic surgeon and Dr. Albert Black, in Omaha, plus the important dental specialists and psychologist needed to complete these two teams.

Malcolm Vote Set on Liquor by Drink

By GINGER RICE

The little town of Malcolm, population 132, in rural Lancaster County will decide Tuesday whether or not to join the ranks of Nebraska's 270 towns and villages that permit liquor by the drink.

In Lancaster County, only two towns — besides the city of Lincoln — permit the serving of liquor by the drink. They are Hallam, population 280, and Raymond, 187. But there are nine bottle clubs in the county outside incorporated town limits, plus one each in the incorporated towns of Denton, population 151, and Bennet, 489, where members may be served mixed drinks on the premises.

Between Lincoln, the bottle clubs and the Class C (liquor by the drink) status of Garland and Valparaiso — just a short distance away in Seward and Saunders counties, respectively — some Malcolm residents apparently feel the village ought to "get with it."

The special Tuesday election issue will appear on the ballot as the result of a petition carrying more than 20 signatures — well in excess of the required 20% of the voters in the last primary election (about 80) — Malcolm Village Clerk Dean Pillard said.

Like 12 other Lancaster County towns where on- and off-sale beer is permitted, Malcolm is officially considered a "wet" town. In fact, there are only three incorporated towns in the county — Firth, population 328; Panama, 153; and Waverly, 1,152 — that are genuinely "dry."

Another six unincorporated towns — Agnew, Prairie Home, Walton, Holland, Rokeby and Cheney — are also without taverns.

None 5 Years Ago

Five years ago, Lancaster County had no Class C licenses, but it did have 19 bottle clubs, 15 of them in Lincoln. Then, in 1966, Lincoln voters approved liquor by the drink, 26,731 to 21,442. Some 20 years earlier, Lincolnites turned down the proposal, 18,574 to 9,469.

City Clerk Harold Springer recalls that the issue was not a particularly heated one but noted that it showed a clean-cut split between the liquor interests on the one hand and church groups on the other.

Sentiment depended on who you talked to, Springer recalled, with persons on one side strongly in favor of the issue and those on the other strongly opposed. But the general public, the individual citizen, as he looks back on it, didn't seem to be terribly emotional about the matter.

The City Council, however, soon got a jolt: with passage of liquor by the drink, members began having some mighty long Council sessions as prospective licensees appeared before them seeking approval.

Today there are 133 liquor licenses in Lincoln — the maximum number recommended by the City Council to the State Liquor Control Commission, which issues the licenses.

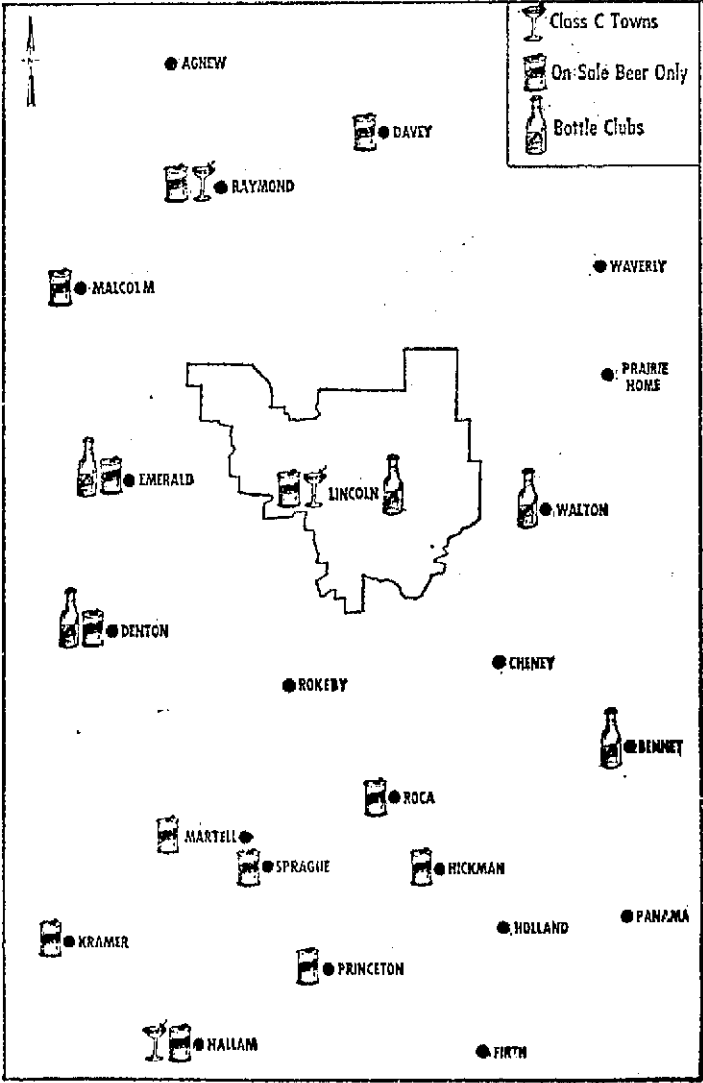

Of these, according to Springer's records, 78 are Class C establishments. Of the remainder, 48 have off-sale liquor, two have off-sale beer, one has on- and off-sale beer and four have on-sale beer only.

What happens when liquor by the drink is authorized, Springer explained, is that on- and off-sale beer and, to a lesser extent, package stores seek to upgrade their facilities to include liquor by the drink along with service they already offer.

Greater Momentum in 1960s

The liquor-by-the-drink issue gained its greatest momentum in the decade just ended and Lincoln passed it about midway in that period. In 1960, 121 of Nebraska's 537 towns allowed it.

Emergency Snow Route Signs Going Up

COLOR

Some 650 of these red, blue and white emergency snow route signs are going up on many of Lincoln's major arterials this week, meaning that these routes will be kept open during snow emergencies.

Parking will also be prohibited during snow emergencies on these routes, as well as all other arterials and bus routes.

During Phase IV of the emergency, residential parking will be restricted to only one side of the street. Such restrictions will be announced during the emergency.

The new system will not be operational until Jan. 1.

Nebraska Theatre may close its doors May 4 to make way for multi-movie house complex and high rise apartment units.

Other Movie House Developments Rumored Cooper Cutting Stuart Theatre Ties?

By BESS JENKINS

No outright denials, some friendly "no comments now" and several confirmations from involved individuals Saturday night supported reports from reliable sources that Cooper Theatre Enterprises will end its operation of the Stuart Theatre April 30, 1972.

In the big picture apparently are these accompanying developments:

—A new tenant for the 1,850-seat Stuart Theatre in the downtown Stuart Building is being sought, with the most often mentioned being the Lincoln-based Dubinsky Brothers Theatres.

—Closing of the Nebraska Theatre at 12th and P Sts. by Cooper on May 4 so that it and the building adjoining it on the west, also owned by Cooper, can be razed.

—Completion of a triplex or fourplex theater by next fall by Cooper on the Nebraska Theatre site on the ground floor of at least a four-story building or one possibly as high as 10 to 12 stories, plus underground parking.

Apparently, the Cooper headquarters office would remain in the Stuart Building until the multi-movie-house complex on the Nebraska Theatre site is completed, when it would occupy floors 2 through 4.

The remainder, if built to 10- or 12-story height, would be high-rise apartment units. Underground parking would be for building tenants, not theater patrons.

No Details Given

E. N. Thompson, president of

Cooper Theater Enterprises and the Cooper Foundation, which benefits from the corporation's operations, said Saturday night: "I can't give you any of the information now."

Thompson announced in September that Cooper planned to build a twin or triplex theater in downtown Lincoln and a similar facility in some undeveloped suburban setting. Nothing was said about terminating the Stuart Theatre operation, however.

James Stuart of Stuart Enterprises, which owns the downtown Stuart office and theater building, confirmed Saturday night that lease negotiations are under way, but he did not detail them and said it could be another 10 days before anything is formalized.

Stuart said the Cooper lease on the theater expires Dec. 31, but Thompson later commented that this was not correct. Thompson said there would be an announcement later but "there is nothing further to say about it at this time."

Asked to confirm or deny a report that he has been offered a lease on the Stuart Theatre, President Irwin Dubinsky of the family theater circuit bearing his name said: "No comment. I do know they are looking for a new tenant."

Only 2 in Lincoln

Although the only Dubinsky operations in Lincoln are the Starview and West O Drive Ins. locally based Dubinsky Brothers has some 30 other conventional movie houses and drive-ins in Iowa, North Dakota, Missouri and Illinois and a single theater, the Astro, in downtown Omaha.

Dubinsky, a veteran in the entertainment field, is president of the Nebraska membership in the National Association of Theatre Owners.

Sources indicate that Larry Starsmore of Colorado Springs, president of Nebraska Theatres Corp. (Cinema 1 and 2, Varsity and State), and Russell Brehm, president of the Douglas Theaters Corp. (84th and O Drive-In), are not interested in considering the Stuart operation.

Starsmore has numerous movie houses in Colorado under the Westland Theatres Corp.

Brehm said Saturday that he and his partner, Nebraska U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, are two involved in development of a 26-acre shopping center and four-plex theater in West Omaha to decide on the eventual use of their recently acquired Lincoln property. This is the former YMCA building site on the northeast corner of 13th and P Sts., directly across the street from the Stuart building, where Brehm's and Dubinsky's offices are located.

Douglas Theatres has numerous drive-ins in Omaha, plus Cinema I and II in West Omaha.

Rumors False

Stuart says no, there is nothing to past occasional rumors that his firm would consider remodeling the expansive Stuart Theatre into several smaller movie units.

If the reported Cooper development timetable is followed through, it would mean the three-state organization's Lincoln movie operations would be reduced to one local theater — the Cooper/Lincoln on East O St. — until fall 1972.

The Capital City gained two new movie outlets last September when Nebraska Theatres Corp. opened Cinema

1 and 2 on the northwest corner of 12th and P Sts., the former Elks Club site.

Starsmore and his city manager, Walt Jancke, are still operating the Varsity on the southwest corner of 13th and P Sts. and can continue this until Dec. 1, 1973, according to an agreement with NBC Co., new owners of the Varsity Theatre Building.

While that property was acquired for future expansion of the National Bank of Commerce complex, Board Chairman Glenn Yaussi said Saturday night no project plans or definite timetable are in sight yet.

Jancke says there is no date set as of now for phasing out the Varsity operation. Nebraska Theatres Corp. also operates the State Theatre at 1415 O. A comparative newcomer nearby is the Embassy at 1730 O. Havelock is the location for the long-established suburban Joyo Theatre.

Also promised but not yet delivered to Lincoln moviegoers is at least one, if not more, of the "mini theaters" under the nationally franchised Jerry Lewis program. Lincoln attorney-in-vestor David Tews holds the Lewis franchise for most of Nebraska, including Lincoln.

9-Car Pileup Halts Traffic; Roads Icy

A nine-car pileup on the downtown entrance ramp to Interstate 180 closed off traffic on the outbound lane of the highway for over an hour shortly after midnight Sunday.

Police said there were minor injuries, but would not specify how many.

A witness reported a car swerved to avoid another car that was stopped in the middle of the highway. The moving car missed, but bounced against the highway's guard rail and the pileup ensued.

Icy road conditions plus dense fog limiting visibility to near zero made driving treacherous at the time of the accident.

Temperatures were expected to remain in the low or mid 20s today, making all roads in the Lincoln area ice covered.

Snow cover measured two inches.

The Traffic Division of the Lincoln Police Dept. reported two other late evening accidents. Two persons suffered minor injuries following a head-on collision at 17th and Holdrege.

A three car property damage accident also was reported at 14th and K Sts.

By 1965, that number had increased to 162. Early this year, it was up to 270, and current Liquor Control Commission records show 289 towns and villages permit it.

Raymond was the trailblazer in Lancaster County. It was first to approve liquor by the drink, way back in 1937, just for years after Prohibition ended and two years after the Liquor Control Commission was created to monitor state consumption. The change came only after what former Town Clerk Everett Nissen recalls as "quite a hassle" and a "close vote."

Copple Zone Bid Heads Long Council Agenda

While last Monday's City Council meeting was probably one of the shorter on record, this Monday's Council meeting expected to be the opposite.

Sure to cause the lengthy meeting are several items delayed from last week because three of the Councilmen were in Hawaii.

A public hearing will be held and final action will be taken on the proposal of S. E. Copple, asking for a change of zone to develop a 60-acre tract between his present Capitol Beach project and West S St.

Another important item up for hearing will be the new comprehensive snow emergency legislation, which will designate various arterials as snow emergency routes, require either chains or snow tires during emergencies, and provide penalties for violations.

A report from the City-County Planning Commission concerning the disposition of surplus city property—mainly the libraries and fire stations—is also expected to be discussed.

Poinsettias Not Toxic Say Researchers

The poinsettia has long been veiled in "an aura of folklore and ignorance" and has gained a reputation as a highly toxic and deadly plant, according to a report issued by Ohio State University.

But, a recent study at that university caused John Walker, executive vice president, Society of American Florists, to shout: "There's good news for all industry men who grow and sell poinsettias."

Robert P. Stone and W. J. Collins at OSU fed 160 rats varying doses of homogenates made from the leaves, bracts or flowers of the poinsettia and came up with zero mortality. As they summarized:

"This study points out that the rat, when given extraordinarily high doses of various portions of the poinsettia, shows no mortality, no symptoms of toxicity nor any changes in dietary intake or general behavior pattern."

Raymond Was Lancaster Trailblazer in Liquor by the Drink

By 1965, that number had increased to 162. Early this year, it was up to 270, and current Liquor Control Commission records show 289 towns and villages permit it.

Raymond was the trailblazer in Lancaster County. It was first to approve liquor by the drink, way back in 1937, just for years after Prohibition ended and two years after the Liquor Control Commission was created to monitor state consumption. The change came only after what former Town Clerk Everett Nissen recalls as "quite a hassle" and a "close vote."

A Class C establishment opened shortly thereafter but "went broke" not long after that, Nissen recalls.

So, although its residents had officially sanctioned liquor by the drink, Raymond, like the rest of the county, went for some 20 years without a Class C establishment. When a new application for such licensing was submitted early in the 1960s, Nissen said, he had to do some digging because people didn't remember that the law was on the books.

At Hallam, the issue was approved just two and a half years ago — in May 1969 — when the voters turned out 44-20, according to Clerk Blanche Geistlinger, to endorse liquor by the drink. It was not, she recalls, a particularly heated issue.

Prospects Look Good

Prospects for passage of the liquor issue in Malcolm look good, Mrs. Charles Rohe feels. She is vice president of D&C Inc. and, with her husband, operates the Branched Oak Inn there. If it is approved, she said, they will seek a Class C license for the inn, which is now the only establishment in Malcolm serving beer and selling package liquor.

The Branched Oak Inn opened May 1, she said, on the site where the town's lone tavern had stood before it burned to the ground in September 1970. From then until January, when the Rohe opened a bar in the basement of the grocery store, the town had no liquor outlets. Then, on May 1, the inn opened at its present location.

Pillard declined Saturday to predict the election's outcome. He said he expected an "average" turnout and noted that the community, just 12-14 minutes from downtown Lincoln, has a number of new residents. But he said he doesn't know how many of them are registered to vote or what their impact might be.

There is no large faction opposing the issue, he said.

Hruska: Stop Giving Others Trading Edge

Lexington, Pa. — Sen. Roman Hruska said Saturday he agrees with President Nixon it is time to stop giving other nations competitive trading advantages which the U.S. has provided so "willingly and even unwisely" in the past.

Hruska said he wants international markets to be "fair but this does not mean they necessarily need to be free."

The Nebraska lawmaker's views were delivered to the regional convention of the Nebraska Stock Growers Assn. by his Nebraska representative, Jack Schuetz.

Hruska was forced to cancel his scheduled appearance here because as ranking minority member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, he is floor leader of administration forces seeking confirmation of Supreme Court nominees William Rehnquist and Lewis F. Powell.

Schuetz, speaking for Hruska, told the Stock Growers the administration's new policy of restricting imports in many fields is patterned after the Hruska beef import quota law of 1964 which permits control of the amount of foreign beef sold in this country.

Thanks to the 1964 legislation, Schuetz said, importers have voluntarily controlled the quantity of beef shipped into this country.

Communities Brighten Holiday Atmosphere

Holiday festivities planned for Lincoln and other Nebraska communities will make the atmosphere brighter in the coming weeks.

Minden, for instance, will sponsor its "Light of the World" pageant at 7 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 12 and Dec. 19. The electrical display is an annual presentation of "Minden, the Christmas City."

Hemingford's annual Christmas diorama is in place and lighted until shortly after Jan. 1. The 13 10-by-40 ft. scenes illustrate the life of Christ and the entrance of sin into the world.

The Kearney State College planetarium takes a look at celestial lights in a "replay" of the stars visible in the Mideast at the time of the birth of Jesus.

The program will be shown at 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Sundays, Dec. 5, 12 and 19; 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Dec. 8 and 15; and 7:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Fridays, Dec. 10 and 17.

A tree-lighting ceremony is scheduled on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's East Campus at 6:30 p.m. Monday. The ceremony just west of C.Y.

Thompson Library will include caroling and will be followed by a chili feed and a party for children of faculty members.

Tree of Lights
The Salvation Army in Lincoln will be lighting a tree of their own during the Tree of Lights campaign which will be in progress until Christmas. The campaign hopes to raise $15,000 to buy gifts for Penal Complex and York Reformatory inmates, gifts for children of inmates and food and toys for needy families in the Lincoln area.

The Salvation Army tree is complete except for the star on the top, which will be lit when the goal is reached.

Another Lincoln group attempting to brighten the holiday season for Lincoln residents is the Lincoln Elks who will hold its annual Citywide Children's Christmas Party at 9 a.m. Dec. 24 in Pershing Auditorium.

Included in the party plans are a visit from Santa, distribution of candy and performance of a musical-comedy act and routines by five live bears.

Any child in Lincoln may attend the party and the Elks are planning for between 7,000 and 8,500 guests.

No Christmas season, of course, is complete without the traditional holiday music and this year is no exception.

Messiah Today
At 3 p.m. today in the University of Nebraska Coliseum the University Choral Union will present Handel's Messiah; at 4 p.m. today in Blair at the Dana Alumni Auditorium the Dana Band will perform a selection of sacred and secular Christmas music and at 7 p.m. in the Alumni Auditorium the Dana College Choir will perform Part I of the Messiah and three other Christmas compositions.

Nebraska Wesleyan University's choir will perform at 8 p.m. tonight in O'Donnell Auditorium.

In Wayne, Monday at 8 p.m. in the Wayne State College Fine Arts Center, the college orchestra and brass choir will present a concert.

Thursday at 8 p.m. in O'Donnell Auditorium, NWU's concert band will perform.

Sunday, Dec. 12 in Fremont, Midland College's A Cappella Choir, Clef Dwellers, Oratorio Chorus and Brass Ensemble will present their annual Christmas Concert at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Theatre.

NWU's Chamber Ensemble will perform in Older Gallery Sunday, Dec. 12 at 3 p.m.

A concert by the University Singers is planned for 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 12, at NU's Kimball Recital Hall; and the Madrigal Singers will perform Tuesday, Dec. 14, at 8 p.m. in Kimball Recital Hall.

Today at 2 p.m., the final performances of "Ballad of the Sad Cafe" will be performed at NWU's Enid Miller Theatre.

By DICK HAWS

The selection of Jan. 4 by the Human Rights Commission as the date for the release to the Mayor and Council of the investigation into Cleveland Randolph's police brutality charge was not an arbitrary choice.

Jan. 4 is also the date for Randolph's trial to commence in Municipal Court on the resisting arrest charge resulting from the Oct. 24 jail incident.

Literally dozens of persons have been interviewed concerning the Randolph incident, as well as police-community relations in general.

Numerous police officers — from patrolman rank to Chief Joe Carroll himself — have been called, as well as Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, Henry Lorenz and several ex-police officers.

Lorenz was reportedly called because of his work with jail trustees in his position as County-City Building Supt.

At least one of the ex-police officers reportedly was so concerned with his testimony that he forbade a court reporter or a tape recorder to be used during his interview.

As the investigation has intensified, the tight controls originally placed on the media were replaced by a total ban of all media representatives.

The media were prohibited from hearing Schwartzkopf, Lorenz or the ex-police officers testify.

Another interesting development has been the adoption of a new policy for public review of past Human Rights Commission reports and investigations.

Prior to the Randolph investigation all Human Rights Commission proceedings including minutes of meetings, reports and investigations, were kept on file, open to the public, in the city clerk's office.

Now that policy has been changed, and the past investigations and reports have been closed to the public.

Cited as the reason for the new prohibition is City Ordinance 2:68:300 which states that such reports and investigations "shall not be made public without written approval by the mayor."

The ordinance originally became a part of the Lincoln Municipal Code in 1968, and was subsequently amended in 1970.

Noise Ordinance in Abeyance

The City Council, about 30 days ago, added to Lincoln's municipal code a comprehensive ordinance which, among other things, restricts noise from motor vehicles, whether they be cars, motorcycles, trucks or buses.

During the first few weeks of November the ordinance was not enforced because the police department had not received the appropriate expensive noise measuring meters.

Then the meters arrived but no wind screens were included. (Apparently screens are important because the wind can affect meter readings.)

So more than 30 days have passed and nary a person has yet been charged with a violation under the ordinance.

Snow Emergency Phone Number

The city was hesitant to release the new emergency telephone number for snow crises until the new telephone directories have been delivered.

Now that they have Lincoln residents can find out whom to call by turning to page 42 of their new directory, looking under city offices, street department, snow removal complaints.

The number is 473-6644. City Public Works Director Robert Obering explained that dialers of the number during non-emergency times would be automatically switched over to the street department's main office.

When there is a snow emergency callers can expect quick attention, Obering says, as three phones are set up in Civil Defense headquarters to handle the one number.

Urban Fellows Are Wanted

The National Urban Fellows are embarking once again on their annual nation-wide recruiting effort to find young people in their 20s and 30s to serve in a 10-month intern program to learn about local government in selected urban centers across the country.

The program, designed especially for minority group members, last year drew some 1,450 inquiries out of which 350 completed applications were received, leading to the selection of 35 Fellows.

Telephone Directory Veritable 'Rainbow'

By KANDRA HAHN

Who's that somber visitor dressed in pale grey herringbone tweed and trimmed in black who has just entered the homes of Lincoln?

It's the 1972 telephone directory which, like the grey flannel-clad businessman who conceals a jacket lining of fusilli-print foulard, opens to reveal a veritable rainbow of information.

It's own colored pages — white for general listings, blue for the civic section and yellow for its classified listings — pale in comparison to the spectrum described on those pages.

The white pages alone provide a pretty basic box of crayons. There are about 200 Brown listings and 75 Greens. Fifteen Blacks and 13 Blues precede four Yellows and (right here in Big Red country) four Reds. No scarlets or creams, purples or oranges.

Leaving the basic spectrum behind, this multichromatic tome which totals about 306 pages in white and 345 in yellow, swings into some of the more subtle shades of the pallet, listing 36 Grays, 16 Roses, four Golds, three Teals, and a single Tan.

As usual the Johnsons lead the names in sheer numbers with 510 listings. There are 448 Smiths and 200 Joneses to keep up with.

Jockeying for the first listing in the book seems frenetic. There are seven A-1 services, one double A and 10 triple A listings in the first column of the first listing page as well as nine private customers who start their surnames with two A's just to be sure.

Lovers of puce, khaki, magenta, cerulean and ochre, however, will just have to continue to hang out at their favorite paint store because there is absolutely no mention of those hues in the 1972 directory.

But at least there's no problem looking up the name of that store or the hundreds of others listed in ever-popular alphabetical order in this colorful perennial.

Largest Wheat Carryover In 8 Years

By Associated Press

Increased world wheat production and decreased exports from the U.S. will result in this country's largest carryover stock in eight years, a Nebraska official said Saturday.

Arlee Phillips of Hemingford, secretary of Great Plains Wheat, said the economic research service of the Agriculture Dept. is estimating a carryover stock of about 973 million bushels, the largest since 1963 when there was a 1 billion carryover.

"This situation makes two necessary actions apparent," Phillips said. "We must continue to develop new uses for wheat, and the government must design a farm program that will cut down over-production while still allowing the farmer to make a decent living."

Frontier Will Ask to Drop Omaha-Chicago Route

By CELLA HEITMAN

Lincoln aviation officials Sunday reacted with concern over Frontier Airlines' financial condition after the company's announcement that it will ask the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) for permission to suspend service from Omaha to Chicago for six months.

"This is a last-ditch stand for these people," said John DuPont, aviation manager for the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. "Things are tough."

"This is a company fighting for its life," said Chauncey Barney attorney for the Lincoln Airport Authority.

Frontier informed Chamber and Airport Authority officials of the proposed cutback Friday shortly before a public announcement was made from its Denver headquarters.

"They are hurting so bad that I can see where some of these steps are necessary," said Airport Authority member Fred Eiche. "I hate to see them reduce service across Nebraska where we need it but if people haven't been using it — and they have statistics to show their decreased boardings — then I really can't blame them."

Frontier says it suffered a net loss of $3.5 million last year and that the Omaha-Chicago route cost the company $392,000 in the 12 months ending Oct. 31.

The CAB gave Frontier authority in April to fly nonstop between Lincoln and Chicago, but the airline never inaugurated the service. There is no choice with the Omaha-Chicago routing, the CAB certificate requires Frontier to service that route.

Filing Due Soon

Frontier said it expects to file its petition for a temporary suspension before the end of the year. If it is not granted, Frontier says, there will be only a single round trip a day five days a week between Omaha and Chicago, using a 48-passenger propeller-driven Convair 580 to fulfill the CAB requirement.

"That," said one Lincolnite, "will be an awfully lonesome trip with just a pilot and a stewardess."

"We share Frontier's concern and their problems," said DuPont. "We hope that the actions they are taking will return them to the profit picture so they can go ahead and give us more service in the long run."

Lincoln, however, won't lose too much in the Frontier decision because it was never directly on the Omaha-Chicago run. "We may have had some connecting passengers, but not too many," DuPont said.

The Frontier officials at the Lincoln meeting were Paul Jones, assistant to the president, and Glenn Emmons, manager of the Lincoln office. Representing Lincoln interests were DuPont; Barney McLaughlin, of the Chamber's aviation committee; Roland Harr, Airport Authority executive director; Barney and Eiche. Norman Otto, representing the governor's office, also attended the meeting.

Midway Blamed

It does not appear to be Chicago that's killing Frontier, but Midway Airport. The CAB refused Frontier's application to serve O'Hare International Airport, one of the nation's largest and busiest. Frontier began serving Midway Oct. 25, 1970, with three daily flights.

Chicago Mayor Richard Daley said there would be 250 flights out of Chicago's downtown airport, but the plan did not work. Frontier says there were 83 flights when it began service at Midway but only 67 on Dec. 1. The lack of connecting flights for ongoing passengers was felt to be a crucial factor in Frontier's decision to suspend service.

If it is granted a six-month suspension, there is some speculation that Frontier will then try to convince the CAB that it must have authority to serve O'Hare in order to make money. If the move is unsuccessful, it is possible that Frontier may tell the CAB to forget the Midway service and abandon its Omaha-Chicago route. Chicago is the largest city in Frontier's 17-state system.

Sometime after the first of the year, Frontier is expected to eliminate single-plane jet service to St. Louis on its Denver-Lincoln-Kansas City-St. Louis route. The flight will originate and end in Kansas City rather than St. Louis. St.

Louis-bound passengers will still be able to get there, but they'll have to change planes and catch connecting flights.

On the whole, Lincoln appears to be doing rather well as far as Frontier's systemwide changes are concerned. For example, the airline is eliminating a Dallas-Albuquerque flight.

"Lincoln has been a good boarding spot, so they are not really doing anything that will be very detrimental to us," Eiche said. "But I hate to see us losing this single-plane service to St. Louis because while apparently we haven't been putting passengers on it, it was a good thing to have."

Eiche said he does not feel Frontier's finances will have much effect on plans to build a new airport terminal.

Construction Permits Total 137 in October

Construction on 137 new buildings with a total value of $3,728,000 was begun in the Lincoln area during October, figures compiled by the City Building Inspections Division show.

The number of new buildings is the same as in October 1970, but the 1970 cost figure is more than $1 million lower — at $2,628,000.

The difference can be attributed to apartment starts — in October 1971, 234 units valued at $2,015,000 were begun; while October 1970 figures show 96 units costing $809,000 were started.

The new figures also show an increase in cost over September 1971 totals, when 140 new buildings were begun at a cost of $2,252,000.

Overall, during October, 228 building permits were issued by the office, with 36, indicating a total cost of $239,000 going for additions; while 55 were issued for alterations costing an estimated $219,000.

Fees paid on those permits amounted to $10,558.

Campus Crime Rate Rises at Startling Pace

By EUGENE BOB
Pop Scene Service
Cambridge, Mass. — These ivy-covered hallowed halls of learning have failed to escape the rising rate of crime creeping at an astonishing pace across North American campuses. Surprisingly, the verdant college quadrangle is as susceptible to the epidemic of crime as the deteriorating city slum.

This startling data was compiled from campus police reports across the continent.

A prime example is a report here of the theft of $18,000 worth of items in a two-month period from Harvard's freshmen dormitories alone. Since most of the loot is small pieces or small change, the number of thefts is proportionately higher than the general crime rate.

The situation at Harvard is repeated at Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey in New Brunswick, where dormitory doors are kept locked at all times. Students are required to carry keys and despite this, reported thefts are on the increase. Not all of the crime is petty thievery involving students. Last year 13 armed robberies were reported on the fringe of the main campus.

Rate Doubled
Security police at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., considered one of the most prestigious schools on the West Coast, reported the crime rate there has nearly doubled in the past two years. In a three-month period early last year, at least 15 students in Columbia University dormitories were robbed at gunpoint, pistol-whipped, threatened with knives or physically assaulted.

Many more crimes are committed than ever get reported, most college authorities agree. But enough do get reported to spread a growing chill through the university community.

Largely responsible for the thefts and the threats of violence and the incidence of violence is the growth of the underground drug culture, the campus patrols conceded. To cope with the problem, more money is being put into campus security systems although most colleges are already strapped for cash. The University of Illinois, for example, is adding about $350,000 worth of security equipment and manpower, while the security force of George Washington University has been increased from 26 to 40 men. The University of California at Santa Barbara has even hired a bomb squad.

Colleges Here Relatively Untouched

The startling crime rate rise being felt on many campuses has left the colleges in Lincoln relatively untouched.

The police chief at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus, Gale Gade, said that crime rates on campus are hard to compare due to a lack of accurate record keeping in previous years.

He did confirm that the campus security force of 37 officers is double what it was two years ago and has added two-way radio equipment for better communication and quicker action.

Additionally, the force maintains a training program to offer better service to the university community.

Bicycle thefts are the biggest noticeable increase on the Lincoln campus, Gale said. "With more bikes on campus we thought bike theft would increase and it has. The expensive bikes are quite an attraction even if they're locked with a chain."

Other common campus crimes are larceny from autos and larceny from living units and classrooms.

UNL is battling auto accessory thefts by increasing lighting in parking areas. Gade said the peak crime periods are in the fall and spring when the weather cooperates with the criminal.

Carelessness
Carelessness with possessions and a general lack of security precautions in living units are an invitation to theft, Gade explained.

A rash of larceny earlier this year in dorms was attributed to a group traveling from state to state, stealing from college living quarters as they traveled.

"Not all campus crime is perpetrated by campus people," Gade said. "We always have to consider that the work might well have been done by outsiders," Gade said.

Things are actually improved on Nebraska Wesleyan campus this year, a NWU spokesman said.

"Two or three years ago we were plagued with destruction and theft, usually from people coming in from outside the campus community."

Wesleyan uses a professional protection service and has hired a nightman in addition. The combination has curbed the crime rate there.

According to Judy Hammon, Union College security officer, the most flagrant law violation on that campus all year was the stealing of the flag that flies on the staff in front of the administration building.

Aside from that, the only reportable mischief has been BB guns putting out an occasional window.

She says the increased crime rate is not a reality at Union College.

With winter about to clamp its jaws down seriously in the area, campus crime may feel a happy period of complete deep freeze.

This Doubting Thomas is now convinced. The Legislature's Budget Committee really wants to have its omnibus 1972-73 appropriations bill ready for introduction and floor debate the day the 1972 Unicameral convenes. The committee last week put in long hours, making all-but-final decisions on such blockbuster matters as welfare, institutions and education. Some of those judgments mean a few currently employed state workers will have to look for employment elsewhere. But that's melancholy grist for another day's mill.

Assuming the committee has its money package squared away and quickly on general file, the situation is set for an interesting competition. Gov. J. J. Exon will bring in his constitutionally-required appropriations bill. There'll be no outstanding reason why the measure would need the scrutiny of a public hearing, really. Senators therefore could decide which appropriations vehicle they wished — the committee's or Exon's. Of course, since the committee's bill inevitably will exceed the executive proposal in a few places, while being under in others, it will take 33 votes for the committee's whole work product to come finally on top.

Overall the two bills have the same mission — appropriations which would not cause state sales and income tax rates for 1972 to be raised in 1973. So dollar totals may be quite similar. Individual budgets will, as a witness told the committee last week, "permit us to proceed with the status quo." The dispatch with which the committee endorsed administration totals for welfare and institutions suggested all arguments for enrichment will fall on stony ears.

The listener could learn much simply paying attention at last week's brace of budget hearings.

Game Commission officials made no bones about their desire to see control and upkeep of Stoley Park entirely transferred to Grand Island. They'd like to shuck some other real estate parcels, too. Nobody would shed giant tears at the commission if the $230,000 rodeo arena at North Platte somehow gained a new proprietor. Funds to build the arena were voted by a 1969 legislative majority as part of a deal to gain cross-support for the $6.5 million University of Nebraska library. Nearly three years later, the cut-down library is still high-centered.)

Willard Barbee, Game Commission director, wasn't especially eager to say much about a request the 1972 Legislature re-activate a user-fee system for state recreation areas. That would be one way of getting more revenue, without tapping the general fund or further raising hunting or fishing license charges. On the books now is a $1 user-fee requirement. Except, like some other laws, it isn't being enforced. Barbee said the fee would have to be more than $2 to make an impact. Maybe $5?

Once again the state agency which historically has been the biggest spender of all, the Roads Dept., is not getting any Budget Committee attention. The argument is that since the roads people use no general fund money, let 'em alone.

One may still detect a Budget Committee willingness to shift some costs to the Roads Dept.'s multi-million-dollar budget — the tax commissioner's border patrol, costs in administering motor fuel taxes, housekeeping at the state wayside areas, perhaps all Motor Vehicles Dept. functions. And recapture of state sales tax receipts going directly to the highway agency always is an outside possibility, if the general budget is terribly pinched.

The week's largest tactical error was charged to John Kissack, motor vehicles chief. Kissack was attending some meeting in New York when it came time for his agency's audience with the Budget Committee. Deputy Bill Edwards carried the flag. Afterward senators noted, with some sharpness, the director's absence. They have long memories.

Other gleanings from the hearings . . . Although the Exon administration reduced the maximum rent an ADC family can be paid from $100 to $63 per month, the average actual rent demanded by landlords is $74.30 . . . A motion in the committee to reduce the size of the State Education Dept.'s school accreditation staff to two persons died for lack of a second . . . The state's latest slick-cover driver's license manual, with much more art work and color cartoons, cost 72¢ to print . . . Although nobody is going to raise an official eyebrow the Budget Committee really doesn't have power to authorize the Institutions Dept. to transfer $45,000 in repair funds to build a new prison gymnasium. Only the entire Legislature can do that . . . Sen. Ramey Whitney of Chappell indicated one reason he inclines toward abortion reform is that it might cut the illegitimate birth rate . . . Nebraska's 84 psychiatrists, 45 on the public payroll.

Amidst the Snowflakes

—Confirmation of the departure of Sen. Sam Klaver from the Legislature after next session somehow recalls the Omahan's prescription several years ago now the state could economize on assistance payments to the poor and the elderly: Drop 'em off the middle of the Missouri River bridge.

—Since the new wisdom is that state aid to schools hasn't cut local property taxes, why not apply and easy test of the theory? Abandon the program and channel the $35 million a year into many waiting state-level projects. What do you imagine might happen then to local mill levies?

—I'm advised the "mystery man" who made the pitch to the Exon administration about construction of a "turn-key" state office building was David Murdock, entrepreneur behind Lincoln's new First National Bank building. It would be a profit-making venture on Murdock's part, my sources suggest.

—Checking into the Supreme Court's official records reveals the court recently declared it may begin limiting oral argument in some cases to 10 minutes. Now each side in an appeal can take up to 30 minutes.

—State Tax Commissioner Bill Peters spoke last week to the Nebraska Stock Growers Assn., a natural enemy of many tax commissioners, the way things have turned out. There was a staff suggestion to Peters he ought to leave the car motor running for quick escape. When Murrell McNeil was tax commissioner he once made a speech to officials in western Nebraska. In McNeil's honor they reportedly closed the bar, from 10 to 10:30 a.m.

—Don't you think Nebraska would go up in smoke if federal officials, moving under authority of the new Occupational Safety Act, were to require roll bars on every single farm tractor? But just such a safety rule is being discussed in Washington.

—He's no longer governor. Still Nobby Tiemann continues to win bets on Nebraska football games. Not so long ago he enjoyed a huge fresh salmon. Oregon Gov. Tom McCall's payment for losing a wager with Tiemann on the NU-Oregon clash.

Woolly Beard Not So Threatening

Santa's woolly beard doesn't seem so threatening to Anissa Gyle, 2, from the safety of Mrs. Santa's lap. Anissa, daughter of Mrs. Bonnie Gayles, is one of thousands of youngsters who has paid her annual visit to the Great Gift Giver in Santa's Cave on the Gateway mall next to the auditorium. Both the Clauses will be available every day except Sunday until Christmas.

Farmhand, Wife Held; Widow Had $45,000 in Strongbox

Grant (UPI)—A farmhand and his wife were being held in connection with the Thanksgiving Day burglary of an estimated $45,000 or more in cash from a strongbox where an elderly widow who employed them briefly kept her life savings.

Perkins County Sheriff Tony Novak confirmed late Friday night Rodney Whitmore, whom Novak described as around 30, and his wife, Roberta, about 23, were apprehended Thursday about 150 miles east of here in the south-central town of Minden.

estimating it (the amount taken) at $45,000 or maybe $50,000.

"The D-C bonds haven't been recovered," Novak said. "We got several $100 bills back, and some other cash, but we figure about half of the money has been spent," he said.

Novak said the couple was employed from about mid-August to mid-September, and lived on the Watkins farm in a separate house.

"Mrs. Watkins' husband passed away Sept. 2," the sheriff said. "The gentleman had been working for them and she (Mrs. Watkins) laid him off on account of her husband's death."

Sheriff Novak said the burglary of the strongbox, which was kept in the house, occurred sometime during the daylight hours on Thanksgiving.

He said he had not yet interrogated the couple, and intended to do so Monday.

Vietnam Vets To Get First Chance at Jobs

By Associated Press

The chief of the Nebraska State Employment Service, Don Haase, has reminded all firms holding federal contracts must list their job openings with the State Employment Service.

President Nixon recently issued an executive order which required all firms holding federal contracts to list their job openings with their respective state employment service.

Haase said "As a result of the executive order the number of listings held by the State Employment Service is expected to increase significantly."

He said the purpose of the order is to provide more job opportunities for veterans. Haase said Vietnam veterans are to be given first exposure to job vacancies.

State GOP Sets Pre-Primary Meeting

By DICK HERMAN
The Nebraska Republican State Central Committee Saturday gave unanimous approval to a recommendation the party hold a pre-primary state convention next April.

At that event, both National Committeeman Richard L. Herman of Omaha and National Committeewoman Patricia Labr Smith of Lincoln plan to seek election to full four-year terms.

Herman is serving out the term to which U.S. District Judge Donald Ross was originally elected and Mrs. Smith gained office after National Committeewoman Ann Batchelder resigned in the spring of 1970.

Normally, national committee officers are elected at post-primary state conventions, usually held in summer months.

However Herman is the key man in setting up arrangements for the August national GOP convention. He plans to move to San Diego, the convention site, June 1.

Herman explained his problem to the central committee Saturday, saying he was willing to abide by any decision it made.

Additionally, the national committeeman noted that since the Nebraska Democratic primary election will attract far greater attention than the Republican election, a pre-primary convention can gain some statewide interest.

Other Matters
State Chairman Milan Bish said matters other than election of national committee officers may be taken up at the April convention, delegates to which will be the same men and women elected to the 1970 GOP post-primary convention.

Perhaps tied in with the pre-primary convention will be a fund-raising event, attracting "a top national speaker."

Its membership reduced because of statewide storm conditions, the central committee Saturday also gave split-vote approval to a plan for dividing the national convention delegate election among the three congressional districts.

Okayed was a plan where each district gets an equal number of delegates, with any "extra" delegates going to the district which had the best last-election record of supporting the Republican presidential candidate.

The plan basically is one developed by Bish as a modification of the "one-man, one-vote" distribution proposal to be sponsored in the 1972 Legislature by Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly. Bish said he could also back the Warner method, but preferred his own.

The state's Democratic central committee already has gone on record backing the Warner plan. Democrats turned away from a plan liked by Gov. J. J. Egan, that distribution of delegates between districts be based on registration, not actual vote.

Secretary of State Allen J. Peermann told the GOP committee members Saturday he regards Egan's plans as "unworkable."

The central committee accepted a report of a legislative committee, urging that local personal property tax exemption be applied "equally to all who pay" the tax, instead of selected classes.

Since the GOP said the exemption "will result in a shift in the tax burden," to sales and income taxpayers, a "phased program of implementation to limit the impact in any one biennium" should be stressed.

"All personal property should be exempt from taxation at the conclusion of the program of implementation," the Republicans agreed.

Other policy statements plugged anew for a return to a partisan legislature, with opposition to any bill permitting individuals registered in one political party to cross-over and vote in another party's primary election.

Election of all delegates to the national party conventions was backed.

Pearl Harbor Survivors Gather

Five survivors of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Assn. gathered in Lincoln Saturday for a short memorial service in remembrance of their 2,251 friends and shipmates who did not return.

The Nebraska chapter is part of a national organization that aims to remember Pearl Harbor and to keep America alert, said Ormsby Lee, Pearl Harbor survivor and leader of the memorial service.

His first reaction on Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese bombing started, Lee said, was "one of disbelief."

Other survivors at the ceremony were Everett Boyer, Keith Bosley, Claire Dailey, and William Kolb, all of Lincoln.

Ranks of the state chapter were depleted because about 50 of their members were attending memorial services at Pearl Harbor this weekend, Lee said.

The color guard of VFW Post 131 hoisted the flags. The ceremony is an annual observance held by the association.

Jensen Sees Better Life for Aging As Result of Commitment by Nixon

The young director of Nebraska's Commission on Aging was back in his office Friday from the White House Conference on Aging, full of optimism and confidence that the average senior citizen in the U.S. is in line for a better, fuller life in the months ahead.

Executive Ron Jensen bases his outlook on the outcome of the conference program in which a promise of improving the quality of life for senior citizens was made by the national administration.

"That's one commitment from which it will be mighty hard for anyone to back away," Jensen said.

Although he would have liked to see the "sometimes hidden program in a division within a division with HEW" nominated to a cabinet position, Jensen said a promise of a national administrative coordinating office should accomplish the same general principles.

He is grateful and believes the state should share the same feeling that Nebraska's aging program already is on an independent status to facilitate use of any increased programming funds from Washington.

He estimates Nebraska's funds for the aging from there would amount to something like $1.4 million if President Nixon's pledge to seek five-fold increases is realized. Nebraska currently gets about $250,000 a year, which is allocated to local agency programs.

Nixon said Thursday that he wants this hike to be used to provide alternative services to institutional care of the elderly. Jensen observes this is exactly what Nebraska's pilot regional program in Lincoln — one of eight in the nation today — is pledged to carry out.

Jensen believes conference It could be 1973 before the Nixon increased funding materializes but meanwhile, Jensen is optimistic that an $883,000 nationwide nutritional program for the elderly will get full Congressional approval. It passed the Senate this week and only hit delaying resistance from Minority Leader Gerald Ford in the House.

Should this program, once passed, get only 50% funding in the 1972 fiscal year, Jensen estimates this will mean about $440,000 for Nebraska to distribute locally to provide nutritious meal services and to establish programs to show the elderly how to shop and prepare food for the most benefit.

speakers on the Washington scene gave promise of substantially increased housing efforts for the low income poor in the months ahead — another preventive effort to keep the aging out of institutions longer.

Board, Room Licenses to Be Scrutinized Vision 17 Told of Agriculture's Importance

Westview, the Lancaster County-operated home for the aged, is apparently not the only facility in the state operating or seeking to operate under a board and room license but giving supervision and patient care.

"We have encountered a number of cases similar to Westview," Glenn Kreuscher, State Director of agriculture, said. "They all come up for renewal (of board and room licenses) next July 1 and this time I'll have my people take a look at them."

Kreuscher, who heads the state's dairy, food and drug division which administers the hotel and inn law under which these licenses are granted, said that such licenses have apparently been easy to get under past leadership but that he does not intend to go on issuing licenses without careful checking of facilities.

"There are a lot of legitimate, qualified and properly operated board and room facilities and these will continue to be licensed," he said. But those that offer supervision or care for patients properly fall under the jurisdiction of the Health Dept. and it will be up to them to elicit compliance with health regulations from operators of such homes, he explained.

Kreuscher said he talked recently with State Health Director Dr. Henry Smith and that very possibly there may be a place for a classification or type of home that gives a limited amount of care.

Area of Abuse

There is speculation that some operators seek to license homes—under board and room regulations when they fail to meet the more stringent Health

Dept. requirements—in order to qualify for federal welfare payments for their patients. This is an area of abuse that one observer predicted will come in for close federal scrutiny in the near future, "not just in Nebraska, but all over the country."

Kreuscher indicated since personally inspecting some board and room facilities in the state he has become deeply committed to the task of bringing them up to standards and that his department is going to give the matter a lot of attention between now and next July when he hopes every facility will have been carefully inspected.

"What you need in these things," he said, "is some fortitude and ambition in someone in my position. I've been working night and day on this and I'm going to keep after it because I think it has top priority."

Kreuscher said, in the Westview matter, that he talked personally about two weeks ago with Lancaster County Welfare Director Earl Trabert and Dr. George Underwood, city-county health director. At that time, he said, they were seeking a board and room license for the facility and Kreuscher advised them that he would require fire department approval and a written notarized verification that a personal examination had been given each resident at the home and that they require "absolutely no supervision or care."

Since that time, he said, neither Trabert nor Underwood has pursued the matter of licensing.

Underwood, contacted Saturday for comment on the Westview status, declined to talk about it except to say, "I have to see elderly people used as political pawns. And this is all that's happening."

Congressional aide Don Shasteen told 150 attending the annual dinner of Vision 17 Inc. that agriculture is the pulse and lifeblood of America.

Shasteen substituted for Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., who was held in Washington D.C. due to a last minute congressional session.

Vision 17 is a economic development corporation serving a 17-county area in southeast Nebraska.

"We should put our energies into building a stronger agriculture and, as a means of accomplishing this, we should concentrate on attracting industries that consume or process our raw agricultural products," Shasteen said.

Shasteen predicted tighter controls on federal funds because of the current high rate of deficit spending.

Dr. A. O. Gigstad

"But I believe anything that promises to create new jobs will get priority for funding," he said.

"The people of rural America have always been noted for their imagination, ingenuity and fierce independence. I believe there are great days ahead for America, and I think that rural America is going to lead the parade."

Dr. A. O. Gigstad, Nebraska City Mayor, was named Vision 17 president for 1972. He succeeds Tecumseh mayor Jack Wolken.

Two Lecturers To Discuss Sandhills Lakes

"The Ecology of the Sandhills Lakes of Nebraska" will be discussed by two guest lecturers at 7:15 p.m. Monday at Bessey Hall on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

Guest speakers will be Prof. Gilbert L. Adrian of Hastings College and Bruce McCarragher, research biologist for the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Beatrice, Crele, Fairbury and Wilber, had been accomplished in the past year. This came out of a regional meeting and a decision to implement a tourism trail in some part of the Vision 17 area, Wolken said.

"They all said that this was the kind of thing they have been talking about for some time but through the efforts of Vision 17 it became a reality."

Low Income Post Sought

The Lancaster County Young Democrats have called for appointment of a low income person to the Lincoln Housing Authority.

This would permit low income representation on the governing body of the housing authority and give low income persons an understanding of the difficulties that arise in trying to solve community problems, according to Young Democrats president Marshall Prichard.

The letter was addressed to Mayor Sam Schwarzkopf and members of the City Council.

Alcoholism Cure Didn't Work But Snack Was Born

Cornhuskers Frolic Against Hawaii, 45-3

Table with 2 columns: Stat, N, H. Rows include First downs, Rushing yardage, Passing yardage, Return yardage, Passes, Punt, Fumbles lost, Yards penalized.

By DON FORSYTHE Honolulu — Nebraska, getting a tougher battle than many Cornhusker fans had expected, made Hawaii its 13th victim of the 1971 season and extended its unbeaten string to 32 games Saturday night by outscoring the Rainbows, 45-3.

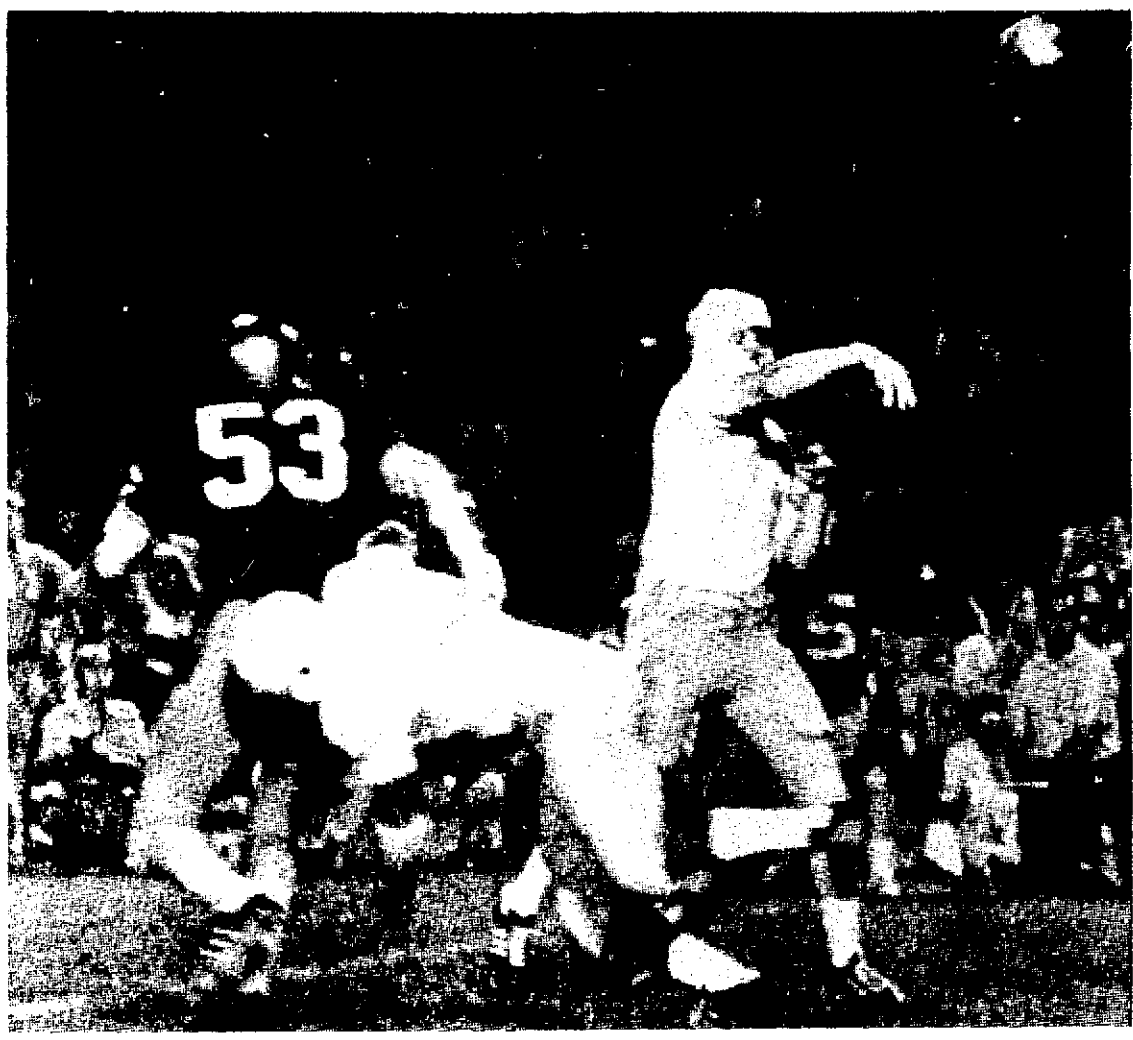

The determined Rainbows, outmanned but not outscrapped, made the Cornhuskers work for everything they got and the victory margin might not have been so great had the hosts not been forced into numerous mistakes by a Cornhusker defense. In becoming the first collegiate team ever to win 13 regular season games the Cornhuskers set up another No. 1-No. 2 showdown in the Orange Bowl against Alabama. Nebraska's initial possession proved to be an omen of things to come. The Cornhuskers were to be the dominant force, but with considerable difficulty. Nebraska put the ball in play at its own 10 after Johnny Rodgers slipped down returning the opening kickoff.

Prep BB . . . 4C Outdoors . . . 7C COLOR Sunday Journal and Star SPORT RED Best Read in Sports is the Sport Red Section C, 10 Pages, Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 5, 1971

Mason picked off a deflected pass and carried his sixth interception of the season 25 yards to the end zone. Sanger made it 10-0 with 9:00 left in the quarter. Hawaii bounced back to drive from its own 24 to the Nebraska 27 on its next possession, but Henry Sovio's 44-yard field goal attempt fell short. The Cornhuskers struck quickly as they put the ball in play at the 20. Tagge hit List on a crossing pattern and when Billy Baker missed his interception bid List had clear sailing to the end zone. His 80-yard reception gave him his second touchdown of the season with 2:45 left in the period.

Sanger's conversion made it 17-0 and if it was looking easy then it didn't take long for things to change. The next Nebraska drive stalled at the Hawaii 33. Hawaii was forced to punt and Rodgers fielded the ball at the Nebraska 15. Johnny weaved his way 73 yards to the Hawaii 12, but the field was covered with flags before he was tackled and the Cornhuskers were called back to their own 14 on the clip deepest in Nebraska territory. The Cornhuskers punted out to the Hawaii 47 and new quarterback Mike Biscotti scrambled out of the pocket and hit fullback Don Mahi for a 51-yard gain to the Nebraska eight.

Nebraska's passing game was in evidence against Hawaii early on these two plays. Jerry Tagge (15) connects on a 17-yard pass to Jerry List (left) and then several plays later Woody Cox grabs a 33-yard bomb that helped set up Nebraska's first score, a 32-yard field goal by Rich Sanger. The Big Red won their 12th game of the regular season, 45-3.

Huskers Falter Again; Wichita Wins, 74-61

By MARK GORDON Has the NU Coliseum lost the good-luck charm it once possessed for the Nebraska basketball team? "I don't know — we haven't played on the road yet," said a disappointed coach Joe Cipriano after the Cornhuskers fell, 74-61, to Wichita State Saturday night, marking the second loss in as many nights at the Coliseum. While Cipriano said NU improved over its last-second 63-61 defeat to San Diego State Friday night, he termed mistakes in the last four minutes as the main factor in sending NU to a 1-2 record. Even when Shocker center Terry Benton fouled out with 4:39 left, erratic passes, missed baskets and fouls proved to be NU's downfall. NU's Al Nissen converted his two free throws on Benton's foul to pull the Huskers within one at 58-57. But then a 15-foot jumper by Ron Harris put Wichita ahead 60-57. "That was probably the turning point," said Shocker coach Harry Miller. "After that we got the free throws and then you get the layups and it's all over." After capturing a 33-32 halftime lead, NU fell behind early and rallied to tie the Shockers on three occasions — at 42, 44 and 46 before key baskets by Harris gave the Wichitans their first victory in interscholastic competition this season. Cipriano pointed to NU's outrebounding the visitors, 40-39 after losing the backboard battle 21-16 at halftime as an optimistic statistic. "I thought we played better tonight — we never let down," Cipriano said. "They had an extremely hot night — they didn't miss much in the second half." Wichita only shot 50 times but scored on 26 for a sparkling 52 per cent and connected on 22 of 27 free throw efforts for an 81.5 mark. NU scored on 25 of 57 floor attempts for 43.9 per cent and hit on 11 of 16 free throw attempts for 68.8 per cent. "When a team's that hot, not many people are going to beat them," Cipriano continued. "We played an excellent first half, but their frontline was excellent and we couldn't cope with their shooting." Praising Chuck Jura, Nissen and Mike Peterson, who combined for 43 points, Cipriano refused to point to the Huskers' Wednesday-Friday-Saturday schedule as a disadvantage. "Sure, that had something to do with it, but it wasn't the entire story," he said. "They just have a good club—but I'm still pleased with our effort." Miller termed Nebraska as a squad "completely prepared for us. "Sure, I was surprised that we won that big (13 points)," he said. "When we came here, I figured if we got out of here with our lives we'd be lucky." Nebraska travels to Pittsburgh Monday night for its first road test this season meeting Duquesne University, which downed Morehead State, 76-63 in its opener. Morehead State is coached by former NU assistant basketball coach Bill Harrell.

NU's Glover Defense Pick

Kansas City (AP) — Honors never seem to reach an end for Rich Glover. The middle guard of Nebraska's top-ranked football team was named the National Lineman of the Week for his performance in the Cornhuskers' Thanksgiving Day victory over Oklahoma. Glover earned a berth on the All-Big Eight Conference and the All-American teams. It comes as no major surprise that Glover was selected Saturday as the No. 1 defensive player of the year in the Big Eight by sports writers and sportscasters. Nobody else was close to the 234-pound Glover in the balloting. "I had a goal before the season started to be an All-American this year," Glover says. "If I couldn't make All-American, I sure wanted to be an All-Big Eight player at least. "I must say I am really surprised to be named the best defensive player in the conference." After the triumph over Oklahoma, Nebraska Coach Bob Devaney said he had "seen some great defensive play but I don't think I ever saw a kid play as outstanding on defense as Rich Glover." Glover was credited with three unassisted tackles and 19 assists, a fact that caused Devaney to add: "Three unassisted tackles? That guy needs some help in his arithmetic. Glover was Rich Glover Tops Big 8 Defenders making tackles on both sides of the field. Glover was pretty convincing all season. A good example was a University of Kansas center who believed he could take care of Glover in a one-on-one situation. The Nebraska star was credited with three of the game's first four tackles. Kansas lost ground on each of Glover's three stops. Glover led Nebraska in individual tackles with 42 and had 43 assists going into Saturday night's game at Hawaii. Only a junior, Glover has issued this warning to Nebraska's 1972 foes: "I think this was my best year in football. I'm looking forward to an even better season next year."

Walstrom, Seume Spark Omahans

Lincoln High Dropped by Westside, 52-45

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

Rick Walstrom and Jeff Seume, a pair of mainstays from last year's Omaha Westside state tourney team, paced the Warriors to a 52-45 basketball victory over Lincoln High at Johnson Gym Saturday night.

The Links, who scored 50 points by halftime while claiming an 87-68 triumph over Hastings the previous night, were plagued by 25 turnover errors and a sticky defense from the talented Metro club.

A cold-shooting second quarter, in which Lincoln High managed but four points, proved the undoing of the Capital City quintet.

Walstrom accounted for all 12 Westside points during that same stanza to propel the visitors to a comfortable 24-17 intermission lead.

The game was not as close as the final score might indicate. Westside, though never leading by more than 14, had the game well in hand until the final two minutes when coach Tom Hall cleared the bench while leading 50-36.

The Links tallied eight straight points to close the gap to five at 50-45, but Westside sub Larry Schone pumped in a pair of free throws with 17 seconds left to settle the issue.

After Seume hit a game-opening charity toss, coach

Aldy Johnson's Links grabbed their only lead of the contest on Bruce Schomaker's fielder.

But after a 15-10 count at the first quarter break, Walstrom staged his one-man show.

The 6-5 pivot man knocked in three consecutive jumpers and a pair of free throws and it was suddenly 23-10.

Lincoln High rallied briefly at the outset of the second half on a pair of baskets by Schomaker and two more by Bob Folsom. That narrowed the margin to six at 28-22, but Westside quickly zoomed to a 38-24 bulge by scoring ten points while the Links were held to a single bucket by Mike Fultz.

The margin see-sawed between 12 and 14 points until Lincoln High's closing rush just before the final gun.

A sports oddity occurred when the Lincoln High reserves reversed the varsity score, topping the Westside JV's by an identical 52-45 count.

Northeast Trounces Kearney

By MIKE JOHNSON

Lincoln Northeast combined the talents of sophomore center Terry Novak and junior guard Tom Westover to overwhelm taller Kearney, 63-46, at the East gym Saturday night.

Novak, brother of University of Nebraska basketball Tom, scored 20 points and helped neutralize the Bears' overwhelming height advantage which included two starters and two key substitutes who measured 6-4 or better. Novak, at 6-2, was the tallest Rocket.

It was Westover, however, who guided Northeast to a substantial first-quarter advantage. The speedy guard's 10 first-period points shot coach Ed Johnson's crew to a 22-10 lead.

With Westover sidelined with three fouls early in the second stanza, the stage was set for Novak.

And Novak responded more like a poised veteran than an individual starting his first varsity game. With Kearney's backline beginning to hamper the Rockets, the Bears' Tom Spongberg hit a free throw to cut the lead to 27-18, a deficit which only moments before had been 14.

Novak then hit a basket, assisted on a teammate's score and hit three free throws to put Northeast back into control.

Although the game was marred by excessive fouling and numerous turnovers, Northeast coach Johnson was reasonably pleased.

"I was pleased with the way the boys played," said Johnson. "This is one of the youngest teams we've had and you never know how they will react to the first game of the season."

Besides Novak, Westover was the only Rocket to hit double figures with 12. Tom Spongberg and Steve Curtis paced the Bears with 11 and 11 respectively.

Tight Race Forecast for Class A Basketball Teams

Defending Class A high school basketball champion Lincoln East and runner-up Papillion could well be headed down the path for another title clash, but a lot of other big school clubs are ready to argue the point.

Lincoln Southeast, East's first cross-town foe, gave ample evidence of that Friday night by stunning the defending champs, 63-64. And Papillion was pressed by lightly regarded South Sioux City, 51-43, in its opener.

Though Papillion mentor Dennis Hanson has just one returner, he's seven-foot center Mike Heck. The "Menarch Monster" poses a single-handed threat to most any foe. If Hanson can find four defensive-minded mates who can get the ball and then feed it up near the hoop to Heck on offense, Papillion should be able to earn a berth in the state classic again next March.

The state's 32 Class A clubs are divided into eight four-team districts. Single elimination district tournaments the first week in March will determine the eight entrants for the state meet to be held in Lincoln, March 9-11.

Though the formula for determining which schools comprise the various districts is the same as used in past years, it appears that four of the strongest Omaha-area teams are jammed into a single grouping.

A pre-season poll of Metro League coaches shows Boys Town, Westside, Central and Rummel favored to annex the Conference crown this winter. Only one can make the state playoffs.

A closer look at each of the eight districts:

District 1: Lincoln East, Lincoln High, Lincoln Northeast, Lincoln Southeast.

As usual, the Capital City district is expected to produce some of the best basketball -- and the most closely contested -- in the state.

East, with seven returning lettermen from its championship team, has to rank near the top of the Capital City clubs despite the opening loss to Southeast.

Lincoln High, with six returning lettermen, including guard Bob Knollenberg and forward Bruce Schomaker, who combined for over 400 points during their junior season, appears ready to challenge East for local honors.

Southeast, though having just one returning letterman in Larry Vasholz, has already served notice that the Knights will be in the thick of the battle. And Northeast, with one of its youngest teams in years, can also be counted on to pose a threat by district tourney time.

District 2: Omaha Bryan, Omaha Northwest, Omaha South, Ralston.

If they haven't already, they should be dancing in the corridors at Omaha South and Ralston. The two should get little argument from the other pair for the state tourney spot.

Bryan has never been a Class A threat and Northwest, in its first year of existence, has a big sophomore class but very few athletically talented seniors.

Though South lost all of its regulars through graduation and Ralston has only Denny Bendering returning from its starting five, the two will be odds-on favorites for the district title.

District 3: Boys Town, Omaha Central, Omaha Rummel, Omaha Westside.

Boys Town returns three starters from last season plus 6-8½, 200-pound transfer Don Hurley, who was a regular for Des Moines Roosevelt High.

Central coach Jim Martin has four regulars back, 6-1 Keith Brown, 6-3 Tim Williams plus regulars Dennis Forrest and Carlos Dillard, both at 6-4.

Rummel coach Phil Gradoville is in even better shape. He has six lettermen, all of whom were starters as some time last year, returning from a state tourney team. Two, Jay Wheeler and Mark Peterson, are two-year award winners.

Westside, which also made the state tourney last March, has three starters back. They are 6-3 Jeff Seume, 6-5 center Rick Walstrom and 6-1 Ron Andrews.

District 4: Bellevue, Omaha North, Omaha Ryan, Papillion.

With Papillion's Mike Heck around, it will be uphill for the other three. Bellevue made the state tourney last year and coach Mike Leahy does have starter Rick Bonness (6-4) again.

District 5: Millard, Omaha Benson, Omaha Burke, Omaha Tech.

Millard will build around two-year starter Dale Peterson. Benson may be the best with Ralph Jones, Dave Grube and Don Dahlberg, although Burke, with hot-shooting Russ Bueker and an always exciting Tech club could challenge.

District 6: Fremont, Norfolk, Creighton Prep, South Sioux City.

With 17 teams in the Omaha area, with the addition of Northwest High, one club was drawn from the hat before the other 16 were assigned. Creighton Prep was picked and becomes the pre-season favorite.

Fremont, with regulars Rod Wilson and Gordie Echtenkamp returning, should be watched.

District 7: Beatrice, Columbus, Grand Island, Hastings.

Both Hastings and Columbus made the state tourney last year. But both were heavily hit by graduation. Hastings does have guards Scott Stickles and Bob Lippstreu back.

Grand Island, under new coach Bill Kropp, who moved to GI from Aurora, has potential with 6-9 Norm Behring and 6-6½ Bill Sawyer.

Beatrice returns its leading scorer, Bill Roach, and leading rebounder, Bill Armstrong.

District 8: Kearney, McCook, North Platte, Scottsbluff.

Kearney has a lot of height -- Steve Wolf at 6-8, 6-6 Loren Killion, plus Tom Green and Tom Sponberg at 6-4 -- but Scottsbluff should challenge behind 6-5 Kirk Lacy.

Fairbury Jeffs Seeking Second Class B Crown

A pre-season peek at basketball prospects in Class B has to start with tall and talented Fairbury.

Coach Charles Moore's Jeffs won the state championship last March and the top two point-getters are back again.

Bob Siegel, who was an all-state choice last year as a sophomore, and brother Tom will lead the attack.

Bob, 6-5, had 69 points in three tourney games last year, while Tom, 6-3, clipped in 43 more. They'll be aided this winter by Alan Dux, 6-6, and 6-1 guard J. R. Connell.

The 61 Class B teams of the state are divided into eight districts of eight clubs each. Single elimination tournaments at the end of the regular season will determine the state meet entries.

District 1: Auburn, Falls City, Lincoln Plus X, Nebraska City, Plattsmouth, Syracuse, Tecumseh, Waverly.

This shapes up as quite a race, with Waverly, Auburn, and Lincoln Plus X holding the inside track.

Auburn A Threat

Waverly has its leading scorer, 6-5 Scott Otley, and top rebounder, 6-5 Marty Weber, both returning.

Auburn will challenge with a trio of third-year starters, 6-2 Greg Hahn, 6-1 Bob Hemmingsen and 5-11 Dennis Rippe.

Plus coach Don Kelley has six returning lettermen, headed by forwards Mike Lien and Bob McIntyre, plus guards Nicky Payne and Paul Jablonski.

District 2: Arlington, Blair, Elkhorn, Omaha Cathedral, Omaha Gross, Omaha Holy Name, Omaha Paul VI, Tekamah.

Omaha Cathedral, regarded as one of the best in the state last winter before stumbling in its district tourney, should be tough again behind the play of Kelly Higgins (6-4) and Mike Ziesel, plus four other lettermen.

Elkhorn and Omaha Paul VI look like the closest challengers.

Elkhorn coach Gene Kruger has the knack of developing a winner. He's likely to find the combination again from a turnout of 58 hopefuls and returning regular Dan Bull.

Paul coach Frank Pecha will build around Rich Lang, Mario Mandolfo and Rich Samiak.

District 3: Aurora, Crete, Fairbury, Norris, Seward, Superior, Centennial, York.

Who can challenge Fairbury? Seward coach Rod Felix has a stable of dead-eye shooters, headed by son Tim, who could turn the trick on any given night.

Crete, behind the play of 6-3 Jerry Wendelin and Gary Gammel may also prove tough.

Centennial Has Five Vets

Centennial has five returning lettermen, but may get off to a slow start with seven of its first eight games on the road.

District 4: Ashland, Central City, Columbus Lakeview, Columbus Scotts, David City Aquinas, Hooper Logan View, Schuyler, Wahoo.

Central City coach Bob Kuma says much of the team's success will depend on the development of 6-7 sophomore pivot man Craig Gussier. Returning starting guards Mitch Johnson and Larry Abel will give the club stability.

Two-year letterman Tim Brodahl and all-conference guard Sam Tillman will lead Wahoo, while Lakeview could muster a challenge behind 6-5 Steve McWilliams and rugged Cleto Pille.

District 5: Creighton, Crofton, Hartington Cedar Catholic, Pierce, Randolph, Wayne, West Point Central Catholic, Wisner.

Wisner could be tough with returning starters Mike McGinnis, Dennis McGuire and Martin Holland if 6-6 sophomore Steve Hornback develops.

Creighton has a tall (6-7) but potent Steve Elwood, who averaged 23.5 points per game last year, while Hartington CC could challenge with regulars Randy Hemmes, Tim Dwyer, James Stevens plus 6-6 Ron Burbach on hand.

District 6: Cozad, Gothenburg, Grand Island Central Catholic, Grand Island Northwest, Holdrege, Lexington, Minden, Wood River.

Cozad, which lost the state title game to Fairbury by a single point, will be rebuilding around sometimes starter Dave Neill.

Lex and Holdrege Favorites

Lexington and Holdrege look like the co-favorites. Lex coach Tom Milsap has last year's leading scorer and rebounder in 6-5 senior center Craig Pursley. Scott Jones (6-2), who also started, and seven other lettermen are also back.

Holdrege will counter with returning regulars Dick Anderson (6-3) and Bob Peterson (6-2). Dick Gannon (6-3), an all-state football end, should also help.

District 7: Ainsworth, Albion, Atkinson West Holt, Broken Bow, Loup City, O'Neill, Ord, St. Paul.

Loup City was a Class C state tourney team last March. And coach Dan Arnold has four starters and eight lettermen returning to make the Red Raiders tough again.

Don Mroczek (6-5), Leonard Warden (6-4), Arnie Augustyn and Dan Ursanski are the regulars back.

District 8: Alliance, Chadron, Gering, Gordon, Kimball, Ogallala, Sidney, Valentine.

Alliance made the Class A state tourney last year, although none of the three returning lettermen scored in the Bulldogs lone appearance.

Chadron may be the best bet in this district. Kevin Moore, a 6-5 standout at Chadron Assumption, moved over after his school closed. He'll join Loren Killion (6-5) and Bob Baker (6-4), who were regulars for the Cards a year ago.

Adams, Mead, Odell Among Favorites

Class D Scramble Expected

Class D, the heaviest populated of all with 145 schools, will have to reduce its ranks to just eight teams through single elimination district and regional playoffs before state tournament time.

Several pre-season favorites will necessarily fall by the wayside before then. Defending state champion Benedict and Mead--though both face a tough scrap in their own districts--are in adjoining groups from which just a single state tourney entry will emerge.

The same is true of Adams and Odell, who battled for the District 1-2 berth last winter.

Three juniors made the all-state team last season and each is expected to pace his quietest in a serious bid for a tourney berth.

Mike Couch of Mead is the tallest at 6-5, while Odell's Earl Spitsnogle stretches 6-4 this fall and Kim Veerhusen of Adams measures 6-2.

A look at the combined district groupings, from which a single state tourney entry will come, reveals:

Districts 1-2: Odell has two Spitsnogles. In addition to Earl there is cousin Dan at 6-1 and 6-8 senior center Randy Wendling.

Veerhusen will have help at Adams too. Derwin Schlake is 6-4, while both Wes Finkner and Dale Rawson are 6-3.

Filley, with 6-6 Robert Wallman, Morlyn Thompson and Gerald Ideus and Table Rock behind the play of Steve Cumro, Richard Burgert and Ed Kroll will also be tough.

Don't count out Falls City Sacred Heart with guards Bill Simon and Rich Will back again.

Districts 3-4: Deshler, down from Class C, will certainly have to be reckoned with, while Byron, Davenport, Ohio and Trumbull also look tough from this group.

Deshler has the height with 6-7 Dave Fintel, 6-3 Robert Schardt and 6-2 Brad Taylor.

Byron can counter with junior Scott Eitmann, who sprouted up to 6-4 this fall, plus senior stars Marilyn Heitmann and Leon Marquart.

Davenport has returning regulars Jerry Keim, Barry Urbauer, Martin Ficken and Murray Johnson.

Districts 5-6: Defending state champ Benedict should be good again, although Guy Lief is the only returning regular.

Mead will have some other height to go with all-state Couch. Corky Charles and John Erickson are both 6-3.

Giltner, Hampton, Hordville, Marquette, Cedar Bluffs and Yutan all are expected to field strong teams from this group.

Giltner has experience, but lacks height, while Hampton will build around all-conference forward Dale Young. Hordville has its whole starting lineup back, including top scorer Randy Blase.

Marquette has four regulars returning led by Jeff Jacobsen. Randy Sukstorf at Cedar Bluffs and Yutan's Rick Heldt are looking forward to outstanding senior seasons.

Districts 7-8: Bartlett was a district champ last year and has four starters back, including leading scorer Bill Schwabe. Petersburg will be tough with 6-5 Raphael Starman and 6-6 Dave Camp.

Newcastle, with three starters paced by Dave Wendle, plus Ewing and Stuart bear watching from this group.

Districts 9-10: Amherst, Arcadia, Greeley, Spalding Academy and Stapleton appear to have the best pre-season prospects.

Don Schrweid was Amherst's leading scorer last season, while Arcadia will be paced by 6-4 Ed Gogan.

Districts 11-12: Looks like at least six toughies here in Eustis, Farnam, Overton, Holbrook, Loomis and Republican City, with some others ready in the wings.

Eustis has 6-5 Scott Johnson, while Farnam will be led by all-conference star Gary Davies.

Mike McCarter makes Overton a threat, while Holbrook coach Larry Moore has 11 lettermen returning, paced by 23-point shooter Dennis Andrews.

Rick Cruise, a 6-5 sharpshooter, is Loomis' big hope, while Republican City has a pair of good juniors in Gary Buttermore and Jerry Ott.

Districts 13-14: Culbertson, a football power, Big Springs and Venango make up a top three trio, but Trenton, Hayes Center, Paxton and Wheatland could challenge.

Culbertson will have seven senior lettermen. And they all started some games last season. Big Springs has 6-6 Wade Heidemann on hand again, while Venango has 6-4 Wayne Strand to lead the way.

Districts 15-16: Dix, Harrison and Chappell make up the big three here.

Gary Harvard and David Tobler will pace Dix, while Harrison has leaders Danny Publow and Jim Hanson both returning.

Chappell has four players back who scored 100 or more points last season, paced by Scott Clark and Les Stuzman.

Alliance St. Agnes, Sidney St. Pat's, Cody, Melbeta and Mitchell Sunflower could all muster a challenge from this area.

Class C Teams Gain Hope By Pawnee Defeat

A generation ago the cry was to break up the New York Yankees. They were too good for the rest of major league baseball.

The way Pawnee City was manhandling the rest of the Class C high school basketball teams in Nebraska, the Indians were about to be subjected to the same complaint.

Coach Larry Rubble's club swept to the state Class C hoop championship the past two years after compiling records of 26-0 and 25-1.

Pawnee won the big prize last March with 10-0-4 center Kendall Rinder on the sidelines with a broken leg. Freshman Steve Glenn stepped in to score 27 points.

Forward Sean McIntyre chipped in 26. All three, plus Sterling Barker, who also saw considerable state tourney action, are back.

But the fear of Pawnee running away from the 123-40 loss was eased the very first night of the 1971-72 season when Auburn scotched the Indians by 12 points.

Pawnee Auburn comes from the Class B ranks, but the hopes of other Class C teams riding over the hump of the Indians from the Indians' loss considerably lessened their first season.

Class C is divided into 16 districts of eight teams each. The district winners, following single elimination tournaments, will then meet in regional playoffs for the eight state tourney berths.

Here's a look at each of the double-district groupings:

Districts 1-2: Pawnee is in this bunch and certainly ranks as the favorite despite a slow start. Regular season games don't really count. It's who develops the most by district tourney time. But the Indians can certainly count on a stiff argument from Millard, Seward, Concordia, Wayne, Southern and Louisville by that time.

Millard Could Challenge

Millard, with regulars Randy Roth, Larry Hovden and Marty Anderson may have the best chance. Concordia has guards Dave Cloeter and Gary Pascholz, Southern returns to lettermen headed by Terry Milligan, while 6-5 Bill Herman and 6-1 Lee Rumph are at Louisville.

Districts 3-4: Everyone will be trying to get into the top 16. Bennington, Gretna, Valley, Clarkson, North Bend, Oakland and Seward look the toughest.

Bennington has three starters back, 6-6 Craig Schoon, 6-4 Roger Schmidt and 6-0 Rick Sheehan.

Clarkson has four regulars, headed by tops center Steve Walsan, 6-4, while Valley will rely on Randy Lines and Larry Hascliff.

Clarkson may be the best with its top six players returning. Gary Vavra and Jesse Kucera lead the pack.

Districts 5-6: Battle Creek has six lettermen returning. Premier will be paced by Barry Mabie, and Wakefield shows balance with six award winners back.

Norfolk Catholic can't be counted out with seven vets, five of them stretching from 6-2 to 6-6.

Districts 7-8: Laurel, a Class B state tourney regular, will be backed behind 6-4 George Schroeder, who has averaged 29 points a game the past two seasons.

Bloomfield, with regulars John Scott (6-2), Perry Broders (6-3) and Sam Colvin (6-2) should challenge.

Osmond, Ponca with sharpshooter Steve Forney, Spencer behind Duane Fiala, and Elkhorn Valley appear to be the best of the rest.

Districts 9-10: David City and Hebron may be the best of this group but Geneva and Henderson are among the top challengers.

All-Stater Returns

David City returns all-stater Bob Martin plus Greg Sabata and Rich Stonecker, both at 6-4.

Hebron has Terry and Dick Poppe, both 6-3, and 6-4 Mark Wolford ready.

Geneva lacks height, except for 6-3 Dan Sorge, while Henderson has 6-4 Brad Krocker, 6-3 Lowell Siebert and a fine guard in Ross Friesen.

Districts 11-12: Shelton looks like the cream of the crop with three starters returning. Ward Bilsland was the team's leading scorer and rebounder, and 6-6 Mike Smith is ready for his junior year after gaining much needed experience. Rick Cole will be out for a while with a football injury.

Sandy Creek, Hastings St. Cecilia and Ansley, 17-3 last year and with five lettermen back, could challenge.

North Loup-Scotia has six vets returning, but needs some height to go with all-state footballer Craig Wegner (6-4).

Districts 13-14: Bertrand, Curtis Medicine Valley and Wilcox appear to be the teams to beat.

Bertrand, 19-4 in Class D last season, has six returnees, including Scott High and Randy Hock (6-3), both all-conference performers.

Rod Schultz is Medicine Valley's main scoring threat, although the team lacks overall height. Wilcox has six two-year lettermen, including Carl Woollen, who averaged 18 a game last season.

Districts 15-16: Look out for perennial tourney entry Grant, Hebron and the three M's from district 16, Minatare, Mitchell and Morrill.

Grant returns three starters, Mike Mathes and Gary Gloy, both 6-2, and guard Jim Lakey.

Hershey will counter with 6-4, Dave McConnell, while Mitchell has lots of height with 6-3 Tom Hale, 6-6 Frank Prautzsch and 6-6 Kelley Scott.

Ignited by Thomas' second consecutive game-opening touchdown run back, the Cowboys exploded to a 28-point first quarter, smothered Joe Namath's first starting assignment in 19 regular season games and breezed to a 9-3 record that put them a game in front of Washington in the National Football Conference East.

Roger Staubach, the NFC's top passer, completed 10 of 15 passes for 168 yards, including a pair of 27-yard scoring tosses to Hill and an 18-yarder to Duane Thomas, before he

LaSalle Beaten By Hofstra

New York (AP)—Seton Hall edged Harvard 81-80 on Ken House's last-second tip-in and Hofstra defeated LaSalle 58-56 Saturday in a college basketball doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

Bob McKillop scored the go-ahead basket with three minutes remaining as Hofstra surged in front 58-52 in the final minute and held on for the victory.

LaSalle built up a 28-23 lead late in the first half but then fell behind as Hofstra rallied for a 32-29 halftime margin.

The score was tied six times in the second half as neither of the defensively strong teams could mount a big lead.

Dave Bell paced Hofstra with 12 points and McKillop added 10. Jo DiCocco of La Salle led all scorers with 15.

Seton Hall rallied early in the second half and built up a 63-58 lead at the 8:16 mark. But Harvard tied it at 75-all with 3:14 to go.

Minnesota Rolls Over Iowa State

Ames, Iowa (AP)—Towering Minnesota, using a telling rebound advantage, pulled away from Iowa State in the final seven minutes Saturday night for a 72-58 non-conference basketball victory.

Minnesota, 2-0, whipped Iowa State 48-27 on the boards, but trailed 33-31 at halftime and didn't shake the Cyclones until an eight-point burst opened a 63-53 lead with 5:08 left.

Junior college transfer Ron Benhagen led the Gophers with 25 points and a game high 18 rebounds. Clyde Turner chipped in with 16. Jim Brewer 14 and reserve Bob Nix 12.

Iowa State went more than nine minutes without a field goal after gaining a 51-51 tie with 10:28 remaining. By the time Eric Heft broke the drought, Minnesota led 69-54.

JFK Gals Win, 64-50

Wahoo — The John F. Kennedy girls basketball team scored a 64-50 victory over Real Refrigeration of Milwaukee Saturday night with two freshmen leading the Patriotettes in scoring.

Barb Wischmeier hit 21 points while Linda White collected 16 points in downing the No. 6 gals team in the nation.

The Jayhawks won by default when the Sooners' Jim Cook jumped off the starting too early on the third leg of the four-man relay.

The 14 points awarded to the winner would have been enough to pass Kansas without the disqualification.

Iowa State finished third, Missouri was fourth, Oklahoma State fifth, Colorado sixth and Nebraska seventh.

Warmath Quits Coaching Duties

Minneapolis (AP)—Paul Giel, two-time University of Minnesota All-American football player, was named the school's athletic director Saturday and football coach Murray Warmath was relieved of football duties in a sweeping shakeup of the Gopher athletic department.

Warmath, who made two Rose Bowl appearances and posted a 97-84-10 record in two years at Mississippi State and 18 at Minnesota, was reappointed as assistant athletic director in charge of special projects.

Malcolm Moos, university president who announced the appointments that followed the resignation of Athletic Director Marsh Ryman, said the Minnesota board of regents will meet next Friday to approve them.

Giel, 39, earlier had rejected an offer to guide the Gopher athletic program, which showed a deficit of $150,000 for 1970-71. He telephoned Moos, and said he had changed his mind Friday.

"I got to thinking what the University of Minnesota gave me," said Giel, who has been sports director of WCCO Radio for the last nine years.

"When I came out of Winona, Minn., I was Joe Average. I owe everything I have to the university. I can't tell you how many telephone calls, letters I received asking me to reconsider the job."

'Hookey' Playing Hunters Score Success at Plattsmouth

By BOB MUNGER
Plattsmouth—Oddly enough, some wives think of hunting as only a step removed from gambling or wenching, or drinking—and a short step at that.

So for that reason, two Lincolinites who hunted geese here last week would answer only to the names of Roger and Bill.

"It's better that way," they said, adding that their joyless spouses were sure they were each hard at work.

And what do you do if you get unlucky and kill a goose?

"You come home right on the dot at 5 o'clock and say—'hey, hon, look at what some guy at the office gave me!'"

Both of them had that problem to solve after a day's hunt at the Plattsmouth Waterfowl Management Area near here. Bill with a couple of normal sized blue and snow geese. Roger with a gigantic snow goose that weighed out at the official scales on the area at 6-pounds, 2-ounces.

"I'm sure that's the biggest snow goose we've checked out of here all season," Joe Hyland of Lincoln Game and Parks Commission supervisor said. "They normally run closer to four-pounds. This baby is a real giant."

To get here from the Lincoln area is simple — there are two easy routes. Either go out Highway 34 to Union Corner and then north on Highways 73 and 75 directly into Plattsmouth, or turn off Highway 34 on Highway 50 instead. Go north into Louisville, then east on Highway 66 into Plattsmouth.

The hunting area is the first road to the left after crossing the railroad tracks on the east edge of town. It is relatively small, only 1,500 acres in total with 35 acres of water, but it supports great numbers of waterfowl. Last week it supported a bunch.

"We estimate there are about 30,000 geese here now," Hyland said, "but hunters are finding that they are flying mighty high. These geese are smart. They've been shot at many times, and they know how to cope with that."

But even weather guaranteed to freeze a wet tongue to a pump handle failed to discourage Rog and Bill, who had already braved their wives' possible discovery of their "playing hookey." The temperature stood at 15 degrees in Lincoln when they left, with a north wind, a slight hint of snow in the air and a heavy fog covering the land.

The start of legal shooting hours arrived, but geese were flying straight up like a 727 commanded by a pilot who hated land, then leveling out at a hundred yards or more to go out to feed.

And in the fog, the white geese disappeared. Only their black wing tips were visible. The darker blue geese were much easier to spot, but sighting them was rather academic, as they flew so high no shotgun made would hurl shot to that altitude.

But almost on the dot at 10 a.m. a flock made a strategic mistake. They came out of the refuge in a slow climb, maybe 50-55 yards up when they arrived over Rog and Bill's pit, led by the big snow.

The hunters were armed correctly. Roger had a three-inch magnum gun and was using No. 4 shot. Bill had a short magnum chamber but hurled No. 2 shot at the big birds. And three came tumbling down, the big snow gliding off for two or three hundred yards before falling, the others killed dead in their tracks.

"Seriously, we had to lead them 15-20 feet," Bill said. "That's a good car length — maybe more."

But then came the big problem — getting home with a good excuse.

"Nothin' to it," Roger said. "We told our wives another guy at the office shot them and gave 'em to us. How can you beat that?"

Odd, isn't it, what a dedicated hunter will do to enjoy his sport and still keep peace in the family?

Successful hunter checks over big snow goose.

Deer Hunt Ratio Of Success Same

With some 13,390 deer taken during the recently completed firearm-deer season, Nebraska gunners recorded a 43.9 percent success, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

Upper Platte Unit hunters chalked up the highest tally, with 738 deer harvested for a ratio of 57.6 percent.

Since the first modern-day season in 1945, the number of deer harvested has increased from 361 that year to a high of 17,073 in 1966. The number of permits authorized has also increased steadily over the years. This season, 31,109 licenses were authorized. The success score is about the same as in the previous two seasons when the number of licenses was similar.

The highest percentage success on record in Nebraska occurred in 1956, when only 9,650

Trailsmoke by Bob Munger

Perhaps the recent case of the stopping of feedlot pollution on Long Pine Creek in north central Nebraska by the combined efforts of the Lincoln chapter and Nebraska chapter of the Izaak Walton League had more far reaching effects than even they knew.

It seems as though the waves they made slopped water into the faces of Congress, whether or not the congressmen will admit it.

At least it is a matter of record that in November, when the Senate passed the "Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1971," Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas commented in detail on pesticides, fertilizers and animal wastes as pollutants.

Sen. Dole said that the present situation and the outlook for future developments in livestock and poultry production shows that waste management systems are required to prevent wastes generated in concentrated production areas from causing serious harm to surface and ground waters.

Good Waste Production

He said some 115 million dairy and beef cattle, 20 million sheep and lambs, 67 million hogs and over 900 million poultry of all kinds produced an estimated 1.6 to 1.8 billion tons of manure each year.

"This quantity is more than 12 times the amount produced by the human population," Sen. Dole told Congress. "Fortunately, only a small portion of this manure is produced under conditions having a high potential for pollution."

Sen. Dole then told the members of the Senate that the bill provides for a pollution prevention program.

And there are other indications of official Washington waking up to the fact that feedlot pollution that kills fish is harmful to humans.

Dr. R. E. Johnson, representing the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife of the U. S. Department of the Interior, told the Senate that, "We decided early in 1970 that cattle feedlots were the greatest single source of stream pollution detrimental to our water management efforts."

Also, in late October, the President's Water Pollution Control Advisory Board began an investigation into agricultural pollution.

Meeting in Denver, the board first toured cattle feedlots near Greeley, Colo., then flew to Omaha and Pratt, Kan., for other field inspections. One feedlot they checked feeds some 100,000 head of cattle on 400 acres of land.

Denver Meeting Held

Finally, an open meeting was held in Denver in late October for the purpose of receiving testimony from a variety of witnesses representing federal, state and local governments, educational institutions and segments of the public.

Dr. T. C. Byerly of the U.S. Department of Agriculture told the board that the annual per capita consumption of beef in the U.S. has increased from 75 pounds to 112 in 20 years, with the number of cattle marketed from feedlots increasing from 15 million in 1962 to 25 million in 1970.

He noted that eight states already have specific feedlot statutes which require registration of confined feeding operations, and some impose conditions that no pollutants will leave an operator's premises.

Which was all that the Izaak Walton League had asked in the first place. They only ask that the streams in Nebraska be kept clean, as clean as possible, for fish ... for humans ... and for the general betterment of the environment.

Seems like little enough to ask.

The minimum prices set by the board were based on a formula which allowed different prices in five different

NPPD Rate Hike Slated

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) has announced plans to increase wholesale and retail electrical rates an average of 9.7% effective Jan. 1, 1972.

Calculated to offset rising power production costs, the rate hike will affect 26 rural power districts served at wholesale, the Loup River Public Power District, 62 cities and towns served at wholesale, and another 271 cities and towns served at retail.

The effect on Lincoln, NPPD's largest single wholesale power customer, is to boost power purchase costs about 11%, or $1 million, a year. City officials predict this will result in a retail rate increase early in 1972 — the first retail rate increase since 1951.

The state's rural public power districts estimated the wholesale power hike is actually about 18.5% for them, which will boost their annual power purchase costs some $2.1 million.

Division Leads Up for Grabs Key NFL Games Slated

By Associated Press

The Miami Dolphins and Minnesota Vikings, rolling along with the best records in the National Football League, are in position to clinch division titles Sunday and avoid head-to-head collisions with their closest pursuers the following week.

But it will take help—a lot of help. And it'll have to come from two of the NFL's weakest links—Buffalo and Philadelphia.

The Dolphins, with a 9-1-1 record that gives them a 1½-game lead over Baltimore's 8-3 Colts, can clinch the Eastern Division title in the American Conference by defeating New England if Buffalo cooperates and knocks off the defending Super Bowl champions.

The Vikings, with a 9-2 record and an identical 1½-game lead over Detroit's 7-3-1 Lions, can wrap up the Central Division title in the National Conference by beating San Diego if Philadelphia chips in with a victory over the runners-up.

Barring that, the teams likely will settle the races themselves when they meet the following Saturday — Miami going against the Colts in Baltimore and Minnesota tangling with the Lions at home.

Besides the games involving the AFC East and NFC Central leaders, there are seven other games scheduled for Sunday—five of which involve division leaders or runners up.

AFC Western leader Oakland is at Atlanta in one, Cincinnati at AFC Central leader Cleveland, AFC Central runner-up Pittsburgh at Houston, the New York Giants at NFC East runner-up Washington and New Orleans at NFC West runner-up Los Angeles. In other games, Chicago is at Denver and Green Bay at St. Louis.

The New York Jets met Dallas' NFC East leading Cowboys in a Saturday afternoon game.

And Monday night, in a game that will be nationally televised by ABC, starting at 8 p.m., AFC West runner-up Kansas City is at NFC West leading San Francisco.

The three division winners in each conference automatically qualify for the NFL's post-season playoffs leading up to the Super Bowl. The second-place team in each conference with the best percentage also will be included in the playoffs.

In the event of ties, either for division leadership or among the contenders for the "wild card" spot that goes to the best second-place team, there are a whole series of criteria designed to resolve such situations.

SUNDAY JOURNAL AND STAR STAFF COLORPHOTO BY BOB GORHAM

Handmade Christmas Gifts Filled With Love

" 'Tis the season to be jolly" . . . and generous.

With a great many people attempting to stretch the budget to cover the ordinary costs of living, the prospect of finding appropriate Christmas gifts becomes difficult.

Many people have found a solution. They have made Christmas presents for loved ones.

Classes Held

Several classes in gift-making have been held in recreation centers, in department stores and at the YWCA.

For instance at Malone Center, a group of women have attended classes in Christmas crafts and during the eight-week period have created various things for gifting.

They have made crocheted bead necklaces, candles, decoupage boxes, Christmas tree ornaments, wreathes, elves, felt doorhandle decorations, vases, candle containers—it's almost a case of you name it, someone in the class has made it.

Ecologists are delighted that some people are using such items as glass jars, bottles and cans for their gift-making materials.

A special bottle cutter is a very useful item for turning bottles and jars into vases and candle holders. Spray paint is a great transformer.

Decoupage

Decoupage is the art of decorating with paper. Many artistic persons are making sewing boxes, wastepaper baskets, kitchen spice holders — many articles — and decorating them with the decoupage.

One woman who is adept with a sewing machine is making outsize bridge table covers in felt and corduroy. She puts large monograms on one corner. Edgings are in contrasting colored fringe, ribbon or self material.

Those people handy with crochet hooks and knitting needles have been working on sweaters, berets, gloves, etc. One lucky young woman will receive a knit dress her mother has spent many hours on.

Stores carry kits for those people who want to be creative but are lacking in instinct and knack.

There are several books which give full directions for handmade articles.

Among the books at the Lincoln Bennett Martin Library which might be helpful for the person who wants to take a whack at making gifts are "How To Make Beautiful Gifts" by Raymond and Marguerite Yates; "Handcraft" by Amon and Rawson; "Complete Book of Decoupage" by Frances Wing and "Creative Knitting and Crochet" by Rosalin Carlson.

Rep. Shirley Chisholm

She Wants 'To Run' U.S.

By DONALD LAMBRO, UPI

Washington — When people ask Rep. Shirley Chisholm "the real reasons" she is seeking the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, she is incredulous.

"People don't understand that I really want to be President of the United States, said the first black woman elected to Congress. "I really want to run this country.

"You have Golda Meir of Israel and Indira Gandhi of India, why not a woman President?"

Mrs. Chisholm also makes clear she means to reform the Democratic Party.

"By God they are going to have to reckon with me in Miami," the New York lawmaker told UPI. "The Democratic Party will never be the same again."

Mrs. Chisholm plans to enter party primaries in North Carolina, Wisconsin, Florida and California. Her formal declaration of candidacy is expected in January.

Meanwhile, the Brooklyn-born woman, 47, is devoting her weekends to addressing women's groups, welfare organizations, religious clubs, campus youth groups, and poor minorities. A coalition of these blocs, she claims, will win her the nomination.

Her Own Constituency

She seldom speaks before regular party groups, maintaining that "it doesn't pay to go before the establishment Democrats. That's not my bag. I have to establish my own constituency."

Claiming the support of "loose organizations" in more than 29 states, Mrs. Chisholm describes her campaign as a grass roots effort. She declines to say who is putting up the $300,000 she estimates she will need.

Her 1968 campaign for Congress, she said, cost $12,000, relatively low as such things go.

"You don't need to be a millionaire to be President," she said. "You have to be creative, have charisma. And I'm told I have it. And you have to have brainpower."

Divided Party

Much of Mrs. Chisholm's strategy for next year's primaries is based on the belief that other Democratic candidates will divide the regular party vote, leaving her

Fire Prevention Tips For Holiday Season

By MARGARET DANA

Every year December brings a combination of holidays, cold weather and fun which seems to have a deadly reaction. The injury and death list from accidents, especially from fire or electrical products, continues to climb.

Yet if you will take a little time now to think and plan, you could prevent this unhappy "misery list" from spoiling the holidays for you and others.

Start with this basic point: Fabrics burn. Some burn faster than others, some create poisonous fumes, some melt and burn like boiling lead. And still others which may not be dangerous in themselves, can turn into fiendish hazards when they are used in the wrong way, for the wrong purpose.

As the holiday season starts, I urge consumers to take time to read and study the fact about flammability in fabrics. An excellent and simple report on this appears as one of a series of leaflets for educators, prepared as a public service by the Celanese Corp.

Fire Prevention

It discusses briefly why a new Flammable Fabrics Act was passed in 1967, what has been done since by government and industry to get rid of the most dangerous textiles, and what our responsibility as civilized consumers is to avoid misuse or ignorant use of flammable fabrics.

Here are six primary points from this leaflet that could save many lives and millions of dollars of property damage from fire!

1. Keep matches and cigaret lighters away from children. (And that means away—out of reach.)
2. Never smoke in bed.
3. Wear tight or short-sleeved garments when cooking. (Watch those ruffy, lacy robes for either you or the children. They're invitations to disaster near a cookstove.)
4. Use only those electric heaters that have protective covers or screens between the heat and people.
5. Unplug electric irons when not in use.

6. Teach children to understand and be aware of the hazards of fire.

The second important piece of safety information has to do with your Christmas trees.

UL Safety Tips

Underwriters' Laboratories, whose job is to test all kinds of products for public safety, urges these cautions in buying a tree, and keeping it in your home: Get as fresh a tree as possible and keep it in water as long as it is in your home; plastic trees have become popular but you cannot tell from looking at them which are safe, and which will easily flame.

So look for a label which says the tree is listed by Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) for meeting safety requirements. This means the plastic will burn as long as a flame is held against it, but is self-extinguishing as soon as the flame is removed.

UL also worries about trees made of metal. Never use decorative electric lights on them. The sharp metal needles can cut the wire insulation, and the tree becomes a live danger.

Check your strings of Christmas lights. Some are listed by UL as safe for indoor use only, while some may be used either indoors or out. And never use frayed cords or cords with broken insulation.

And from a third source, our faithful National Fire Protection Assn. (NFPA), here are some words of advice to consumers based on NFPA's many years of trying to save lives and property from fire.

Never, never put lighted candles on a tree or near any evergreen decorations. Don't put trees or evergreens near any kind of heat outlet—hot air duct, radiator, TV set, or fireplace—it dries them so fast they become almost explosively flammable.

For decorations around the house use nonburnable materials like glass fiber, asbestos, or flame-retardant items. Poly-

Win: Split Party Vote

a coalition of women, minorities, the young, the poor.

"The vote is going to be so fragmented, it's going to work to my advantage," she said. "I'm going to do well in California; I can taste it."

Mrs. Chisholm pretty much ignores the other contenders with the notable exception of front-runner Edmund S. Muskie, who has said a national ticket with a black vice presidential running mate cannot be elected.

She recalls campaigning with Muskie during his 1968 vice presidential race and introducing the Maine Democrat to black political leaders in Brooklyn.

"I never said then that the time was not right for a Polish vice president," she remarked bitterly.

"Everyone is saying that at least Muskie was frank. There are people in this Congress who have been frank for years. But where has it gotten us?"

The Congresswoman sometimes uses humor to make her point. Once asked by Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., if she would consider him as a running mate, Mrs. Chisholm cracked: "Sorry, Ed, I don't think the country is ready for a Jewish vice president."

But if her bid for her party's top nomination demonstrates anything at all about Shirley Chisholm, it is the way she feels her House seat should be used.

She is harshly critical of Congress as an institution incapable of change and says she doesn't "depend on it for the satisfaction of helping America. You can't change this body by being here."

Terming Congress' seniority system "the senility system," she contends that many of its leaders are mainly concerned "with personal gain and the perpetuation of their power."

"I've got to go outside Congress if I want to bring about change," she said.

Mrs. Chisholm has made speeches in 43 states and visited 60 college campuses during her three years in the House.

Speaking fluent Spanish, she finds it as easy to address Chicanos in New Mexico as she does Puerto Ricans and blacks in New York.

"I am moving about the country, moving, moving," she said. "Women's groups have gone wild over my candidacy."

A thin, attractive woman, who speaks rapidly, never using a text, she says she charges anywhere from "free to $2,000" for a speech, earmarking the money for her campaign.

"I could make $250,000 annually, easy," she said.

Still, she is bothered because many people "don't take me seriously. A woman just doesn't run for President. A black woman particularly doesn't run for President. But a white doesn't always have to be President."

She sees America as "essentially a racist country," but doesn't find racism among the coalition groups from whom she expects support.

"They have a deeper commitment to social justice."

Perhaps the real reason behind her frenetic energy and almost messianic drive onto the national political scene can be found in a story she tells with a trace of bitterness.

Several years ago as an aggressive worker within Brooklyn Democratic politics, a local party official told her if she worked hard within the party, "one day you'll be a leader of the black community here."

"I never forgot that," she said. "As if that was as far as they expected me to go..."

"I vowed then that if I ever had the opportunity to move out onto the national scene, this country was going to know that Shirley Chisholm passed this way."

Books 'Excite' Art Lover

By LINDA ULRICH

In today's world of automation, animation and audio-visual wonders, for Mrs. Norman Geske, "a book is still the most exciting thing to me."

A native of Sutton, she remembers the thrill of going to the library as a child. "The library wasn't very good but I reread a great many of the books."

"I can remember the smell of old tattered books," she said. "And I still like that smell."

Mrs. Geske received a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Omaha and a bachelor of science in library science from the University of Denver.

Availability

A past executive secretary of the Nebraska Public Library Commission, she believes the state's goal should be "making books, films and records available to all inaccessible areas (in Nebraska) as well as to those who cannot get across the street to the library, such as the physically handicapped and the blind."

In addition, as one of the Nebraska Arts Council directors, Mrs. Geske stresses creation of a statewide cultural atmosphere so that "everyone has access to all major phases of the arts."

Although a small town public library will never have a budget large enough to become a self-sufficient cultural center, these small libraries are becoming parts of regional networks, she explained.

Better Places

Helping coordinate the libraries of the various state agencies to eliminate duplication of services and helping to make small town libraries a better place for people to find whatever they need—"this is the kind of thing that excites me most," she said enthusiastically.

"I get on a soapbox about the state of Nebraska," she said with a smile. "If we become more positive and enthusiastic and work to overcome our problems... we can afford to have the very best and we should."

Her affiliations reflect her love of the arts. She is past president and a member both of the Nebraska Library Assn., the Nebraska Arts Council and a member of the American Library Assn. and Nebraska Art Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Geske (he is director of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Mrs. Norman Geske

Sheldon Art Gallery) have just returned from four months of travel in Europe.

Enjoyed

Mrs. Geske enjoyed the European art and music but was most impressed by the children there. "Although many of the older people, especially the women, look like they have worked too hard for too many years, the children are extremely handsome and healthy looking."

"There's still hope if we can keep away from wars and give them a chance to grow up in a better world," she said.

SUMMERS MATERNITY

Money in Your Pocket

By Martha Patton

How do you stand financially? And I don't mean what are the results when you balance assets against liabilities. I mean how do you stand each month?

Do you hold over unpaid bills or have you begun to raid your savings to meet them? Are such withdrawals being replaced? Are you carrying one or more personal loans? Have you borrowed on your life insurance to clean up obligations? Are you following a plan to replace this money?

Do you have a healthy emergency-reserve fund (liquid assets equal to one third to one half of your annual net income)? Are there other assets that could be counted on to help carry you through a longer emergency?

Within Income

In brief, are you living within your income and do you have a way to take care of your family for three to six months if that income were cut off? If not, you may be headed for a serious debt problem.

How much debt can you safely carry?

Each case is different. Forget anything you've read or heard about "20% of income" being a safe amount to allocate for payments. That figure—or any other—is meaningless.

And anyway, who do you think decided on 20%? The money merchants, that's who. The money merchants made it up. The schools that teach money management picked it up and those who write on money management solemnly repeated "20%" until, first thing you know, it seemed to make sense. That is until you think about it.

4 Steps

Actually, you don't need anyone to spell out how much debt you can afford. You already know. If you don't, four simple steps will tell you:

1. Do you have an emergency-reserve fund? If you don't, forget steps two, three and four. You have no business buying anything but absolute necessities until such a fund is accumulated.

2. What is your monthly income? This means all take-home pay and any other regular dependable income after taxes. Don't include windfall money or such things as bonuses and commissions if you can't count on them.

3. What is it costing you to live each month? How little could you get by on?

4. Now subtract the minimum amount it takes you to live from your net income. This difference could save you 20 into debt payment.

Too Simple

It sounds too simple to need saving but if you're spending every available penny, if there's no place left to cut, you can't assume another payment. Even if the TV has gone out completely, you can't afford to get a new one if it means buying on time when there's no money for payments.

If you're finding it hard to make ends meet in your present house you don't think about a larger one—no matter how crowded you may be. If it's all you can do to pay December bills, you can't seriously consider an expensive February vacation.

For no matter what kind of life you think your particular income warrants, the truth is that NO income warrants any thing unless that income pays for it.

No Better Way

And there is no better way out of the bind of unpaid bills than to spend less this month—and next—so that you not only catch up but keep up.

If your income simply won't cover expenses and payments, you may already have a debt problem.

Next Saturday night Pershing Auditorium will once again be transformed into a "crystal palace."

Next Saturday Lincolinites in formal finery and varying array of headdresses will attend the Lincoln Symphony Guild's Headdress Ball.

Headdresses have never been mandatory for those attending the event, but wearing a headdress adds more glamor to the occasion.

There are four categories of headdress in the contest—most beautiful, most original, most humorous and best couple. Judges of the headdresses will be Fred Wells, Charles Thone, Leo Kopp and Mrs. A. B. Sheldon of Lexington.

And the Headdress Parade during which the winners are chosen is an extra bit of fun for persons attending the ball.

Regardless of the size of the parade and the number of entrants in the contest, the event is one of the most gala listed on Lincoln's social calendar.

Mrs. John Baldwin is ball chairman.

Castle Is Home For Farm Family

By MARGUERITE DAVIS

Washington (UPI) — Farmer Raymond Nelson, a former major in the British army lives in what surely is one of the most spectacular farm houses on either side of the Atlantic Ocean.

An 1860 Victorian-style castle, it was built 111 years ago on the Isle of Mull in the Hebrides Islands off the western coast of Scotland.

Mrs. Nelson, the former Janet Farr of Chevy Chase, Md., met her husband on a trip to Nairobi. They were married in 1964 and lived in England and the Far East until Nelson decided to realize a long held ambition. To farm in Scotland.

He found Glengorm Castle on a 5,000-acre site, and in 1970 moved his wife and their three small children, 5-year-old twin girls and a son, 2, to their new home.

As far as Mrs. Nelson was concerned, her feeling for the castle was something less than love at first sight.

"I'll never live in that place," she said when she first saw it at the end of a short ferry ride from the mainland.

"It just stood there, looming out of the mist, the land surrounding it covered with bracken and heather," she recalled. "Raymond talked me into it, finally, but I was frightened about the size of the castle. I just kept looking at all the chimneys and windows."

The castle has six turrets and a big tower, and no central heating. There are 40 chimneys and more than 40 rooms, but Nelson dismissed a report of 365 windows.

Electric "fires" are installed in the family rooms to make them habitable in the winter, and a big log fire burns almost all year in the castle's big hall.

A critic once described the castle as a folly, phony and ostentatious.

Janet Nelson would not accept that.

"It looks grim," she conceded, "but it has its own personality. In a sense, it is very graceful."

She also acknowledged that many visiting friends from the United States clearly do not envy her, but she said that by now she is happy on the Scottish island.

Nelson breeds livestock, 1,300 sheep and 300 breeding cattle.

Mrs. Nelson said she is too busy to be bored ever. She paints a good deal, she said, and gardening is a constant and pleasant chore.

The land is beautiful in the spring, she says, with "hundreds of thousands of daffodils" and fragrant, long-stemmed narcissus, and in season bluebells provide a deep blue carpet.

Their beach is of white sand, and the Atlantic at that point is shallow enough to make a good playground for children, she said.

She denied the assumption that their castle is isolated. The small, "friendly" town of Tobermory is only a 15-minute drive, she said, and friends live only 30 minutes away in the other direction.

Mrs. Nelson said that after her first trip away from Mull, she was reluctant to return to the castle, but added this no longer is true. After all, she said, not many people have a living room window that overlooks the Atlantic.

styrene foam makes fine decorations, but it can be a serious fire hazard. Be careful where you put them—and don't make candleholders out of Polystyrene!

Costumes for plays, parties, or for Santa Claus ought to be selected very carefully. Unless labeled "flame retardant," most things like masks, whiskers, and costumes can become torches.

And a final urgent note — check those stage sets, stage curtains, etc. Building codes require fire-retardant materials for school and public building stages, but some bad ones do occasionally get past school authorities.

Nursing Nuns Volunteer Help

Halifax (AP)—Two Nova Scotia nursing sisters will spend the next six months looking after lepers, abandoned children and people dying destitute in Calcutta.

Sister Margaret MacDonald of Sydney and Sister Susan Duggan of East Dover, 1971 graduates of the Halifax Infirmary School of Nursing, answered a call for volunteers from Mother Teresa of Calcutta.

Mother Teresa, a Yugoslav nun, won the 1971 Pope John XXIII Peace prize for her 20 years of work among the sick and poor in Northern India.

In Calcutta she operates a hospital for the dying destitute, a home for abandoned children and a hospital for lepers.

Labor-saving Devices Produce Kitchen Mania

By LA VERNA HASSLER

Fairmont — Up to a certain point labor-saving devices are great. But I abhor the suggestion of engineers, scientists and politicians who tell us we are at the 'summit of a household revolution that will give us nothing but push-button gadgets in the kitchen.

Nonsense! It is a malaise of our society that the machine is now competing with man. Labor-saving devices are already cluttering up my kitchen and I have reached the point of no return.

Take my mixer for instance (and I wish you would). This machine was contrived to make for increased domestic tranquility.

Ominous Roar

However the last time I made a cake I became aware of an ominous roar in the motor. I shut the little monster off, rapped it smartly with a meat cleaver and lifted it from the base. I turned the switch and it purred like a kitten . . . a tiger kitten that is.

This was gratifying until I suddenly realized my cake batter was full of ball bearings, rattling and clanging about in the bottom of the bowl.

I dispensed information promptly and generously until the man of the house appeared and relieved me of the roaring monster while I finished beating the batter by hand.

'Lost Its Pop'

I also have a pop up toaster. Unfortunately it has lost its pop. In fact it has only a small phitttt. It is positively revolting to put the slices of bread into the grooves and wait on the side lines with a bucket of water in hand to extinguish the blaze from the charred bread.

Unfortunately, I am not a do-it-yourselfer but I did invert the toaster for closer scrutiny.

"Press Here," was visibly engraved on the catch tray for crumbs. This I did. Nothing happened. I pressed again. Just how many pounds of pressure per square inch was needed, I wondered.

By now I was fighting combat fatigue with two broken fingernails and a black and blue index finger. Spurning the agony of indecision I exercised all the feminine pressure I had. This took care of everything.

It Slipped

The toaster slipped from the table and skidded across the floor, disengaging the tray at the bottom. It also broke the handles and lever and dented the chassis.

"Oh well, what's wrong with toast made under the broiler of the stove?" I muttered, trembling like the strings of a broken zither.

Now I am keeping a jaundiced eye on the clothes dryer. For some strange reason super fast heat has turned out to be a frigid blast from the North Pole.

I have twisted knobs, turned dials and consulted a slide rule to get the mechanical dryer to function properly. Clouting the controls with my fist has also failed.

Trouble

"I think the trouble lies in the controls," I told him. Dutifully the man of the house checked the controls.

"A-Okay," he reported.

That it happened to be the wrong information did not obscure my motives. At the present time my dryer, the great labor-saving piece of equipment is scattered about the floor of the utility room awaiting new parts which will no doubt be in on the next train.

In the interim I am looking for a wash board and a tub. If this nation is to survive we must be prepared to meet the challenge with the same sort of ingenuity as our grandmothers.

'Sounds Fine'

I could brew myself a cup of coffee in the automatic coffee maker, hot as fire and strong as sin to bolster my morale. In retrospect, it sounds fine. In reality the red light comes on indicating the coffee is done before it begins to boil. "One, two, three, four," I chant gritting my teeth.

"How about fixing the coffee-maker so I can caffeine myself to death?" I beg. "I saved all the parts from the toaster."

He gave me the same look he reserves for me when I tell him I've been driving the car without water. I wonder why!

Blind Sculptress Captures the World of Children

New York (UPI) — Lucille Spiro-Smith sculpts the world of the child because "I'm a children freak."

Concentration on the young sets her apart from most other artists. But what makes her even more unusual is the fact that Mrs. Spiro-Smith is legally blind. With contact lenses in the one eye that functions, she has about 10% vision.

"I like the honesty of a child, the freedom, doing its own thing as it were," said the dainty brunette sculptress whose works capture the world of children from the games they play (follow the leader), to parent-child relationships (a mother and child sculpture is called "Lullaby"), to a solitary youngster huddled in a corner ("he might be trying his first smoke") to the adolescent girl wallflower to the sculpted heads of a boy and girl named "Puppy Love."

For her one "man" show of 46 sculptures at the Jewish Guild for The Blind, Mrs. Spiro-Smith devoted one whole center section in the exhibition hall to a child's playground. It included children on swings, on a teeter-totter, on a slide, dancing around a maypole, climbing a fence, playing in a jungle gym, playing "Simon Says."

Mrs. Spiro-Smith (a combination of her maiden and married names) does not use child models for her sculptures. All the figures are done from her imagination and vivid memories — you see, the sculptress began to go blind when she was 14, loss of sight caused by uveitis, an inflammation of the eye. By the time she was 21, she had lost all sight. The small percentage since restored in the left eye is thanks to several operations ("about 12 I think") including those for cataracts that developed.

No-nos

"I always feel as if I'd gone to every doctor who was an eye specialist," she said in an interview at the Jewish Guild Building. "I got a lot of no-nos."

It was Dr. Joseph Laval of Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, who finally through intricate surgery was able to restore some vision. It was at Mt. Sinai too that she met a patient who became her husband, Joseph Smith, a businessman now deceased. The couple had one son, John, now 19, an accomplished artist also.

The sculptress models most of her little figures in wax and then has them cast in bronze by a long island firm with the kilns and other equipment needed.

Her first "break" with a gallery showing came when a neighbor saw her delicate artistry and sent her to see Charles Mann, who runs a fine arts gallery. In New York and national competition, she now has six firsts.

I asked her how with such minimal vision she could sculpt fine details — eyes, hands, hair and the like. "Oh, I have all sorts of magnifying lens," she said.

The sculptress is largely self-educated (she was still in high school when her sight began to go). She has a trigger-quick mind, and keeps up with what's going on in the world with the magnifying glass which permits her to read a few minutes at a time, uses the recording for the blind books and music and reads from tape. She knows Braille but elects not to use it.

I asked her if she ever felt any bitterness at loss of sight. "No," she said, "never bitterness. Frustration, yes. Frustration of waiting for someone to go with me, at wanting to read more. I was awfully lucky to have parents who encouraged me to run, to feel..."

She recalled that when she makes her regular visits to her eye doctor, she always says "thank you" as a routine politeness when she leaves. He always tells her, "don't thank me, thank God."

Quotable Quotes

By Associated Press

Some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"Doctors have testified that I never committed an act of violence in the state hospital and I didn't in the seven years I was out. I took care of children." — Winnie Ruth Judd, convicted trunk murderess of the 1930s, after being granted parole.

"I am taking along a big sack." — Premier Golda Meir of Israel, on her way to a meeting with President Nixon, asked if she expected to bring back any Phantom jet-fighters.

"I think a woman can be a producer and still remain feminine — if she knows she doesn't have to do it. And I don't have to." — Dolores Taylor, who produced the film, "Billy Jack."

"You get the same exhilaration from a good operation that you do from a good performance." — Dr. Tenley Albright, former ice skating champion, now a Boston surgeon.

"Women let men work for them, think for them and bear responsibility for them. Women exploit men. Yet men are strong, intelligent and imaginative while women are weak, stupid and without imagination. Why, then, are men exploited by women and not the other way around?" — Ester Vilar, German woman physician and author of "The Trained Man."

"I'm not for women's lib or anything like that. It's for women who haven't got anything to do anyway." — Barbara Jacobs, managing director of a British roller skate manufacturing firm.

The sculptress lives in a midtown New York apartment with her mother, the widow of Amster Spiro, once the city editor of the New York Journal-American. The family pronounces the name "Spy-roh" instead of the way the first name of Vice-President Agnew usually is pronounced.

The two women recalled that for generations there had been artistic and musical talent in their families "but no one pushed it." Mrs. Spiro-Smith said, "I suppose I pushed because of the handicap I had to overcome."

Wonder what was the outcome of the dilemma of the Lincoln couple who had planned to go to Hawaii on an NU Alumni Assn. tour?

Seems as if they discovered the evening before the tour was to leave an emergency had arisen and the sports desk here fielded a call.

Virgil Parker asked those persons still in the newsroom if they knew anyone who wanted to go on the trip — the tour reservations would be sold to the highest bidder.

Several co-workers wanted to go — but plans would not permit. (There is such a thing as arranging time off and a small matter of having cash on hand.)

Didn't hear the final outcome. But hope that one of two solutions did occur! That the emergency was solved or that two lucky alums DID get on the tour on the short notice.

Wrong Team

It actually happened.

He's Right You Know

At least a letter received in the UNL football coaches office was addressed:

A university student made a sagacious statement the other day. He said:

"The trouble with every Tom, Dick and Harry is that they usually are named Bill."

New York UP—The first American Christmas cards were made in 1875 in Roxbury, Mass., by Louis Prang, a lithographer who had perfected a process of color printing about 100 years ago, says Irving Cohen, president of a card shop chain.

Prang's early cards were acclaimed the world over and the few remaining today are considered collector's items.

Contract Bridge Play Called 'Elementary'

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

"Confound it, Holmes, it seems that the trumps are invariably stacked against me whenever I am playing the hand.

"Yesterday I arrived at four spades on this hand after East had opened one diamond. Diamonds were led and I was obliged to ruff the third one with the nine to prevent an overruff.

"I led the three of trumps to dummy's ten. East won with the ace and returned a fourth diamond, which I was again obliged to ruff high.

"All would have been well had the trumps been 3-2, but in the actual case West's eight had become promoted to winning rank and was higher than my seven, dash it. No use holding good cards if they always go badly, what?"

"My dear Watson, it would be more accurate to say, it's no use holding good cards if you always play them badly. There was a simple safety play! Having ruffed the third dia-

2nd in Series
Regional Progress Center Planned

Nebraska is slated to have the second in a series of Centers for Regional Progress, funded by the Midwest Research Institute (MRI) to provide direct community assistance to towns across the state.

MRI, with head offices in Kansas City, is an independent, non-profit organization that does research for industry, government and other groups.

The Iowa Center for Regional Progress was established last March in Des Moines, and the 23-member advisory council for the Nebraska center will hold its organizational meeting Monday at the Nebraska Club.

According to MRI president Charles Kimball, the center in Des Moines "is already helping several Iowa community and state-action groups in rural health care, agricultural transportation, pollution abatement, criminal justice and economic development."

The center concept stems from a year-long, foundation-funded study by MRI and two other regional organizations. The study found that many of the nation's problems could better be handled at the regional, state and local levels.

Emphasis
"The emphasis is not on research," an MRI bulletin notes.
"Instead, emphasis is on stimulating and guiding action, putting some of this prior research and planning into use and getting things done."

Most of the funding will be provided for the first two years, with diminishing outside support after that. "If by that time a state's center is serving a useful role, then we would expect that it would merit increasing local support," MRI says.

The advisory council, including six Nebraska trustees:

Baathists Trying To Shed Bloody Image

Baghdad, Iraq (UPI) — Behind high, heavily guarded yellow brick walls on the outskirts of Baghdad is a former royal palace called "The Palace of the End."

It was literally that for many of the doomed men who entered its gates over the past 3½ years. For it is the headquarters of Iraq's ruthless security service.

In a reign of terror initiated by the far-left Baath party regime after it came to power in a bloodless coup in July, 1968, some 104 persons were executed. They included Iraqi Jews whose bodies were strung from improvised gallows in Liberation Square. The charges were mainly treason and spying.

Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr

That was when the regime was seeking to consolidate its authority. Now the Baathists, according to Western diplomats, are firmly in control, and they are making an energetic effort to dispel Iraq's image as a police state of terror, torture and mysterious disappearances.

But the mark is proving difficult to erase.

President Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr, a portly, balding man of 57 who looks like a Wall Street banker recently invited 100 newsmen to Baghdad to see for yourselves what is going on in Iraq and to repudiate the lying allegations carried by prejudiced information media.

Atmosphere More Relaxed

Resident Westerners concede the atmosphere is more relaxed than at any time since the Baathists seized power.

But attempts to talk politics are turned aside with an embarrassed shrug and surveillance is on a scale unequalled in the Arab world.

At the ruins of Babylon, in a peasant wilderness 60 miles south of Baghdad, the rare visiting tourist is intercepted by a civilian-suited youth who scribbles his passport details in a tattered notebook.

In Baghdad, two silent men take down the number of a taxi which brings a visitor to the home of a resident businessman.

Diplomatic cocktail parties are carefully watched.

No figures of party membership are available, though diplomats guess at 2,000.

The structure of the party has so far made it proof against disaffection from within and only Baathists are permitted political activity in the army—traditionally the likeliest focal point for anti-regime sentiment.

Concern of Peasants

In a nation of nine millions, the vast majority of peasants are more concerned with their patch of land and harvesting dates from the country's 32 million palm trees than with who is running things in Baghdad.

In the capital, city-dwellers look to their business.

With an annual oil income of $800 million, a land area of 440,000 square kilometers and a comparatively small population, Iraq is officially a rich nation. But the wealth has not percolated deeply into the social structure.

A good chef commands only about 50 dinars ($140) per month. A bottle of local beer is 500 fils ($1.30). Scotch whiskey is four dinars ($14) per bottle.

Houses with running water and electricity have been built for artisans in the towns, but the peasants live in mud-brick houses.

Diplomats say the regime or so of the population who constitute the politically minded educated elite.

Invitation to Newsmen

Bakr invited newsmen to hear him proclaim a national charter that is designed to pave "progressive" political parties to join the Baathists in government. But since the non-Baathist politicians know they would be signing a blank check, not a single organization has volunteered to help the regime broaden its political base.

Even the single major political achievement of the Baathists — an end to the 10-year war with the one-million strong Kurdish tribesmen in north Iraq — seems to be endangered.

The tough, 67-year-old Kurdish leader, Mulla Mustafa Barzani, has blamed the Baghdad government for a recent assassination attempt against him and declared he feared a surprise Iraqi Army attack against his positions in the north.

Any resumption of the war would throw Iraq back into political turmoil, encouraging the now repressed oppositionists. The Palace of the End may come into its own again.

Human Dignity League Plans Two Meetings

The League of Human Dignity will have two meetings in December, one Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., when regular business such as review of the proposed constitution and bylaws takes place.

The other is set for Dec. 14 at 7:30 p.m., also in the Lincoln Center Building. This special session was called in order to hear talks by representatives of the State Services for the Visually Impaired and the Nebraska Center for Handicapped.

Group of Georgian-Jews In Israel Want to Return to Soviet Union

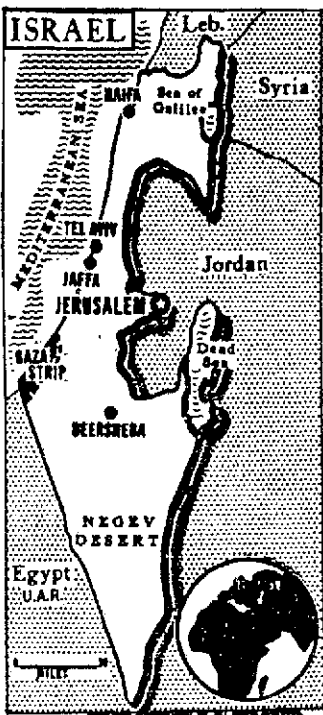

By JAY BUSHINSKY
(c) Chicago Daily News

Ashdod, Israel — Absalom Eliyashvili was holding forth in heavily-accented Russian about how bad it is in Israel compared to the good life he and his fellow Jews enjoyed in Soviet Georgia.

The tall, vigorous man in his early 40s kept the colorfully-dressed Georgian-Jewish womenfolk in awe as he railed against Israeli atheism and immodesty and above all, alleged contempt for his people.

"Even if they give me 10 years in prison," Eliyashvili exclaimed, "I will still be glad to be back in the Soviet Union."

His bitterness was mainly directed against the Israeli authorities' refusal to allow Georgian-Jewish newcomers to settle in the communities of their choice — specifically those that already have a sizable number of Georgians.

He also objected to having to pay for medical care — in spite of his robust appearance Eliyashvili said he is a cardiac patient — and at a lack of facilities for learning modern Hebrew.

Wrote to Podgorny
These gripes might have been dismissed as routine or mere misunderstanding had it not been that Eliyashvili and at least 10 other Georgian-Jewish heads of families — he says 50 — have written to Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny asking to be readmitted to the USSR.

"We received a positive reply," Eliyashvili beamed. "Podgorny wants us back."

Eliyashvili was standing in front of the newly built housing project where 20 Georgian-Jewish families have been allocated apartments.

Among those listening in were two electrical company workers, one of them a young man who came here from Iraq 20 years ago. The other was a veteran Israeli from Eastern Europe.

"We turn the world upside down for these people." The Iraq-born Israeli said, referring to the worldwide campaign to enable Jews to leave the USSR "and look what they do to us."

Israeli Bitter
The older Israeli was even more bitter:
"If we would talk that way in Soviet Georgia," he hollered in fractured Russian, they would send you to Siberia."

Eliyashvili muttered he would break "that guy's nose" if he dared to get close.

The smoldering discontent among the Georgia Jews has been building up for the past two months, since the immigration from the Soviet Union picked up in intensity.

It began with sit-down strikes on arrival at Lod International Airport. These were prompted by the refusal of some new arrivals to accept housing in communities other than those in which other Georgian-Jews had already settled.

Since then, a hard core of malcontents applied for reentry visas through the Finnish Embassy in Tel Aviv, which has been handling Soviet interests since the USSR broke off diplomatic relations with Israel in June 1967, during the six-day war.

Word that they had written to Podgorny shocked the Israeli establishment and led to the Georgian-Jews' complaints being taken up at an Israeli cabinet session.

Airing in Parliament
Meanwhile, two members of parliament representing the National Religious Party have demanded an immediate airing of the issue in parliament. Despite their party's membership in the government coalition, the two deputies accused the ministry of absorption of bungling the integration of Soviet Jews.

Saline County Transportation System Studied

Meetings will be held in three Saline County communities this week to find out what interest residents have in establishing a community transportation system in the county, reported Mrs. Evelyn Herman, senior citizens developer for the Blue Valley Community Action Inc.

Mrs. Herman heads the Saline Transportation Committee, a group which hopes to get the transportation program under way by spring, Mrs. Herman said.

A meeting will be held at the community hall in Dorchester Monday, at the library in Friend Tuesday and at the Legion Hall in Swanton Wednesday. All meetings start at 2 p.m.

Similar meetings have already been held in DeWitt, Wilber, Western, Tobias and Crete, all Saline County communities.

A ministry spokesman, Arnon Menter, rejected the charges as baseless.

He said the ministry was aware of the Georgian-Jews' desire to retain their religious and social cohesion, but said that the newcomers cannot all be sent to only one or two cities.

"Now they say they want to go to Kiryat Malachi," Menter said. "But that's only because we managed to settle an initial group there. Before, they insisted on Lod and Ramle, where the first Georgian-Jews were placed."

He denied the new arrivals are being "dumped" and then abandoned by responsible officials.

Cultural, Religious Entity
A unique feature of the Georgian-Jews is their being a cultural and religious entity. Most of them speak no language other than Georgian and their religious services do not correspond to either of the prevailing Judaic rites — Ashkenazic or Sephardic.

The Georgian-Jews say they were "shocked" at the lack of religious observance and demeanor of the Jewish Israelis.

"We came expecting the Jewish religion to be strictly observed in Israel," Eliyashvili complained. "Instead, we found the Sabbath (Saturday) desecrated and girls running around in miniskirts."

Some Israelis suspect the back-to-Georgia movement was spearheaded by agents-provateur planted among the incoming Georgian-Jews to eventually lay the basis for anti-Israel propaganda in the USSR.

Man, His World
Divergent Wilderness
Definitions

By DR. PATRICIA J. RAND
Asst. Professor of Botany
University of Nebraska

In 1964 Congress passed the Wilderness Act, despite the profound misgivings of many federal land administrators. The motivation for the act came from the desire to save pieces of the original landscape of the United States more or less as they were when European man first saw them in the early part of the 18th Century

Author's

The misgivings arise because it became necessary to formalize policies in legal terminology and to define specifically what parcels of land were to be included. Many officials of the National Park Service believed, moreover, that the Congressional act of 1872 which designated Yellowstone as our first National Park was sufficiently broad in delegating authority for the recognition and preservation of wild areas within the national park system.

The basic philosophy of the Park Service to preserve large areas of wilderness surrounded by public use areas seemed to be challenged

Officials in the U.S. Forest Service, on the other hand, were unhappy with the provisions of the Wilderness Act for their long-established multiple-use policy had already named several extensive tracts as "primitive areas" which were being managed essentially as wilderness. The Act of 1964 confused the issue of what was wilderness according to Forest Service standards

Public Happy

If the public land administrators were unhappy, the public was not. Here, at last, it seemed we had the legislation needed to preserve areas of a sufficient size in the words of the law, "... to secure for the American people of present and future generations the benefits of an enduring resource of wilderness."

Wilderness areas, by law, shall be administered for use and enjoyment, leaving them unimpaired for the future, protected, and with their wilderness character preserved.

Something got lost in the translation of need to deed. Even Almighty God who made the wilderness in the first place, couldn't administer the wilderness Act without facing king-sized dilemmas. Can wilderness be used and left unimpaired? Who shall enjoy the wilderness? Only those physically able to walk several miles or rich enough to afford the cost of travel to the area?

Each of us has his own ideas of what wilderness is or should be. Each seeks different values from it. Some of these values need hundreds of acres to be satisfied; for others a large-size city lot will suffice.

What kinds of wilderness are worth preserving, according to Wallace Stegner, well-known writer and historian interested in parks and wilderness?

"Most of those areas contemplated are in the national forests and in high mountain country", and these are probably the most important, he thinks, but, "... for the spiritual renewal, the recognition of identity, the birth of awe, other kinds will serve every bit as well."

He grew up on the Saskatchewan prairie. "A prairie like that, one big enough to carry the eye clear to the sinking, rounding horizon, can be as lonely and grand and simple in its forms as the sea. It is as good a place as any for the wilderness experience to happen; the vanishing prairie is as worth preserving for the wilderness idea as the alpine forests."

Nebraska has an area of 77,227 square miles, 19,000 square miles of Sandhills. How many square miles have we preserved as wilderness prairie?

U.S. Commissioner of Indian Affairs Louis R. Bruce, honorary hard hat in hand, examines a cedar plaque commemorating the dedication of Winnebago Cedar Buildings, Inc.'s, new plant. Thomas J. # Bruce Lauds Housing Factory in Winnebago

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Winnebago — U.S. Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Louis R. Bruce, speaking at the dedication of Winnebago Cedar Buildings Inc.'s new plant here Saturday, praised the tribally controlled corporation as an example of the coming economic self-sufficiency of Indian peoples.

Bruce, himself an Indian, said Winnebago Cedar Buildings typifies new "Indian economies which provide the life services necessary to maintain a viable Indian community."

Promising to "do everything I can to expand the sales of this plant so that you can be working around the clock," Bruce predicted that "the success of this industry will attract other industries from around the country."

Winnebago Cedar Industries, formed by Illinois businessman Thomas J. Dalhasen with the cooperation of Winnebago Tribal Councilman Louis LaRose and a loan from the federal Small Business Administration, will begin production later this month of pre-cut cedar-log recreational housing units.

The $100,000 plant will employ 50 Winnebago Indians and is expected to ease the reservation's chronic unemployment. Using methods originated by Dalhasen, the plant will turn out recreational buildings for use in parks, campgrounds and vacation spots. Indians will pre-cut cedar logs at the plant and construct buildings at their sites.

Dalhasen and two associates own 49% of the stock, with the Winnebago tribe owning the controlling interest. Over the next 10 years, however, Dalhasen is contractually bound to sell his stock gradually to the tribe while training Indians to take over sales and managerial positions in the firm — leaving Winnebago Cedar Buildings an entirely Indian-owned and Indian operated industry.

Dalhasen said the industry "will not solve all the problems on the reservation or hire all the unemployed, but it will help."

He suggested his idea on many reservations before settling on the Winnebago, he said, finally choosing the northeast Nebraska location because of the complete cooperation he received from local Indian leaders.

LaRose praised Dalhasen for his plan to turn the industry over to the tribe. Admitting he "had a lot of skepticism about what was going to happen" when negotiations began, LaRose said his skepticism disappeared when it became apparent that Dalhasen really intended to cede control to the tribe, leaving the Winnebago with a pre-established annual sales volume of nearly $1 million and potential for rapid growth.

"It happened, and I couldn't believe it," LaRose said. "My skepticism vanished."

Earthbound Stewardesses To Pamper Rail Riders

Los Angeles (AP)—The railroads, trying for a big comeback as passenger carriers, are borrowing a competitor's star attraction—the stewardess.

Amtrak, the National Railroad Passenger Corp., has even hired an airline to teach earthbound hostesses how to make passengers purr.

Continental Airlines, signed to train 1,250 Amtrak employees in efficient operations and passenger pampering, opened its first class this week by revealing its secret weapon—"The Iron Butterfly."

That's the nickname students have given pretty blonde Darlene Fuentes, 32, Continental's hostess training manager.

The 24 young women who walked into Miss Fuentes' first Amtrak class soon got the word—sweetly but firmly—that their entrance was all wrong.

Some waddled, a few clumped. Almost no one glided.

Gliding is the goal, along with smiling, soothing, chatting and comforting. Unlike airline stewardesses, they don't have to serve food.

"Attack those stairs like a gracious lady," instructed Miss Fuentes during lessons on how to get on and off the train. "If you go up like a dream and come down like a locomotive, it ruins the whole effect."

Flue-Cured Tobacco Cancer Found in Rats

New York (UPI)—A cancer researcher said experiments with rats showed smoke from flue-cured tobacco, used in cigars, was more dangerous than smoke from air-cured tobacco, used in cigars.

Dr. Leslie Elson of the Institute of Cancer Research in London told the annual meeting of the Cigar Manufacturers Assn. and the Cigar Institute of America the research was conducted by the late Dr. R. D. Passey. Passey's report said in part:

"The smoke of English cigars (flue-cured tobacco) greatly shortens the life of rats and damages the respiratory system, whereas that of the cigar (air-cured tobacco) is relatively harmless."

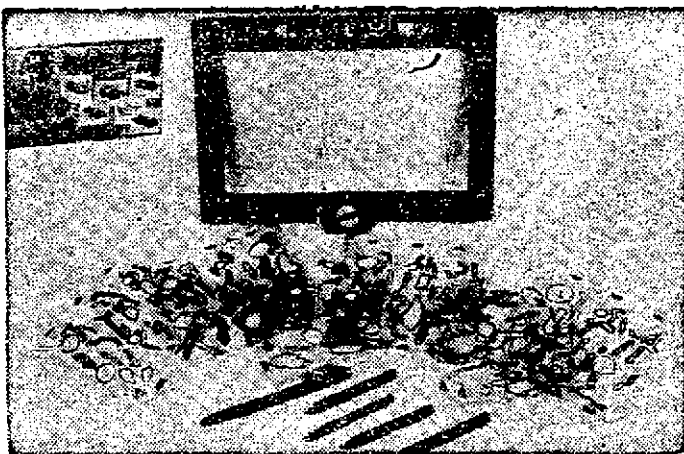

"This bears out two of the principal features in the 1971 report of the Royal College of Physicians, which draws attention to the large number of premature deaths in cigar smokers and the comparative safety of smoking cigars . . ."

Mrs. Nixon Boning Up For China, Africa Trips

Washington (UPI) — First Lady Pat Nixon is boning up on China and reading books loaned by friends in preparation for the trip she will take to the mainland with the President.

And she's studying State Dept. briefing papers to learn more about Africa as her January journey to the black continent approaches.

She will make a solo safari to Africa to attend the inauguration of President William R. Tolbert of Liberia. She will then fly to Ghana and the Ivory Coast. Her advance men are in Africa this week making the arrangements for the trip. She plans to concentrate on people instead of the jungle animals on her tropical tour.

When Mrs. Nixon returns to the White House, she will do a wardrobe switch to prepare for the bitter cold of Peking in late February.

She is expected to symbolize the "people-to-people" approach to the Chinese while the President carries on an historic dialogue with Communist leaders.

Her wardrobe will be a colorful contrast to the drab slacks and jacket worn by the Chinese women. "They all look alike," according to a member of national security affairs adviser Henry Kissinger's Peking traveling party.

Kissinger himself was unable to manifest his "swinger" reputation in the Chinese capital.

He is still trying to explain a comment from Mrs. Nixon that he had brought her a recipe for chicken and walnuts, her favorite Chinese dish. "I don't know chicken from walnuts," says Kissinger who prefers to be known for his foreign policy, rather than culinary expertise.

Mrs. Nixon was a devotee of Chinese restaurants in her carefree days and she gets along with chopsticks.

Johnny Cash Is Making Feature Film on Jesus

Sea of Galilee, Israel (UPI) — Johnny Cash is making a 90-minute feature film at Christian holy sites in Israel and occupied Jordan.

"I've never seen a movie about Jesus that I really liked," says the singer. "So I thought I'd make one myself."

Cash says he has spent $500,000 and five weeks in Israel to produce a portrayal of Christ "the man, as a real man, very human, and as a divinity—very divine."

"We show him as a boy, playing with kids, we show him laughing, throwing rocks at the water. A fly lands on his nose he brushes it away. A Disciple helps him get a speck of dirt out of his eye. And so on," Cash added.

Jesus is played by a nonprofessional, blond, bearded Bob Elfstrom, Ridgefield, Conn. The other actors were recruited from among Americans, British and Scandinavian youths on hitchhike tours of Israel.

Dogged by tourists thronging the holy places, Cash frequently improvised. A Garden of Gethsemane scene was done in a copse near the Sea of Galilee.

He filmed Jerusalem scenes in a deserted Palestinian refugee camp, where the adobe huts and narrow alleys have a Biblical atmosphere.

Cash got a storm on the Sea of Galilee the day he needed it, and a calm sea the next days. Jesus' Ascension was filmed with Elfstrom walking toward a clouded sky. As he walked, a hole opened in the clouds. "The telescopic lens turned him out of focus, and he was gone. It was beautiful."

Cash narrates and sings in the movie, and reads passages from Matthew in his rich, growling voice. He is not in the visible cast.

The "Jesus revolution," Cash says, "is the best thing that's happened to American this century. . . . There was a great need in the United States for a spiritual revival, because the whole country was becoming so materialistic," so consumer-product minded. . . .

America's Ghost Fleet Rides Memory Waves In Puget Sound Mist

By SID MOODY
Bremerton, Wash. (AP) — Out in the mists of Puget Sound the ghost fleet, home from war, sleeps with its memories.

Veterans of sea battles that have reddened American history, they are mothballed, technically. But actually they are dead, or dying, robbed even of the gender "she" men have always given the vessels that carried them to sea.

Armed with nothing more lethal than the cutlery in their galleys, the cocooned warships at the naval base here are referred to only by name; sexless, graying survivors waiting for death. Only their names will live.

The battleships, last of their breed, dinosaurs of the sea: Missouri, where the savage war that began for the United States 30 years ago at Pearl Harbor was finally to end; New Jersey, mothballed a second time after duty in Vietnam.

The carriers: Hornet, an ancient name in the Navy, she picked up an Apollo crew once but now lies flightless, spent and hulking at the dock; Bonne Homme Richard, a name written in blood by John Paul Jones.

Cruisers Doomed
The cruisers: Baltimore, doomed to the scrapper's torch along with Roanoke; Pittsburgh; Quincy—she carried President Roosevelt through the German submarine packs of the North Atlantic to a wartime conference in Europe.

In the Quincy's wardroom a naked bulb reflects on a mural, a map of the world crudely painted in reds and blues by an unremembered artist. Artist, where are you now? Duluth? Abilene? Do your children know you were here and where you'd been?

The artist had painted in the voyages that carried Quincy through World War II from launching in the Massachusetts town of her namesake in the yard once run by John Kennedy's father. There was D-Day. Shelling the coast of France; Toulon and the invasion of southern France; Okinawa and the kamikazes; Malta with the president. Had that crippled man walked those very companionways? Had he sat late into the night in some blacked-out cabin measuring De Gaulle? There is no plaque to tell, only a curled piece of cardboard warning that once there was "Wet Paint."

The artist noted Quincy's crew downed a Japanese plane at Okinawa. And the pilot: is he remembered, is he mourned? Ghosts, so many, many ghosts.

Quincy Has No Secrets
A tag on the safe in the dentist's office read, "This safe is set on 1000." All in the ship are steel echoing against steel. Quincy no longer has any secrets.

A notice announces the ship's soda fountain is open from 1130 to 1300 hours Mondays through Thursdays. There is a chair nearby with a tag telling those who may be in doubt that the object is a "chair, general purpose, Type IV."

padlocking the gate at the foot of the gangway. The ships are checked periodically, and it's a favorite trick to initiate a newcomer by sneaking someone on board to bang on the pipes when he's making his rounds.

Will the Quincy ever sail again?

If there's a need, crews would swarm over the old cruiser sandblasting off her protective oil and paint coating. Electronics will be put back. All the alterations and modernizations required for commissioned vessels of her class would be done. Divers would free her underwater outlets, sealed with rounded fittings so they can be knocked off without having to drydock. The igloos over her smaller gun mounts would be removed and her weapons installed.

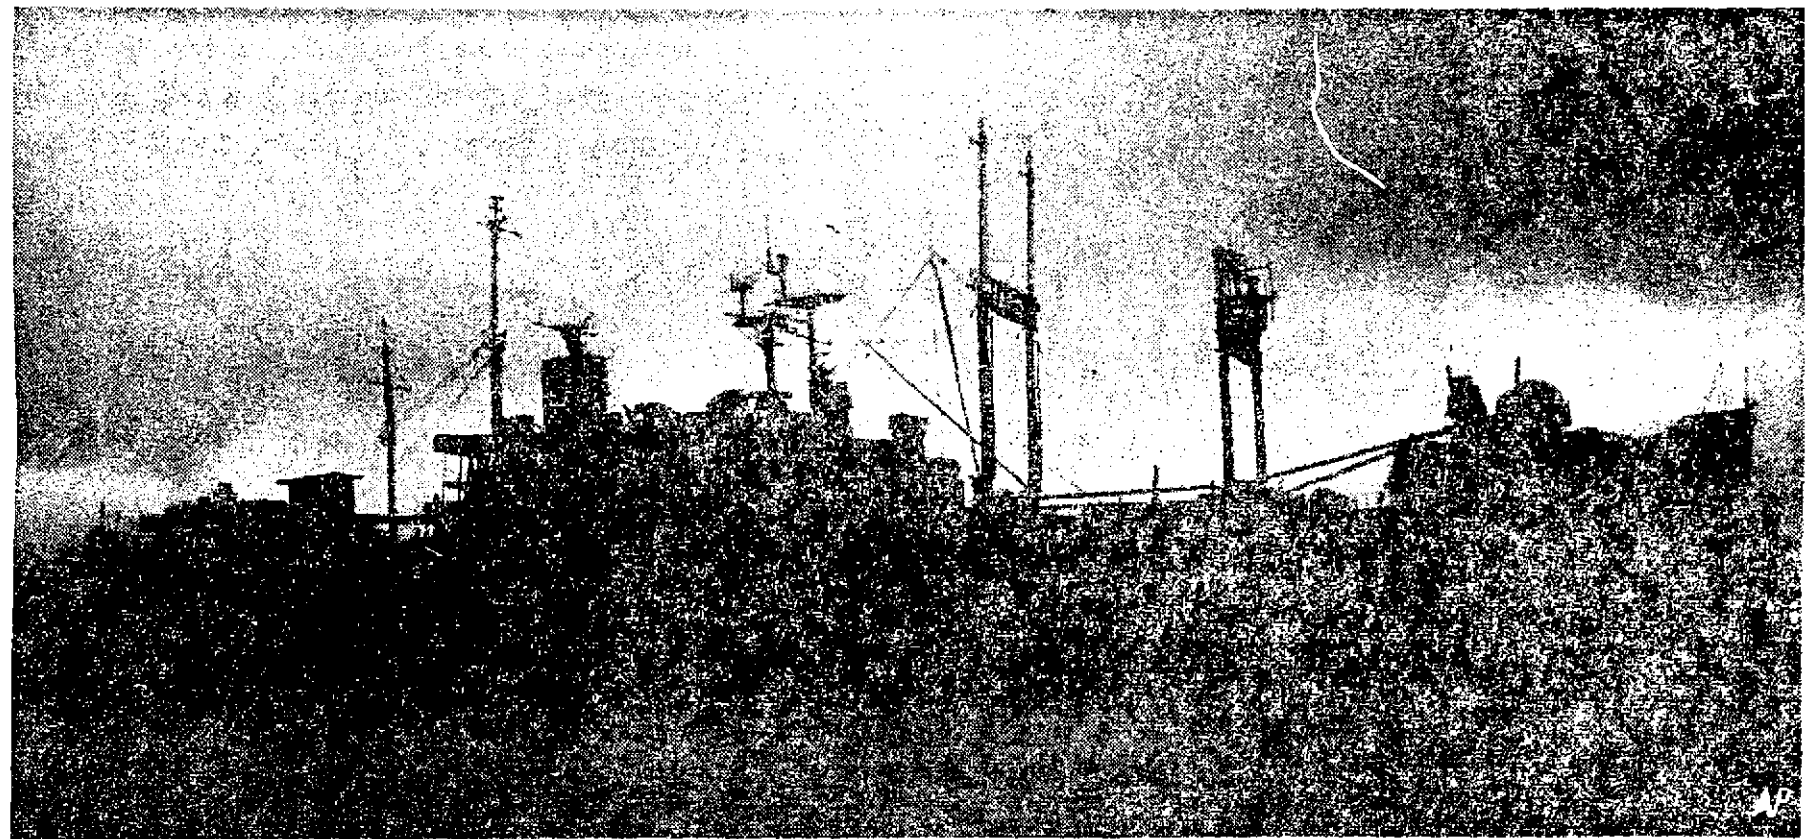

During the Korean War, the Navy demothballed ships in 30 to 60 days. But now the enemy of the ghost fleet is time. In the age of missiles, who needs a cruiser, and one pushing 30 years old at that?

But you never know. So the Navy husbands its reserves in graveyards at Vallejo, Calif., San Diego, Norfolk, Philadelphia, Boston, Charleston, Orange, Tex., and Pearl Harbor as well as Bremerton.

Old Crewmen Return
"Occasional crewmen want to go aboard their old ship," said Dougall. But he tells them the ships are sealed and the Navy doesn't want to incur any Heaps of chains lie undisturbed on the seafront of Puget Sound, Wash., behind them clustered hulks of Bremerton Naval Base's mothballed fleet. One of the decommissioned ships (below) rides silently in the waters in the twilight of its days.

And the drones, the faceless trekkers that transported the troops to Iwo and Leyte and Okinawa, the cargo vessels that plied back and forth from Tedium to Boredom with their homely cargoes of shoes and C-rations and toilet paper.

Home now, alone, shackled to the shore, their ports welded shut like blind eyes. The stripped masts of the ranked destroyers stand above them like crosses in a graveyard marking the end of a ship's core, her soul.

The fir trees along the shore stand mute sentinel as though in respect, while an experimental hydro foil, the new Navy, flaunts her youth in a feathery wake past the clustered hulks. Even the ferry, threading its way through the islands from Seattle, seems to flout her freedom at the fleet, moored so far from the sea, its very vitals cannibalized by the shipyard workers searching for parts to repair the ships of the living Navy.

The yard rings with the din of ship's work, but the waterfront where the mothballed ships lie chained and warped to each other is still, with the melancholy of a nursing home.

Sad Situation
"It's kind of sad," said Capt. Alan Dougall, commander of the 185-man caretaking crew of the 102 ships stored here. "It's as if they were tugging at their lines asking, 'Why can't we go to sea? That's what we were designed for.'"

Maybe some will. The Jersey made it, briefly. For years a salt tablet lay symbolically in the watch officer's stand-up desk in the once sweltering engine room, a token gift from the last gang that banked her boilers to those who would one day relight them. But it is chill there, now. Footfalls echo and are gone. So is the tablet, someone's souvenir.

When alive, at sea, a ship is a fugue of sound: the pulse of the engines deep in the ship; the creak of her bulkheads as she powers through a sea; a boss's pipe and "now hear this" over the squawk box; voices of sailors bound up with their ship on a nation's purpose.

Eyes closed, one's ear imagines. But eyes open there is no sound, and one looks through one hatchway, and the next, and the next and on into empty shadows.

"Are your lips dry yet?" asks Lt. Cmdr. Bonnie R. Love, the fleet's security officer. Dehumidifiers preserve the interiors of the ships that are so tightly sealed they're even dustless.

Love leads the way topside. The salt air has a tang. Quincy's is dry, musty, like a tomb's. The hatch clangs shut, through the ship. Then silence. Quincy is alone again.

Spooky At Night
"Ghosts? Well, it gets kind of spooky at night," says a sailor liability for letting someone aboard.

Former sailors also write asking for a souvenir such as the steering wheel or a porthole cover, but things like that are turned over to the naval curator in Washington who stores them dutifully away in case posterity ever wants reassurance that, yes, there once was a Quincy or a New Jersey or a Pittsburgh.

"If the ship has teak decks, we even save a couple of pieces of that," Dougall said.

Perhaps the most famous teak of all is the foredeck of Missouri, where Japan signed the surrender. There's a plaque marking the spot, and more than 170,000 visitors a year board the queen of the ghost fleet to view it.

But at night she, too, is alone. Her silhouette is broken only by an alarm light to warn the night watchman if she should suddenly start taking water.

Her huge 16-inch guns, that could throw a shell as far as the snowtops of the Olympic mountains in the distance, are capped and point innocently across the Navy Yard towards the town's business district beyond the gate.

Missouri to Live?
Perhaps because of her history, Missouri will be allowed to live. As a monument, a relic in the attic, but to stride the sea, as in her days of glory?

It's hard to imagine. The ships of Bremerton lie moored to the past.

Just how deeply in the past someone found a pinup in Missouri's forward turret. Some of the younger sailors showed it to Love for identification.

"I couldn't recognize her," he said.

Ports and hatches are welded shut like blind eyes.

Wesleyan Fund Drive Directed By Seward

Harry Seward, Lincoln insurance executive, will head Nebraska Wesleyan University's Great Teaching Program, an annual fund drive for current operating support. Vice chairman of the campaign is Dale Tinstman, Lincoln securities company executive.

Charles E. Sconyers, Wesleyan director of development, said the campaign will be launched Tuesday noon with a luncheon in the NWU Campus Center for the nearly 100 drive workers. Wesleyan President Vance D. Rogers will speak.

Harry Seward

No dollar goal has been set for this year's campaign as many individuals and firms are completing pledges on Nebraska Wesleyan's Decade for Fulfillment — a 10-year, $20 million development program launched in 1968. They will not be solicited for the Great Teaching Program this year, Sconyers said.

The Great Teaching Program, started in 1958, seeks funds to help Wesleyan retain and attract faculty dedicated to teaching in the college classrooms and laboratories, Sconyers said. Last year's campaign raised $22,000.

Seward said campaign workers traditionally find the NWU Great Teaching Program is well accepted in the community, and the greatest part of the solicitation will be completed by Friday.

Division leaders in the campaign are Burnham Yates, banker, Paul Schorr Jr., electrical company executive, Frank Sidles, savings and loan executive, and Mrs. Ralph Hill, civic leader.

Honorary co-chairmen for the drive are E. N. Thompson, foundation president, and Walter S. Henrion, insurance executive. Both are former chairmen of the Great Teaching Program.

Industrial Polluters Play Big—And Questionable—Environmental Policy Role

By PETER J. BERNSTEIN
(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — The chief executives of America's major industrial polluters are playing an extensive — and highly questionable — role in shaping President Nixon's environmental policies.

Working through the little-known National Industrial Pollution Control Council (NIPCC), board chairmen and presidents of blue chip companies with a multi-billion-dollar stake in how strongly or weakly the government enforces antipollution laws have obtained important changes in the administration's clean-up strategy.

Created by executive order 19 months ago and supported by taxpayer's money, the blue-ribbon council of 221 corporate chieftains was intended to advise Nixon on industrial pollution problems and to set an industry-wide example in cleaning up the environment.

But key members of Congress and national conservation groups, who are barred from NIPCC's private meetings, say the intended spur has become a brake, and that the clean-up is being slowed.

Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, who passes NIPCC's views directly to the White House, recently confided to council members that they are playing an "increasingly important role" in "government policy-making."

Advice, Criticism
Stans told the industry executives, "Virtually no major move is made in environmental policy without drawing on your advice and criticism. The rough spots in administration of environmental laws, standards and implementation actions have been easier to spot and smooth out because you are always available to give us help."

The far-reaching activities of NIPCC (nicknamed "Nipse") by its members are emerging as a prime political target.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Me., frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination, plans to focus on NIPCC's role in coming oversight hearings of his Senate subcommittee on air and water pollution.

"The concern here is that the council seems to have access to the decisional process without public responsibility to anybody," says Leon Billings, subcommittee counsel.

NIPCC's Activities

Interviews with key members of Congress and national environmental organizations, business leaders and government officials show the following about NIPCC's activities:

—Despite its mandate to set an example for others in fighting pollution, NIPCC failed to get all-important clean-up commitments last month from more than half of its own member companies. None were forthcoming from such basic industries as steel, oil, and manufacturing. The most glaring omission was by the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing (3M) Co., which failed to comply with NIPCC recommendations by setting no timetable for future clean-up steps. The firm's board chairman is Bert S. Cross, who also heads NIPCC.

—Compliance with federal antipollution laws by NIPCC companies this year was extremely spotty. The Justice Dept. filed civil and criminal suits against 24 major firms represented on the council, including General Motors, Du Pont, Union Carbide, American Cyanamid, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Goodyear Tire, and U.S. Steel.

—The Justice Dept. and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) were told in October by White House troubleshooter Peter M. Flanagan to set aside their waste disposal suit against Armco Steel Corp. and to negotiate the matter out of court, after Armco president C. William Verity fired off a long letter to Nixon asking him to "look into the circumstances of the court action." Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House subcommittee on natural resources, sharply criticized White House interference in the case and questioned the propriety of Verity, who is a NIPCC member, seeking what Reuss termed preferential treatment.

—NIPCC, acting through Stans and its executive director, Walter Hamilton, obtained significant changes in air pollution rules proposed by EPA for controlling hazardous substances and drafting state implementation plans. The result may well be watered-down enforcement of the landmark 1970 Clean Air Act, environmental critics charge. NIPCC also held a special meeting last month to denounce the Muskie water pollution bill, which the Senate passed unanimously, and to urge enactment of a bill with a far more lenient attitude toward industrial polluters.

Compliance with federal antipollution laws by National Industrial Pollution Control Council members was extremely spotty.

—Requests from 15 conservation groups to attend NIPCC meetings either as participants or observers have been rejected. NIPCC also has turned down requests from congressmen for transcripts of the meetings. In both cases, NIPCC has maintained that industry executives would not speak with the same candor if the meetings or transcripts of them were opened to the public.

Staff of Eight

With an annual operating budget of $310,000, NIPCC supports a professional staff of eight and turns out many reports, including the so-called commitments report of voluntary actions that various industries are making to clean up pollution.

Since its inception in April 1970, NIPCC has had seven full meetings and numerous working sessions of subcommittees at which the impact of pollution control regulations are discussed in great detail. Whenever NIPCC members meet, however, a government lawyer is present to make certain that in discussing mutual problems none of the company executives runs afoul of the anti-trust laws.

Close inspection of NIPCC's record reveals that it maintains a close working relationship with such key environmental policy makers as White House Assistant John Whitaker and Russell Train, who heads the White House Council on Environmental Quality. Train has attended every NIPCC meeting.

Moreover, NIPCC's viewpoints are heard by those administration officials who sometimes count the most—in the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Among the officials who regularly attend OMB's secret meetings on environmental policy is the same Walter Hamilton, who, in addition to being NIPCC's executive director, is deputy assistant secretary of commerce for industry economics.

Effective Advocate

A former business executive with a computer-like mind sharpened at Harvard University, Hamilton is highly regarded by NIPCC members as an effective advocate of their views.

By his own admission, he played a key role in urging OMB to change the all-important federal guidelines for state air-pollution plans.

"The information I get as director of the council I certainly use in OMB without attributing it to the council," Hamilton said in an interview. "Because of my council role, I'm acutely aware of the large array of problems — the practicalities of compliance. I can give OMB a faster and more practical response than some other government officials."

It's this "instant communication," as Hamilton calls it, that has aroused so much indignation among national environmental groups. With such access by the captains of industry to the government chambers where decisions are made, it's no wonder, conservationists say, that pollution is gradually contaminating the nation's air, land, water, and food.

"The council is less concerned with controlling pollution than in sanctifying it," says Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who heads the House subcommittee on fisheries and wildlife conservation. "It's about as useful as sidepockets on a cow."

Dingell, who considers NIPCC a waste of taxpayers' money, tried unsuccessfully several months ago to delete its 1972 budget from the Commerce Dept. appropriations bill.

Metcalf Bill

In a related move another NIPCC critic, Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., has introduced a bill that would require government advisory committees like NIPCC (there are some 1,500 such committees) to have non-industry representatives and to conduct open meetings.

"We don't believe it's fair for industrial groups to have access to high-level people in the administration, including the President, from a tax-supported program in a manner environmental groups don't have," says Lou Clapper, conservation director of the National Wildlife Federation. He supports the Metcalf bill.

Hamilton scoffs at such complaints. "The environmentalists," he declares, "have more immediate, in-depth access to environmental policymakers than any other segment of society. People like David Brower (head of Friends of the Earth) and Ralph Nader have immediate and continuing access to Train, Whitaker, and (EPA administrator William D.) Ruckelshaus."

He said conservationists also have an opportunity to participate on the Citizens' Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality, which is headed by Laurance Rockefeller.

Hamilton, in reviewing NIPCC's role, said the Nixon administration is trying to "obtain a true picture of the impact of pollution control regulations on industry, and has funded a series of 11" so-called micro-economic studies to determine whether companies can absorb antipollution costs without shutting down.

Interagency Effort

As an interagency effort, involving EPA, the President's Council of Economic Advisers and the White House Office of Science and Technology, the results of the studies are likely to play a significant role in setting future antipollution standards.

Hamilton said he was displeased with the first two studies completed. They dealt, he said, with the pollution problems of iron foundries and the leather tanning industry. Both reports have "considerable deficiencies," he explained, because they fail to take into account the full economic "burden" on the affected industries. Both studies will be sent back to the authors with instructions to do more research, he said.

"We simply don't know enough to understand the impact of pollution controls in these industries," Hamilton said. "We are trying now to predict the effect on the people and their communities so that we can ease the impact of the transitional process NIPCC must get in deeper and find out more clearly and faster what it is that is really happening."

"There is no need for the public to suffer unnecessary disruptions in the process of getting to new objectives (a cleaner environment) if we plan properly."

Hamilton tries to take an objective view of the job industry is doing. He said the results are "certainly uneven," and that some NIPCC companies have been derelict.

But he insisted that despite their poor response to NIPCC's own request for updated commitments on controlling pollution, the vast majority of the firms recognize they must tackle the problem. "All many of them need are manageable time frames," he said.

House of the Week For Active Family—Young or Old

By Associated Press

Hidden behind this homey exterior of trellises, vines and picket fences is an activist's house. It also is versatile, offering a modest-sized shelter for a new family or providing a retired couple with just the things for which they have been looking.

For the young, the compact plan allows expansion room for family growth. For the older, it offers enough space to have overnight guests or married children visits.

For both, the house is designed to handle several activities, whether in the hobby or part-time work areas.

Despite the minimum square footage this house contains, architect Rudolph A. Matern has included many features usually found in larger homes.

Among them are front entrance foyer, kitchen with breakfast room, full-sized laundry, service area lavatory, two fireplaces, a huge barbecue, a 12-foot wall of bookshelves and a vanity in the master bedroom.

The special activity areas are efficiently designed and, when the particular chores are not inherently clean, a washup room or access to the outdoors is close at hand.

A library or office, which can easily double as a third bedroom, has a fireplace, wall of bookshelves and its own private porch.

When used more informally, the door to the porch and the folding doors to the living room can be left open.

A room adjoining the kitchen, yet screened from it, has an L-shaped planning desk full of doors and drawers. For the young, it can be a family room and a place for homework. For older persons, it could be a well-appointed sewing room just a look away from something cooking on the stove. Mother can plan her week's menus here.

At the rear is a greenhouse, with an all-glazed area with exposure to the outdoors, the porch and the living-dining area. It has planting shelves, a work table, access to the outdoors and direct use of a laundry sink. If preferred, this room could be used as a studio with sunlight controlled by bamboo screens.

Garden Gossip

Geraniums Do Best in Bright Window

By EMERY W. NELSON
County Extension Agent

Geraniums are among the finest plants for indoor gardens. They provide flowers throughout the winter months and are not difficult to grow. Geraniums need no rest period or dormant season and are quite tolerant to inside conditions.

They do need considerable light to bloom. Conditions of low light during short winter days will reduce or prevent flowering. Plants should be placed in full sunlight in a south or southeast window.

Plants without adequate sunlight should have supplemental light from fluorescent fixtures.

Geraniums produce abundant blooms when potted in small pots that check root growth. New plants will grow well in three- or four-inch pot and older plants need only a 5- or 6-inch pot. Clean clay pots are most desirable as they reduce the possibility of excessive water.

Geraniums do best when cool temperatures are maintained. If possible the temperature should be reduced to the lower 60s at night and kept about 70 degrees F during the day. They will tolerate lower humidities than many flowering houseplants but prefer at least a moderate range.

Watering can be very tricky. The amount and frequency will depend on the room temperature, kind of soil, size of pot and size of plant.

Geraniums do best when the soil is kept on the dry side but will wilt if some soil moisture is not available. Daily inspections of the soil will provide the best guide to watering. A study of the habits and thought pattern of birds may require little more than watching the actions of the ever-present English sparrow. This was demonstrated recently when I cleaned out my martin house and closed it up for the winter.

I had allowed a pair of English sparrows to move in last spring when it appeared that I had erected the house too late for the martin scouts to find it. Now, on a bright November day, the sparrows were still coming and going. When I lowered the house down the pole for cleaning, the male sparrow darted to a nearby tree. There he sat with his family, flicking his tail, cocking his head this way and that, and chattering in a tone that indicated great concern.

Chirp of Concern

After making certain there were no longer any eggs or babies, I tore out the compacted nesting materials. I washed the house, dried it, and popped the little metal door covers into place. Then I pulled on the rope, raising the house back to the top of the pole. "Now," I thought, "I'll be ready when the first martin scout appears next spring."

The sparrow was not so easily dislodged, however.

As soon as he saw the house back in its normal position he flew to it excitedly with a feather in his bill. He could not understand what he found. Instead of open doorways, there were solid pieces of dark green metal. He went around and around the house trying to penetrate one of the covered doorways.

I felt sorry for him, being shut out of his house just when the old winter nights had begun. So I scattered some milo and chopped corn on the ground below. He brought his family, and they cleaned up the seeds with happy chirps, but still he did not give up on the house. Every day I see him yet, sitting on the little perching rail on the leeward side of the house, for some protection from the cold wind, and holding onto his territorial rights.

Suet holders are easily contrived but construction of them with metal should be avoided.

This winter I am trying to attract a variety of birds into my yard with a feeding program.

From my reading and limited experience I find it is not necessary to purchase elaborate feeders, birdhouses and birdbaths. Simple devices work just as well, and the more natural the setting is, the more likely it is that the birds will find it.

Consider Habits

At the outset, then, I found it helpful to consider the habits of the birds in the vicinity as a guide to attracting them.

Insect eaters, such as chickadees, brown creepers and down woodpeckers, find peanut butter or suet (unsalted beef fat) a good substitute for insect delicacies, but they will not find it on the ground.

They spend their time searching the bark of trees for food; so the best way to feed them is to press small bits of suet between the ridges of bark or tie larger chunks to a limb with string.

Wire should not be used for holding suet not metal for perches, because in very cold weather if the bird has moisture on his feet, or if the moist part of the eye should touch the metal as he feeds, the flesh may be frozen tightly to the cold metal then torn away as the bird pulls himself free.

Some of the seed-eaters seek out the first-fruits at the tops of the weed stalks. These include goldfinches in their brownish-olive winter garb, song sparrows, and Harris' sparrows. They are most likely to find a feeder placed at waist level among last summer's garden plants. It should be supplied with small seeds such as millet.

Bureau's Ag Award To Warner

State Sen. Jerome Warner will receive the Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award Tuesday at the annual banquet of the Lancaster County Farm Bureau.

The organization seeks to recognize Warner, according to board member Dave Snyder, for his legislative work to secure property tax relief for the farmer.

Featured speaker at the 7 p.m. banquet at Gateway Auditorium is University of Nebraska President Durward B. Varner. Sens. Wallace Barnett and Harold Simpson of Lincoln, Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, County Commissioner William Grossman and State Director of Agriculture Glenn Kreuscher are also expected to attend.

An estimated 200-250 Farm Bureau members and guests are expected, Snyder said.

You can wash and dry clothes in any kind of weather. It saves you time and energy, and it's kind to your clothes. In fact it completely eliminates "blue Monday" washdays. And a Gas dryer with permanent press setting (which practically does away with wrinkles) is faster and far more economical than the other kind.

If you're not convinced after trying the Gas dryer for 30 days we'll remove it entirely at our expense. ### Shelter Too

Other seed-eaters are accustomed to gleaning from the ground what has fallen from overhead. Examples are quail, mourning doves and snow buntings. These will most readily find seeds that have been scattered on bare ground or snow, especially if mixed with straw or grass clippings. A mixture of wheat, milo, and cracked corn strung along a line leading from the birds' natural feeding area to the feeding station may help them discover the bounty placed there.

As the little English sparrow indicated to me, the birds seek shelter from cold winds in winter just as eagerly as they seek nest sites in summer.

Therefore, feeders should, if possible, be placed in a sheltered spot—on the south side of the house or beside a windbreak such as bushes or a fence.

Evergreens make an especially good windbreak and are favored by purple finches and siskins. Or a feeder can be constructed with windvanes at dry stalks of pigweed, asters, sunflowers, etc.

Drinking Water

When it is very cold without snow, the birds have difficulty finding drinking water. At such times a pan of water can be prevented from freezing by enclosing a lighted electric bulb beneath it in a non-flammable container. Birds also need a little fine sand to replenish their gizzard stones and thus aid in their digestion.

In some areas cats are a problem at bird-feeding stations. Or squirrels, bluejays, and starlings may over-eat their welcome.

A number of solutions for these problems are described, along with a variety of simple feeders, in books on the subject. Two of the best that I have found are available in the Bennett Martin Library: Bird Feeders You Can Make, by Ted Petit, and Beginner's Guide to Attracting Birds, by Leon Hausman.

Your Nurseryman Speaks

You Need More Than Desire For a Living Christmas Tree

"Don't kill a tree for Christmas. Instead help one to live."

For years plant lovers have felt uneasy about the millions of fir and pine trees that have been cut for Christmas trees.

Now the environmentalists have zeroed in on this problem and suggested that families buy and plant living Christmas trees.

This is fine. This idea brings life where there once was death. In essence, this reflects the real spirit of Christmas. Moreover, this suggestion brings trees to precisely the point where they are most needed—in the big cities. Here they can convert carbon dioxide to life-giving oxygen and catch some of the air pollutants on their foliage.

But, as is the case with other aspects of the gigantic pollution problem, the whole thing isn't quite that simple.

First, cut Christmas trees do not represent a slaughter of precious forest reserves. Most are grown on plantations just to be Christmas trees. This represents a sizable industry that supports thousands of families. If every family in the United States planted a living Christmas tree next year, Christmas would become a disaster for states such as Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Beyond that, the mechanics involved in buying and planting a living Christmas tree in Nebraska are not simple.

First, the tree must be selected, tagged and dug before the ground freezes. Since our average ground-freeze date is the first few days of December, this means that, to be safe, this should be done around or before Thanksgiving.

Now we come to the second problem. A decision must be made either to plant the tree right after Christmas or wait until spring when the ground has thawed (usually late March).

Crete has what it officially calls the nation's first living Christmas tree, as attested by a plaque on the rock. Tree and plaque stand near the Crete Library. The tree was planted in 1923.

the planting on the day after Christmas.

If the actual planting is to wait until spring, the ball of earth must be insulated from the extremely bitter temperatures of deep winter. This can be done by placing the tree in a washtub or similar big container and then stuffing leaves or straw around the ball of earth.

Nurseries carry over balled and burlapped plants in a manner similar to this so this is not as tricky as it may sound.

The living Christmas tree should be kept in the cool, but not frigid, temperatures associated with a closed porch or unheated garage. It should be brought into the house for as few hours as possible and then returned outside.

If left inside too long, it may decide it's spring and start to grow. If you take it outside then, you're plainly cruel. This is like tossing a baby in a snow drift.

Please don't ask for a guarantee on living Christmas trees. With all the hazards over which he has no control, it simply isn't fair to ask this of any nurseryman.

In summary, under the right conditions, one can favor the living Christmas trees, but readers must carefully consider all aspects.

If the tree is to be planted right after Christmas, the hole must be dug at about the same time the tree is selected in the nursery.

Moreover, a heavy mulch of leaves or straw must be put over the hole and the dirt that will be used to refill the hole so that ground frost will not stop

Motorecyclist Cruises St. Louis Highways to Find Congregation

By JAMES ROBISON
(c) Newhouse News Service
St. Louis — Bill Scar has been riding motorcycles for nearly 10 years. But today his cycle riding has taken on a new twist.

For the last six months he's been "jamming" (cycle lingo for cruising the highways) around St. Louis searching out new ways to minister.

His congregation is the growing segment of the society that is alienated from the institutional church and has taken to the cycle in seeking a meaningful lifestyle.

Scar, a 25-year-old yet-to-be-ordained graduate of Concordia Seminary here, turned to the cycle ministry as a step beyond the traditional ministry of his family. His father, grandfather, six uncles and two cousins are all pastors in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

His work here is financed through the Lutheran Mission Association (LMA) which will re-evaluate the ministry next month.

Studying Need
"We want to know if there is a sufficient group of cyclists in the area to merit funding a presence among these people," was the way the Rev. Milton E. Stohs, LMA executive director, defined the motorcycle project.

Scar's ministry defies traditional description. He spends his days at area cycle shops, making contacts with the cycle subculture and learning the spots where cyclists might congregate for racing and trail riding.

His time is also taken up in talking with what he calls the "hard riders" whose entire lives are centered in the cycle world, as opposed to the suburban Honda riders and mini-bikers. In his ministry

Scar registers more than 250 miles each week on his Norton Commando 750 cycle.

Scar says that in St. Louis there are at least a dozen motorcycle gangs, each with up to 30 riders, plus a myriad of riders who have on-and-off associations with the gangs. In addition, he says there are a lot of riders who have all the trappings of the "hard riders" but whose total lives really don't revolve around the cycle.

"Cyclists are just normal people," he said. "But they exercise their individuality in a way that doesn't agree with the standards of the majority."

Scar's ministry here grew out of the interests of several seminary classmates who proposed the cycle ministry last year.

Bob Schultz, one of the seminarians, had become involved with street riders and racing enthusiasts on the West Coast during his year of practical pastoral study with Concordia.

Pilot Ministry
Combined with Scar's work as a "chaplain" to a cycle gang in Washington, D.C., the seminarians convinced the LMA to sponsor a pilot cycle ministry here.

The Rev. Reuben J. Schmidt, associate executive secretary of special ministries, Missouri Synod Lutherans, admits that the cycle ministry suffers from an identity crisis.

"This isn't necessarily the Bible passage type of ministry," he said, "but it's more of a witness kind of project."

There's not much in the way of tangible results, he said, and this creates a problem for the traditional church-goer who expects to see converts to justify his mission investments.

"But I think most people are satisfied with a ministry where they know there's a faithful and authentic witness of Jesus Christ," he added in characterizing Scar's work.

The Rev. Kung K. Schoenfeld, LMA director of interpretation and social ministries, said the motorcycle ministry is a good chance for the church layman to put action with his words.

"If they're concerned about a return," he said, "then they should get involved" in ministering with Scar.

Schmidt agreed that the cycle ministry was a perfect cyclist, but to find new ways not only to minister to the cyclist, but to find new ways for local congregations to reach out to subcultures on a one-to-one basis.

"It's giving us the chance to find the right handles for the congregations to grab onto in ministering to these people," he said.

Scar added that he wants to prove that "there is no area of life which is outside of our concern. I want Christian laymen to know that there are a multitude of areas such as this one where they can exercise their Christian love while following their own interests."

Churches in Brief

Open House—Open house is being conducted today, 2-5 p.m., at Capitol City Christian Church, 7800 Holdrege. The facility is open to the public and refreshments will be served.

Lutherans Set Council Meet

The Blue Valley Lutheran Church will hold a council meeting Friday and Saturday at the Nebraska Center, 1600 No. 33rd.

Discussions Friday on interdependence in the church and Saturday on the layman's role in the church are planned.

Church Worried About Bad Image

By ROY LARSON
(c) Chicago Sun-Times
Chicago — The Process Church of the Final Judgment has embarked on an aggressive campaign to protect its good name, one of the founders said.

The sect, which preaches that the end of the world is near, has been accused in a new book of providing some of the "sleazy input which warped the mind of Charles Manson."

Now the head of the church's Chicago chapter, Father John said in an interview that the sect has hired the services of a Chicago-based public relations firm as well as legal counsel.

Filed Libel Suit
In October, the church filed a libel suit in U.S. District Court against Ed Sanders, the author and E. P. Dutton & Co., the publishers, of the book, "The Family — The Story of Charles Manson's Dune Buggy Attack Battalion." Later the church filed a similar suit against Esquire Magazine, which published an article by Sanders including some of the same material contained in the book.

The sect originated in England in 1963. Since coming to Chicago in May, 1970, members of the church, wearing black robes and silver crosses, have been highly visible selling their

Rumor Grapevine Clumsy Computer Data Bank May Help Ministers Find Jobs

By LOUIS CASSELS, UPI

At long last, several big Protestant denominations are adopting modern methods — including a central computerized data bank — to match vacant pulpits with preachers hunting jobs.

Hitherto, pastor placement has been a helter-skelter process in most Protestant denominations. If a congregation wanted to hire a minister, it appointed a committee to shop around.

The committee would pick up whatever scuttlebutt it could from regional officials and the rumor grapevine and, using dubious sources, compile a list of men who might be suitable and available. Then it would interview the men on this list, ask around about them, and finally come up with a nominee.

The system — or lack of it — was even clumsier from the clergyman's viewpoint. A newly-graduated seminarian, or an older minister who felt he'd be happier or more effective in a new location, had no central file of job openings to consult. He could only pass the word that he was looking for work, and hope that some friend or denominational officer might hear of something for him.

Some Mismatches
This approach has resulted in some horrible mismatches. It has led many congregations to hire unsuitable or ill-qualified pastors while competent dedicated ministers have had to take secular jobs because they couldn't find pulpits.

Worst of all, perhaps, the lack of mobility has tended to freeze pastors and congregations into overlong associations. It is axiomatic among church officials that 10 years is about the maximum time a pastor should spend in one place. After that, familiarity begins to breed contempt, and petty irritations build up into factional squabbles.

Ministers are well aware of the perils of staying too long with a congregation, but those who have good jobs are understandably reluctant to give them up when there's no assurance they can find others as good or better.

The new system, nearly five years in preparation, will involve initially the Episcopal Church, the American Baptist denomination is welcome to join and several — including the Southern Baptist Convention, the Church of the Brethren, and the United Presbyterian Church—are now considering the idea.

With a grant from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, the participating denominations have set up a computerized data bank into which has been fed detailed personnel profiles of all ministers and other professionals (such as religious education specialists) in each denomination.

Send Inquiry
When the new "church manpower system" is fully operational, as it should be by the end of the year, a congregation seeking a pastor will simply send an inquiry through its own denominational headquarters.

It will promptly receive a list of available ministers of that denomination who meet the job requirements indicated in the inquiry, with personnel profiles of each man, showing his education, experience and other qualifications. This means a congregation, wherever located, will be able to choose its minister from the whole pool of available men throughout the country.

Clergymen seeking employment also may apply through denominational channels, and the computer will print out a list of openings that fall within the geographical area, salary range or other specifications laid down by the job-hunter. He can then apply directly to one or more of the listed congregations.

Many agencies including governmental, voluntary, and religious, offer recreation programs. Yet the home remains the most important center, not only for recreation itself but also for developing lifelong recreation interests, skills, and tastes. Patterns set in the home for the use of leisure influence lifelong choices of forms of recreation. The parents' responsibility for establishing good patterns, then, is very great. Remember this: There is reason to believe that personality is developed to an important extent in leisure. Young people who exhibit undesirable social behavior are often the ones who have never had the opportunity to learn how to use their leisure constructively.

Pay, Pressures Bother Protestant Clergymen

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

New York (AP)—Most Protestant clergymen, particularly in the older categories, are satisfied in their profession. But they feel they're underpaid. And many are chaffing under parish pressures.

As in the Roman Catholic priesthood, an increasing number of them seem to be opting out.

These are among the findings of a variety of studies, surveys and symposiums conducted recently in an effort to gauge the mood and the problems in the ministry.

Garrett Theological Seminary, a United Methodist institution in Evanston, Ill., in a survey of 4,472 alumni, found that most clergymen enjoy their work and have a sense of accomplishment about it.

But this attitude prevails more among older clergy than among the young.

Most Satisfied
Seventy per cent of those graduated in 1930's are "highly satisfied" in their work, while only 55 per cent of the graduates of the 1960's feel that way about it.

However, another survey of 4,984 clergymen in 21 denominations, made by the Society for the Advancement of Continuing Education for Ministers, found that 88 per cent of the total feel they are underpaid.

The median annual income for those polled was $8,037, including housing and other allowances.

Although they have to spend nearly as many years of study preparing for their profession as doctors or lawyers, they earn less than a third as much, on the average.

Nevertheless, only 9 per cent of them said they were "dissatisfied with being in the ministry."

On the other hand, recent studies indicate the exodus from the ministry is increasing, both among Protestants and Roman Catholics.

The Rev. Dr. E. A. Vordery,

Atlanta, Ga., told a meeting of Southern Baptist home missions leaders in Ridgecrest, N.C., that estimates put the total leaving as high as 10,000 pastors and priests each year.

Among them are some of the best clergymen, he said, adding that common reasons for their departures include inadequate salaries, the general apathy of congregations and unreasonable pressures and expectations placed on them.

Under Pressures

Many go into depression, he said, under pressures from denominational administrators, divergent expectations of members for making the church prosper and because of the inability to satisfy the often conflicting demands.

"The pastors who continue their work in the local church frequently feel drained, physically, emotionally and spiritually," said Dr. Vordery, chief of chaplains at Georgia Baptist Hospital.

"The demands made upon them by the church and community leave the feeling they have attempted an impossible task."

Urgent Problem

In the Roman Catholic Church, its bishops consider the loss of priests from their vocations as the most urgent problem in the Church, according to a survey by Gallagher Report, an authoritative business publication.

It found that 83 per cent of 31 bishops questioned regard the shrinkage of priestly vocations as the Church's No. 1 problem.

It found that 83 per cent of 31 bishops questioned regard the shrinkage of priests as "faithful to conscience." This indicates a moderating of the bishop's attitude about it since two years ago, when 16 per cent took such a view.

The survey also found that most bishops consider the rule of mandatory celibacy as the main reason for the departures.

the Consumer Basement Power Plant in Future?

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — You might be producing homemade electricity in your basement in a few years if a device being tested here proves practical.

The gadget is a natural gas "fuel cell" power plant similar to those used in Apollo spacecraft.

Fuel cell power is produced through an electrochemical reaction on the site where the electricity is used. Nothing is burned, and no huge central power stations are needed.

The unit, second to go into operation in the world, went into use here Dec. 1. The first unit was placed in a condominium home in Farmington, Conn., last May.

The unit, installed in an automotive repair shop, is part of an extensive test program being undertaken across the country over the next 18 months. Up to 50 fuel cell power plants will be tested in homes, apartments, stores, office buildings and factories.

Each unit will be operated for three months to determine whether fuel cell power plants are feasible for on-site generation of electricity for commercial, industrial and residential use.

George Morrow, president of a major Chicago utility, said they use about 25% less natural gas to deliver the same amount of electricity as a big central power station. Because no fuel is burned, he said, they produce only 1% of the air pollution created by conventional power plants.

The fuel cell units are made by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corp.

Not Enough Capital In Ghetto Banks

Washington (AP) — Andrew F. Brimmer, the only black member of the Federal Reserve Board, says black banks cannot provide the capital needed to finance trade and industrial development in the nation's inner cities.

Brimmer, who once aroused the wrath of black bankers by calling the country's 26 black-owned banks mainly ornaments in the ghettos, said the past year has brought gains in their size, strength and quality of management.

But they are still "small community service institutions," Brimmer said. Despite government efforts to build their deposits, he said, they are for too small to mobilize the quantities of risk capital needed for investment in the development of industry, trade, transportation and housing in the ghettos.

Cheaper Steak Goal Of Simmental Breeders

New York (UPI) — Most Americans probably would be surprised to learn that their much less affluent grandparents could afford steak for dinner several times a week. Today it's an expensive dish but the industry is doing something about it.

An association of cattle breeders is introducing the Alpine Simmental beef cattle into the United States for crossbreeding with Herefords, Shorthorns and Angus in order to produce bigger steers faster. A half-blooded Simmental bull recently weighed 1,705 pounds on his first birthday, a record for any breed. Simmental cross-bred slaughter steers average 1,100 pounds at 12 to 13 months.

"Moreover," says Gordon Philip, a native Scot who manages the herd of International Simmental Co. near Kansas City, "beef from the Simmental cross-breeds not only grades choice but has fine flavor equal to the best black Angus, Hereford or Shorthorn beef."

Sweet Deals Possible On Posh Used Cars

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Rushing to buy new cars because of the auto price freeze and auto excise tax removal, many people have been overlooking sweet deals on late model, top line used cars.

New car dealers say that so many 1972 and even new 1971 models are being sold that a large number of top line used cars are going begging — cars like Chrysler's posh Imperial and Chevrolet's big Impala.

Wholesalers — the used car lot operators — aren't touching many top line cars because there's such a surplus of them. Or if they're buying, the price is way off from the year-ago level.

This Lockheed 1011 TriStar jet is one of such planes which Eastern Airlines plans to have in scheduled flight by the end of 1972.

Eastern Airlines Eagerly Awaiting Delivery of 50 New TriStar Jets

Miami (UPI) — The people at Eastern Airlines are like kids at Christmas waiting to fly a new airplane they believe will earn a lot of money — the Lockheed 1011 TriStar.

Eastern will spend about $850 million for a fleet of 50 TriStars, the plane which made headlines during bitter congressional debate over Lockheed's financial problems requiring "bailout" money. The airline has a firm order for 37 of them to be delivered starting around mid-March next year. The other 13 are on option for delivery by the latter part of 1972.

"A number of them will be tried out on the New York, Miami, San Juan routes as early as mid-April," an Eastern spokesman said, "and we'll have six of them in full schedule by July 1. We plan to have 15 of them in scheduled flight by the end of 1972."

Airline officials say there is no way to pinpoint exactly how much is being spent to get the TriStars into service, but the figure is well into the millions.

For pilot training alone Eastern is spending $18 million, which involves temporarily uprooting pilots from their bases and sending them to month-long training sessions at Lockheed-California Co. headquarters in Burbank and Palmdale, Calif.

Another $18 million will be spent on a 10-story high overhaul hangar designed to accommodate three TriStars at one time on Eastern's property at Miami International Airport.

Other expenditures involved in getting the TriStars into operation include about 12,000 paid man hours of engineering evaluation before the decision was made to buy the plane and another 10,000 man hours spent on adapting the plane to service.

The Tri-Star, which is smaller and about half as heavy as the Boeing 747, is the fastest of the new wide-bodied commercial jets, with cruising speeds of 600 miles per hour. The plane seats 248 persons under Eastern's cabin configuration—38 in first class and 210 in coach.

$4 Billion Paid In Support to Airports/Airways By Passengers and Airlines Over Decade 1961-70

* Airline support to airports/airways derived from these sources: airport facilities rentals, 53 percent; landing fees, 40 percent; federal and state taxes on fuel and other miscellaneous taxes on aircraft operations, 7 percent.

† U. S. transportation tax on passengers for support to airports and airways was 10 percent through Nov. 15, 1962. Although the rate declined to 5 percent from Nov. 16, 1962 through June 30, 1970 and was 3 percent thereafter, higher volume of travel ultimately meant increased total of tax revenue.

'None of 12 Major Airlines Is Subsidized'

The Air Transport Association of America (ATAA) reports that "none of the 12 major airlines is now subsidized—and 11 of them have received no form of subsidy in the past 15 years."

The 12th did receive subsidy payments until a few years ago to sustain operations to small cities lacking in sufficient traffic potential, the ATAA points out.

The ATAA further reports, as it attacks what it calls the "subsidy myth," that there is no element of subsidy in the mail rates paid to these carriers.

"In fact, the Post Office pays less than regular air freight rates for the transportation of much of the mail that moves by air."

"The federal government does pay a subsidy to certain smaller airlines to make air service possible for communities that are unable, because of their size, to generate a profitable volume of traffic.

"Receiving subsidies are nine regional airlines in the 48 contiguous states, four in Alaska and one in Hawaii. Among them, they account for only 6% of all passenger miles flown."

"Total subsidy for fiscal year 1971 is estimated at $63.2 million, while passengers and airlines contributed about $800 million to airport-airways support in 1970."

Japan Foreign Aid 44.4% Higher in '70

Tokyo (AP) — A government white paper has reported Japan paid out $1.82 billion in foreign aid last year, a 44.4% increase over 1969.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry said that while the volume of Japanese economic assistance to poor nations ranked second only to that of the United States, the quality of Japan's assistance was "rather poor."

It also said Japanese government loans carried an annual interest rate of 3.5%, much higher than the 2.7% charged by other members of the Development Assistance Committee.

Gold Lost to Four

(c) New York Times

Washington — Four nations — France, Finland, Switzerland and Singapore — accounted for nearly all of the United States gold loss of $299.6 million in the third quarter of this year, the U.S. Treasury said.

the World Diamonds Aren't Good Investment

London (AP) — Diamonds may be a girl's best friend, but they're not much use to an investor, a money magazine reported today.

A year ago "Money Which" magazine bought diamonds worth $3,750, to test their investment value. The best offer it received when it tried to sell them recently was $2,880.

The lowest offers totalled a mere $1,283, and some dealers refused to bid at all.

Contemplating the shrunken value of its hoard of three loose diamonds, two diamond rings, and one antique diamond brooch, Money Which advised: "By all means buy diamonds in the hopes of setting hearts afire—but provide for your old age in some other way."

"Diamond buying — at least on our scale — is clearly unsuitable as a short-term investment," it said.

A London dealer commented: "There is a high profit margin on the purchase price which has to be paid off. Diamonds are not a get-rich-quick deal at all."

Bowling Interests Russians

By CAROLE MARTIN

New York (AP) — Thousands of Soviet citizens who got their first look at a bowling ball only a few months ago expect to be rolling their own strikes and spares next summer.

Brunswick Corp., which is equipping the U.S.S.R.'s first bowling center, due to open in Moscow next July, introduced the sport in August at a Soviet recreational exhibition in Moscow.

"There was tremendous interest, we had a problem controlling the crowds," said Roger Bensinger, vice president of marketing for Brunswick's bowling division.

Some 40,000 people filed through the exhibition hall in Moscow's Gorki Park during the three weeks Brunswick operated two bowling lanes, complete with automatic pinsetters and automatic scoring units.

In addition, Bensinger said an even wider audience was introduced to the sport because of the heavy television, magazine, and newspaper coverage of the exhibit.

"The recreation specialists would come in for demonstrations, and then bring their wives and children back a few days later," Bensinger said.

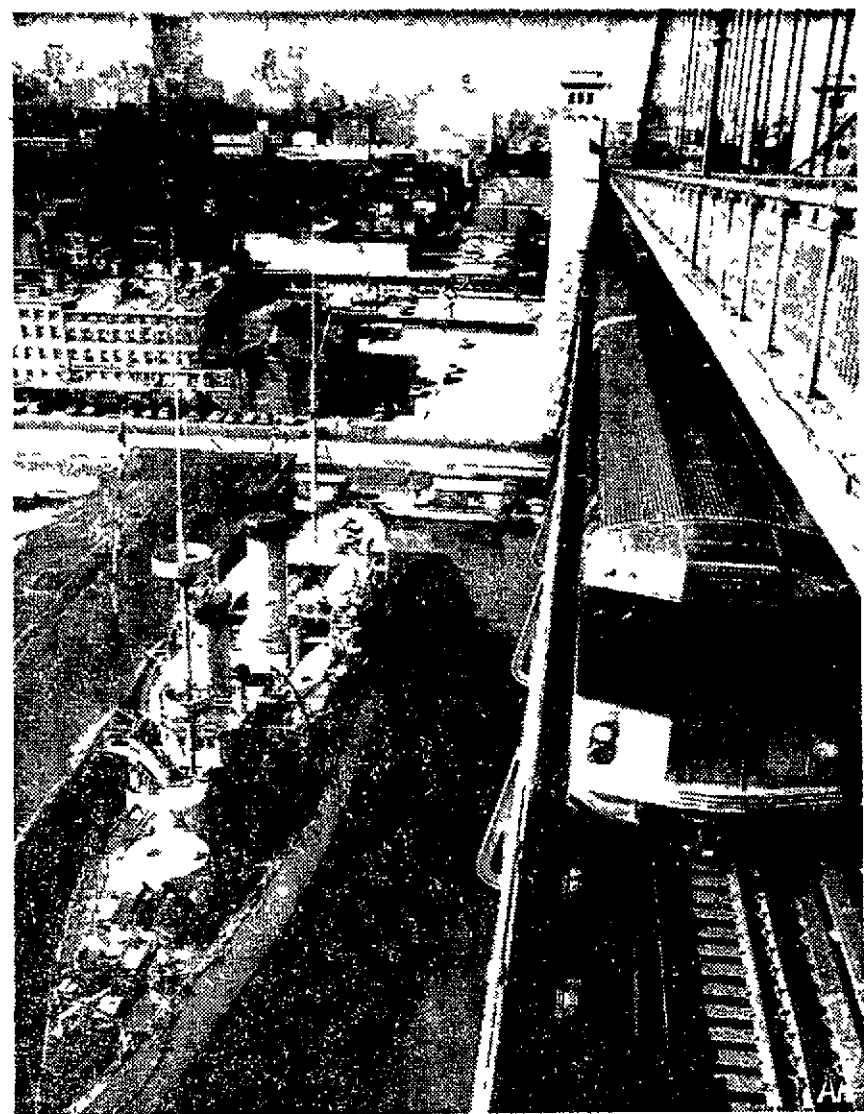

Catalogues, a specially written brochure, and other printed materials translated into Russian helped tell the story of bowling as a sport to exhibit visitors.

"The officials we talked with were very concerned about finding activities for youth, and one asked whether bowling was an Olympic sport," Bensinger said.

Although bowling is not an Olympic sport, Bensinger was quick to point out that some 32 nations were participating in an international bowling tournament in Milwaukee, Wis., at the same time the exhibition was being held.

"The men who asked seemed quite interested in the fact that there was an international competitive vehicle," Bensinger said.

Brunswick left the two bowling lanes in Moscow for a 30-day period after the exhibition closed, so that a company technician could teach Soviet engineers how to operate and maintain the equipment. Brunswick's service manual was translated into Russian, as well.

High Speed Trains Ease City's Transit Problem

By D. STEVEN RUTKUS

Philadelphia (AP) — It begins on the fringes of the south Jersey countryside, where the apartment developments and discount shopping centers have only begun to envelop the corn fields.

Within 23 minutes, the sleek, air-conditioned, soundproof cars have sped across the Benjamin Franklin Bridge, past the white spire of Christ Church, where Franklin and George Washington worshipped; beneath Independence Hall and the other tree-shaded, red-brick buildings where the country's government was first conducted, to an underground terminus in the center of the city.

There, and at other stops, the electrically powered, highly automated trains of the Lindenwold High Speed Line, billed as the most modern, fastest and attractive rapid transit line in the country, disgorges its cargo of commuters.

Speed, comfort and accessibility are the keys to the success of the Delaware River Port Authority's $94.5 million experiment.

Rumpled, sweat stained or soiled clothing, long a hallmark of the commuter, is vanishing.

The trains, operate every five minutes during the rush hours between Lindenwold, N.J., and Philadelphia. With seven stops, they ply the 14.5-mile route in less than half the time it takes to drive. The trains average 40 miles per hour, attaining top speed of 75 m.p.h.

More Mileage Planned

Plans to triple the line's track mileage through other communities in the rapidly expanding suburbs are on the drawing boards.

Before the line started operations on Feb. 15, 1969, the future of transit in the Philadelphia metropolitan area belonged to the auto by default.

By its own attention to aesthetics, the line has provided a persuasive argument for farsighted land-use planning. In its short existence, the line also has brought suburbanites back to the facilities of center city and increased sentiment for government to subsidize mass transit of the quality of the Lindenwold line.

"Most important from the national standpoint," says Richard E. Pinkham, the line's general manager, "we've shown that the American public is not married to its automobile."

The 35,000 daily passengers carried by the line are only a small fraction of the commuters who drive their cars across the Delaware River bridges linking Philadelphia to New Jersey.

The estimated 9.2 million passengers who will ride the line this year are well below the original 1971 estimate of 11.6 million.

Consultants to the bistate port authority which built the line without any federal, state or local aid, estimate revenues this year will total $14 million, $1 million less than anticipated.

The line lost approximately $150,000 last year. But the outlook for the future is optimistic, officials say.

10 Million Passengers

The latest report to the authority estimates that the line will handle 10 million passengers next year, increasing to 13.7 million by 1975.

Optimism is based on surveys of passengers. Some 40% indicated they once commuted to work in Philadelphia by car. Another 36% said they used to take buses.

"Trains like the Lindenwold are going to have to take over more of the transit burden from the automobile," says Pinkham.

"It would require a 14-lane highway along the Lindenwold route for automobile traffic to move as many people as the high speed train does," he says.

the Nation Insurance Rates to Dip?

New York (AP) — Some property and liability insurers are reporting solid profits in recent months and so the prospects are growing that rates may soon be coming down.

While this is good news for homeowners, businessmen, drivers and others, it is almost too much to believe for some of the insurers, who year after year lost money even though they raised rates.

For the decade ending Dec. 31, 1969, for example, the underwriting losses for 148 capital stock liability companies were $1.2 billion. And as recently as last year the property-liability losses totaled $275 million.

Insurers credit many factors for their improving situation: rate increases, or "relief" as they call it, a slowing of inflation that helped them bring costs under control, and the economic slowdown.

But one huge company, Continental Casualty, found the remedy, at least in part, in the company it upgraded management personnel, cut down expenses, became profit and consumer oriented and worked its way from a $34 million loss in 1965 to the break-even point last year.

October Figures Show 20% More Construction

Fatigued Metal Can Be Detected

Tucson (AP) — A new technique for detecting fatigued or cracked metal in airplanes has been developed by a University of Arizona electrical engineering professor. Stuart A. Hoeng said the system he has developed could help prevent crashes by warning "a pilot to land as soon as possible if the stress caused a serious weakening or a crack in a major structural area."

"All metals contain electrons which will escape when the material is heated," Hoeng said. "The electron escape occurs in a region that is weakened, damaged or where a crack has formed." His system involves heating the metal and detecting electron escape.

Good News Changes Wall St. Mood

(c) New York Times
New York — To the great glee of investors and Wall Street, the pendulum of stock market sentiment swung 180 degrees last week from extreme pessimism to high optimism as the result of one basic force — an upsurge of confidence that many of the current international economic problems would soon be resolved. Leading stock market averages soared to their best weekly gains in years.

The change in mood happened suddenly amidst a Wall Street atmosphere hungering for good news. It came after Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally manifested publicly for the first time a disposition to compromise on the hard-line the United States had been taking on the currency and trade issues.

Back in the spring, when top United States economic officials were becoming highly upset by a renewed speculation run against the dollar in the foreign-exchange markets and a seriously deteriorating trade balance, a high-level White House source at a private briefing rejected the idea of any international conference to set up a new world monetary system "until we have our own ducks in a row."

Apparently Washington concluded the time was ripe to set up its formation at last week's meeting of the West's finance ministers in Rome.
The U.S. delegation set off for the historic meeting after President Nixon had expressed confidence it would make progress in settling the difficult currency and trade dispute. It seems to have done so, and now hopes are rising that at least some of the issues will soon be settled, perhaps at the next meeting of the finance officials in Washington on Dec. 17-18.

With the prospect of an international economic settlement in the air and the big tax-reduction bill now apparently palatable to the administration, the securities markets last week had basically good news to contemplate and they responded enthusiastically.

Buying Stocks Payment Margin Lowered

Washington (AP) — When the stock exchange opens Monday there will be lower immediate payment margins for buying stocks.
The Federal Reserve Board lowered the margin requirement from 65 to 55% Friday, a move generally viewed by investors as an incentive to greater sales.
The change means that investors may borrow up to 45% of the purchase price of stocks when the exchanges begin business Monday.
One investor, Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities Inc., linked the change to speculation over changing the price of gold.

Lower margin requirements give market participants more buying leverage," he said. "This is favorable for stock prices particularly if the gold price is changed over this or an ensuing weekend."
Left untouched by the board were the 50% margin requirement for buying or carrying convertible bonds and the 70% "retention requirements" on under margin accounts.

Residential Building Up 100%

October contracts for residential construction in Nebraska were up over 100% according to the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.
Contracts for nonresidential construction — including commercial, manufacturing, educational, religious, administrative and recreational buildings — were down 24% in October, from $8,387,000 in 1970 to $6,410,000 in 1971.

Residential construction in October was up over 100%, from $9,677,000 in 1970 to $21,723,000 in 1971.
October contracts for non-building construction — including streets and highways, bridges, dams, sewage and water supply systems, airports, etc. — were up 28% at $5,536,000 in 1971 from $4,313,000 in 1970.

Auto Fumes Bother Cyclists Climbing the Rockies

3 COLOR

By BESS JENKINS

How about a bicycle trip next spring, maybe to California? Too far?

Not so, says Lincoln VISTA veteran Dave Kremer, who made it from here to the Golden Gate Bridge in 40 days of biking and 40 nights of sleeping in a bedroll, mostly under the stars.

This is a trip best made with others, reports Dave, who was one in nine starting out from Lincoln. Two dropped out after conquering the Rockies on two-wheel transportation.

15 mph on Level

Like Dave, most were Volunteers in Service to America (VISTAs), who had completed their year's assignment of work among the low income through community action programs.

"Yes, I'd do it again," said the healthy, trim looking young Dave. An encore came from Diane Teshima, one of the feminine westward ho biking VISTAs, whose home is in San Francisco.

With 10-speed bicycles capable of easy cruising about 15 miles an hour on level ground, the young group got in shape by weekend trips out of Lincoln for some months prior to takeoff. In addition, of course, the bicycle investments being daily transportation to young people on a $150 a month salary as VISTAs.

Take Dave's word for it, the group biked all the way. He vows they didn't seek or accept a ride.

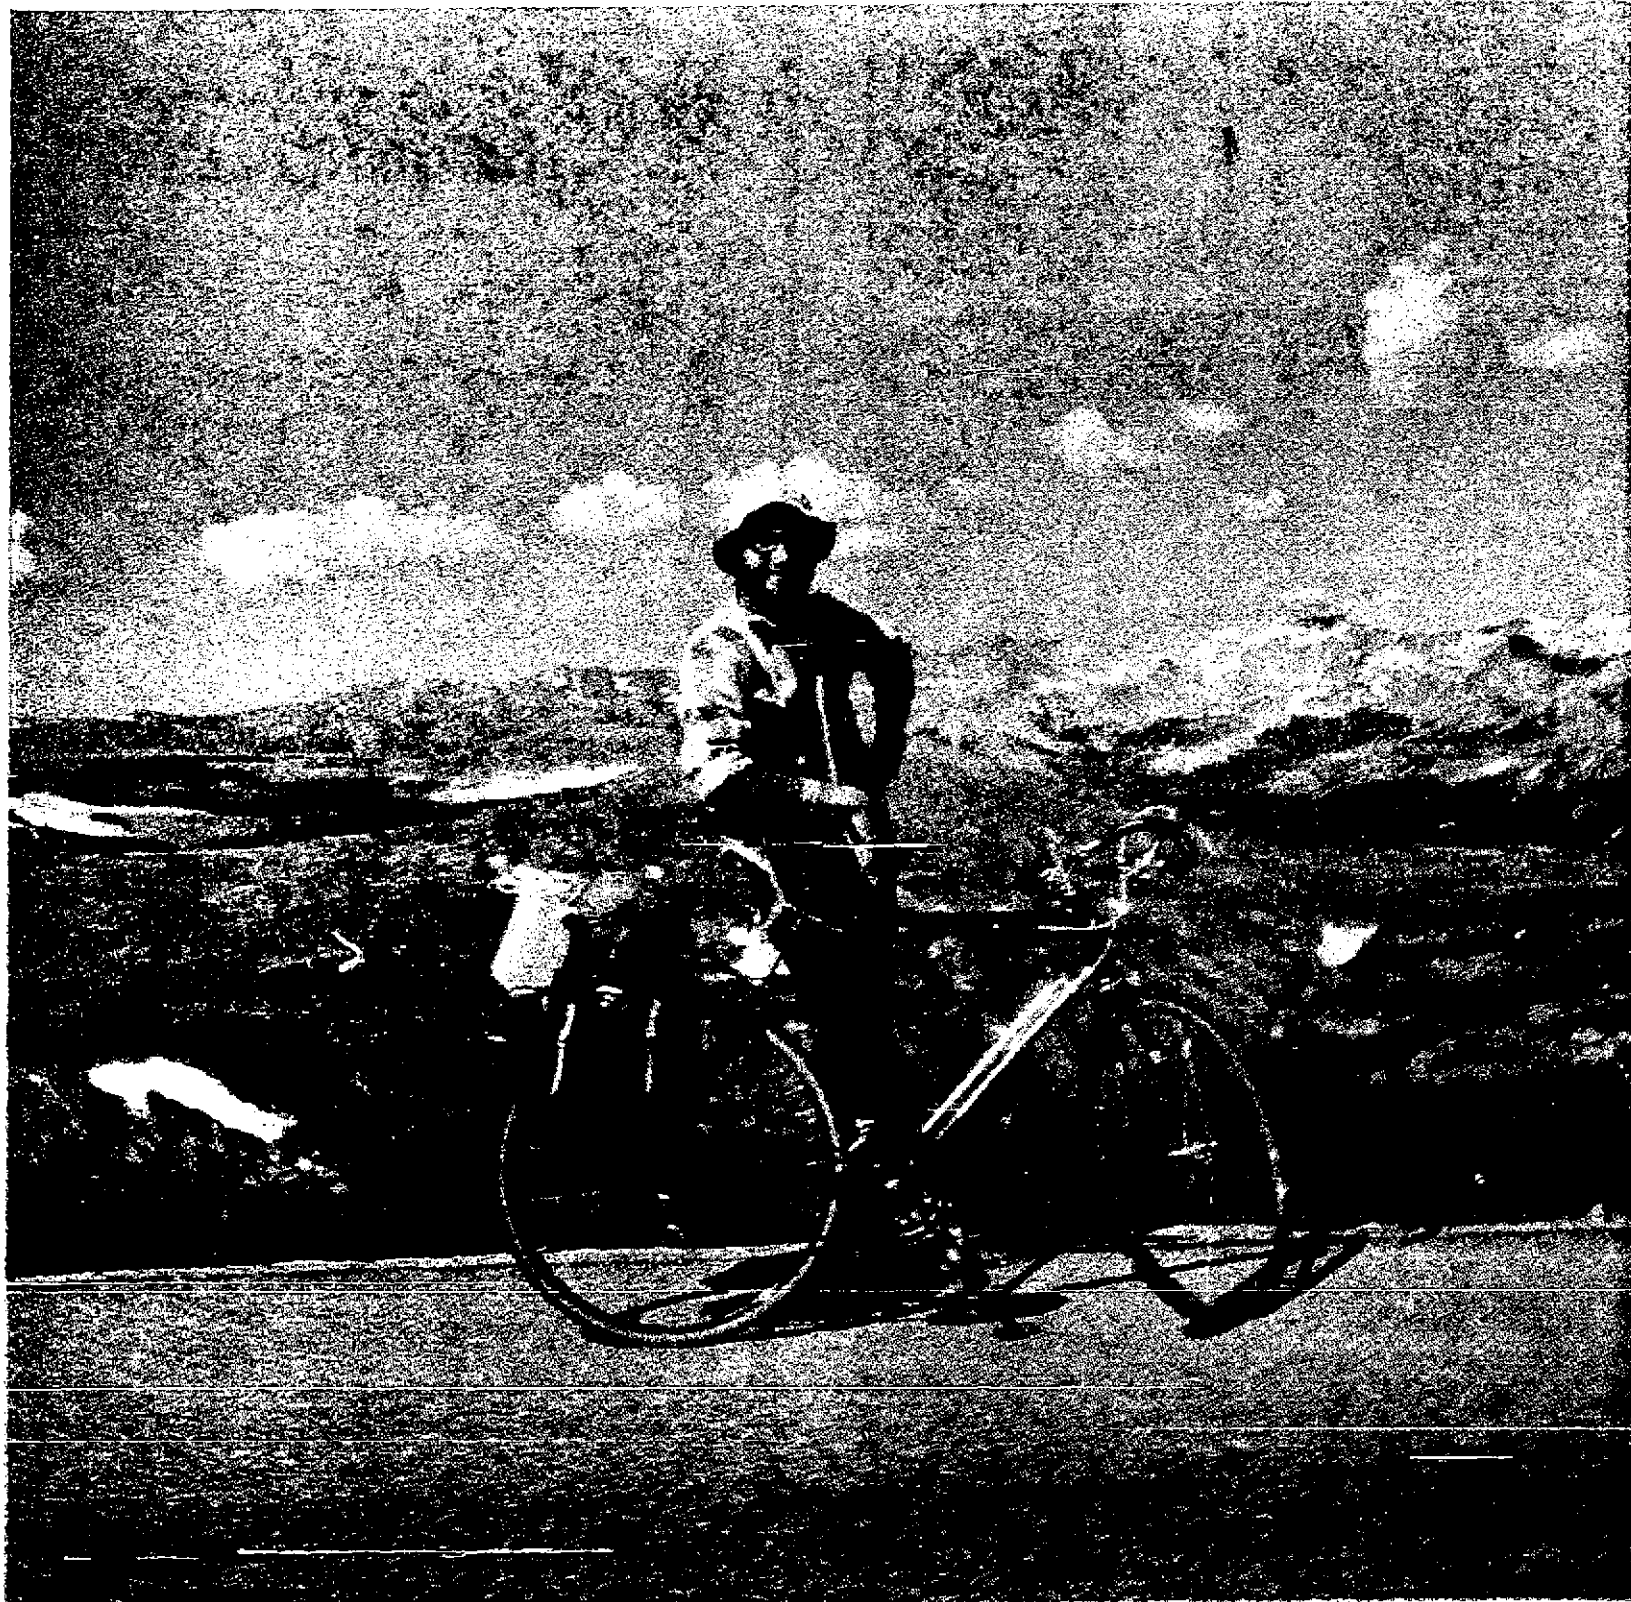

"We walked a half mile stretch the first day in the Rockies," Dave recalls. It took a little time to get accustomed to the high altitude atmosphere. Besides, he adds, "I wasn't feeling so good that day. Passing car fumes in the mountain air really got to us, too."

High Point

The climax in the 2,200 mile trip was the day they reached the highest point — the 12,183 ft. summit on Trailridge Highway in Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado. It was at Grand Lake that the young people made their only real stop — three days for mountain camping.

Most travel money went for food, especially good hearty breakfasts to generate energy for the day's biking, says Dave. Noon meals usually came out of grocer store sacks, produced along the wayside.

With sleeping bags, there was no end of interesting places where the young adults had no trouble falling asleep each night.

Dave Kremer and his bicycle, on Trailridge Road in Rockies.

It was a churchyard in Elko, Nev. A couple of rangers' cabins in the Rockies by invitation. High school football fields in such places as Lovelock, Nev., turned out to be fine spots for sleeping bags. So were school yards.

Asked Police

Among the most frequented places were city parks, always with the permission of police, says Dave.

"Steamboat Springs, Colo., police said 'no' so it was the roadside that night."

Police refusal in Wells, Nev., made that evening's bed solution bleak to the group as they talked it over in a cafe. A listening waitress came to their rescue by inviting them into her front yard.

"We'd usually go to the nearest gas station and wash up for breakfast," said Dave.

Then there was that morning in Carson City, Nev., where there was no need to wash up.

Diane helps Dave recount this surprise episode:

"We had settled down in the park at Carson City after getting police permission and talked about what a beautifully kept place it was. It was a cold night, about 30 degrees.

"About 5 the next morning, we were suddenly aroused. Sleepy, we thought at first that it was raining. By the time we were fully awake we realized that the automatic sprinkling system had come on — but all of us were soaked."

Their next immediate stop was a laundromat where dryers were soon humming so the group could get back on a dry basis again.

Few Suspicious

In the wet jeans crowd with Dave and Diane were VISTAs Joe Hunter, Kate Storms, Robert and Mary Dykstra, all working under Lincoln Action Program; Kitty Clark, in the Columbus Project 93 program; Greg Herlick, with Omaha's anti-poverty programs, and a maverick, accountant Jerry Engel of Philadelphia. He is Dave's hometown friend.

Dave and the others say that most fellow Americans across the land on the way west welcomed the group's long hair and beards, jeans, backpacks and mode of travel with genuine interest and friendliness.

The only exception was in parts of Utah, where some looks were more like stares of suspicion, they say. The long-range bike traffic was no problem. Only about three or four traveling in the opposite direction.

After they biked over the Golden Gate Bridge, how did Dave get back to Lincoln for his second year in VISTA?

He smiled sheepishly a few seconds, then said, "Ah, I took a train home. I had proven to myself that I could do it by bicycle."

Indian Stage Troupe Forms, But There Won't Be a Hiawatha

By WILLIAM GLOVER

Washington (AP) — The first theater of, by and for American Indians is being organized. But don't expect any Hiawatha romancing or warpath whooping.

"We're not going to be any feathers-and-buckskin ensemble riding over the hills on horseback in some kind of historic pageant" warns Hanay Geiogamah.

"What we want to dramatize is our very reason for being alive."

Geiogamah, who is half Kiowa and half Delaware, is the 26-year-old leader of some heritage-proud activists who have managed to win $25,000 from the National Endowment for the Arts to show that the country's first citizens, like other ethnic minorities, deserve esthetic recognition.

Sante Fe Base

If further anticipated funding from private philanthropy materializes, a 16-member ensemble will sortie forth from home base in Sante Fe, N.M., to reservations with a highly varied repertory.

The pilot project launches in January with Geiogamah and associates undertaking a nine-month course in theatrical discipline and techniques at that eminent center of youthful endeavor created by Ellen Stewart in New York.

The Indian group linked up with energetic Miss Stewart after initial inquiry last year to the National Endowment about how to get started.

Miss Stewart, who has nurtured young companies in such far places as Colombia, Europe and Japan, says "Hanay's project is fantastically sensible."

Tongue Twister

The heavy-built man whom everyone calls Hanay because of that tongue-twister surname, traces his determination to have an Indian theater to youthful reading back in Anadarko, Okla., about drama events in distant places, especially Broadway.

"I was just smacked with theater," he says. At the University of Oklahoma he avidly reviewed a available stagecraft, but "never had any desire to get up and act myself."

While busy here as a field agent for the National Bureau of Indian Affairs, he and kindred spirits felt the time had come for racial representation among performing arts groups.

Have Background

Although drama action in the Western tradition has never existed for his people, Hanay points out "The Indian always has had theatricality in religious ceremonies and festivals. The impulse comes from the same roots at European theater."

"The difference is that Indians have responded more, and been enriched more than others by this impulse, a universal sense of theater."

"We're hoping to harness this inborn sense into an arena of concentration in which we can look at our situation in politics and the social environment."

"We want to do plays about Indian mistreatment of each other, of how the white man has created a certain Indian image, how the young see a world in which they are trapped."

Seven Dramas

Ready for presentation are seven dramas, four by Hanay himself. Certain contrasts and parallels are discernible between Indian objectives and those of black stagecraft.

"When I started to think about theater work I wanted to use it to crucify whites in plays, but then I said to myself that is silly because we aren't going to make them repent or relent."

"What we want to take is the approach of survival in the future rather than reproach for the past, even though I have no doubt the planners want to take away the American Indian's individuality and fuse it into the melting pot."

Rather than dramatizing the traditions or attitudes of various tribes, a broad approach to racial ethos is intended.

Self-Help

The National Conference for Indian Self-Determination, in convention at Kansas City last March, responded to Hanay's vision with an endorsement representing the approval of 200 tribes. The endowment grant, along with other funds to be raised for a first-year budget of $110,000, is to be administered by Americans for Indian Opportunity, a self-help organization.

Working with Geiogamah in the leadership are William Pensoneau, of Oklahoma's Ponca Nation, who is dropping out of a Harvard University project to head the theater's educational aspects.

Others are Ed Wapp Jr., a Shawnee-Comanche, and Jerry Bolton, an Alaska Eskimo, both concerned with music; Bruce Miller, a Yakima and sculptor-weaver-jeweler; and Rance Hood, a Comanche who is to apply paint skills to scenic design.

Recruiting Begun

Recruiting for the acting company is now under way, with emphasis on those who believe the Indian has a right to retain historic pride.

"We're not saying we can awaken," Hanay carefully limits purpose "but we hope we can communicate something very meaningful."

Focus on the MOVIES The Worst Ever To Be Put on Film?

By HOLLY SPENCE

The week ahead looked slim for reviews, but then it came to light that the Embassy Theater had on tap a film entitled Three-Cornered Bed.

We have hit the bottom of the barrel with this piece of celluloid — it would actually be praise to call it a motion picture.

Several weeks ago I walked out of a screening of this filthy bit of garbage. Twenty minutes of this repulsive, degrading, trashy bit of nothing was all I could bear. It was the first film I had walked out of in seven years of ardent film-going.

Perhaps there is a market for the film, but it is difficult to understand why any "good film" lover would waste his time and money.

Failing to sit Three-Cornered Bed through, I cannot explain the entire story. But the setting is a bed and in the first 20 minutes there was an over-excess of promiscuous sexual activity.

There has never been anything in any of Lincoln's first-run theaters to compare with this bit of filth. It is the worst!

Children Participate In This Art Show

A participatory art program for children, developed by Hallmark Cards will be held at Park School, 8th and F, Wednesday through Dec. 17.

Local sponsors of the program, Kaleidoscope, are the Junior League of Lincoln in cooperation with the Lincoln Public Schools.

Third graders will attend Kaleidoscope as a field trip and groups are being scheduled after school and on Saturday mornings. Kaleidoscope will be open to the public on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Associate director Janice Tapper travels with Kaleidoscope and will be in Lincoln for the opening.

Activities in the Idea Room of the program focus on learning through seeing, hearing, touching and listening to common objects presented in unusual ways.

The art projects in the Studio Workshop put art in a new dimension of color and texture. Children learn to create the unusual by using common materials.

Everything created in the workshop may be taken home. Materials and equipment have been donated by Hallmark.

A creativity kit containing materials and an instruction book is available to the child for a nominal charge, used to defray handling costs.

Our Little Town Snow Cannot Cancel Long Pitch Game

By GERTRUDE SKINNER

Ruskin

As I write (Nov. 23) the first snow of the season is falling.

Outside my kitchen window snowflakes polka dot the air, spiral downward, linger but for a second on the warm earth, then disappear, melting into the thirsty soil.

Borne out of the south on a gentle, caressing breeze this downy cover seems an ethereal, too-good-to-last ceremonious introduction to winter.

As I remember Oct. 9, 1970, and the first snowfall of last season I feel a lot less poetic.

On that date Mother Nature, whipped by a howling wind, saw fit to dump 13 inches of white on our unsuspecting little town. To say we were unprepared for the onslaught would be the understatement of this season, last season or any season.

Our personal dilemma was a snowdrift of gigantic proportions that situated itself between our little house our little garage and our little snowshovel.

Being a woman of great determination and little sense I took unto myself the only weapon at hand—a dust pan, and did battle with that drift simply because it was there.

My long suffering husband and our never surprised neighbors kept calling to me to cease and desist. Cease and desist I did but not until I had reached the garage, the snow shovel and a state of complete exhaustion.

Dragging the shovel behind me I staggered back to the house and for some reason strange to all, including myself, expected to find a shiny bright halo awaiting my arrival. Instead I was greeted only by a stridently ringing telephone.

A pleading masculine voice was saying, "If we come and get Eli can he come up town and play?"

Since Eli plays third chair on a four chair never-ending, year-around pitch game who was I to say "no" and spoil everyone's fun on a beautiful winter day?

And so the city fathers either by accident or design got out the village snowplow, tunneled to our house, rescued the lord of the manor and delivered him up town to his cronies.

Most stories have a moral. This one doesn't.

Concert Will Help Refugees

A public concert to aid Pakistani refugees will be given at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Unitarian Church, 70th and A, by Dr. and Mrs. Cary Lewis. Dr. Lewis, pianist, and Dorothy Lewis, cellist, will be assisted by Mary Howell, flute.

The concert is free but those attending will be given an opportunity to contribute to the Pakistan refugee fund which sponsored by World University Service.

The program will include the native Austrian version of Silent Night, which is different from the American version. Dr. and Mrs. Lewis lived in Vienna two years before he came to Wesleyan this fall.

Kimball Hall Used by 6,325 in a Week

Indicative of the growing popularity of Kimball Recital Hall at the University of Nebraska are statistics from Director David Fowler showing 6,325 persons attended events there between Nov. 12 and 20.

Big drawing card to the 850-seat recital hall in that period was the children's opera Help, Help, the Globolinks. It was performed five times for enthusiastic audiences.

"It was one of our most popular events and brought many people to Kimball who had never been here before," said Fowler, a professor of music and vice director of the School of Music as well as director of the Hall.

"We believe that many of them will come back . . . Kimball Hall is a beautiful and delightful place, the seating is comfortable and the acoustics are excellent," Fowler added.

Kimball Hall

There were a variety of other events at Kimball Hall in the period cited. During the academic year there are an average of three to four events a week in the Hall.

The Lincoln Arts Council held a luncheon in the Kimball Lounge Nov. 15, and then about 50 members attended a recital by baritone Thomas Palmer, artist-in-residence at Crele's Doane College.

On Nov. 16 about 750 people heard University School of Music Prof. Audun Ravnan, a noted pianist, present a faculty recital.

On Nov. 18 School of Music students, Charlotte Bumgarner of Strang and George Cook of Lincoln performed in recital with an audience of about 250.

A faculty brass quintet and a faculty woodwind quintet presented a recital for about 400 on Nov. 19.

The hall took on a different look the next night when it switched away from School of Music talent for an entertainment by student members of the International Club. This program drew about 800.

A School of Music faculty member performs in recital nearly every Tuesday night at Kimball and student recitals are normally on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

SAGITTARIUS

Your birthday today: Learning to distinguish between what you need and what you want is a major point in the lesson of the year ahead, along with learning to draw a line between your own and others' interests.

Today's natives are fond of long journeys, may seek a special trip now.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Diversify your efforts, add a sideline just to see how it pays. When quitting time comes turn your whole attention to your home life.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Change is the most probable main theme of the day; there are many details to learn or review in all too short a time.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): The less you confide of personal affairs the better. Some fairly demanding subjective situation is almost inevitable, could be fun.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Organize your plans and projects to suit your own controls and resources. The people who fail you now are in error, not moving by intent.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Luck is indicated for today. Be on time despite temptations to dally or inject extra stops into your itinerary.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Begin your week with an open mind. Be willing to give others freedom of different opinions and reasonable expression.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Personal plans may have a brief setback if you go along with the distractions offered by other people.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Altho guessing does a lot, pose a couple of good questions in assessing the reasons for people's plans.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): See how you and others fit into the general project before taking on a major share of the work today. Sometimes it's all right to pass the buck.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Once you know precisely what you need you can more readily persuade others to provide assistance.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Optimism is a very good thing at present—perhaps in short supply. Expressing your own unbeatable view can be very helpful.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): To see temporary reverses in perspective sets you up in better shape to deal with the morning and tenfold better for the later hours.

Omaha Civic Ballet

'The Nutcracker' Here Next Sunday

Turkey and cranberries aren't the only things on the holiday menu. The Omaha Civic Ballet will dance The Nutcracker on the Stuart Theater stage next Sunday at 3 and 7:30 p.m.
 These public performances are sponsored by Lincoln's Theater Arts for Youth (TAFY), an organization recently formed to develop cultural interests and future audiences for live theater.
 TAFY's program, involving all of the performing arts, officially opened in the fall of 1971 with a theatrical production, geared to and featuring young people.
 The holiday fantasy, The Nutcracker, will be accompanied by Leo Kopp and members of the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra. The choreography is by Valerie Roche of Omaha.
 Over 50 dancers, mainly from Omaha, will take part. The principal roles are danced by members of the Stephens College

Scene from "The Nutcracker."

School of Dance Repertory in Columbia, Mo. Laurie Fuller, who has studied dance in Los Angeles, plays the Sugar Plum Fairy, and Fred Mathews, an instructor in dance at Stephens, dances the Prince.

Lincoln members of the ballet corps include Jody and Jill Pershing, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Pershing; Kari Ravnar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Audun Ravnar, Leigh Ann Roth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arlan Roth, Lori Kidd, daughter of Mrs. Boyd Beebe; Janette Svoboda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Svoboda, and Penny Pappas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Pappas of Waverly.

For over 75 years, this ballet has enchanted children and adults with its imaginative story and unforgettable music. A beautiful Sugar Plum Fairy and her handsome partner guide the audience to the treasures of the Kingdom of Sweets.
 Mrs. Robert M. Burton, is TAFY chairman of the event.

Travel Service on Trail

C. Langhorne Washburn, assistant secretary of commerce for tourism, has announced that his department's U.S. Travel Service will join with the Old West Trail Foundation to produce a film to be shown on television stations throughout the world.

The 28-minute An Old West Trail Adventure will feature prime vacation attractions and events in five states.

The state travel directors in Nebraska, Montana, North and South Dakota and Wyoming will recommend various sights to be featured. Production is to begin next spring and the sound and color film will be ready for viewing in the spring of 1973.

Washburn said USTS will provide over $23,000 in federal matching funds for the project. This will underwrite half the production cost: Japanese, French, German, Italian, and Scandinavian translations; and world-wide distribution.

The foundation has worked with USTS in several promotions. The two jointly hosted travel writers and agents from throughout the world to Old West Trail country in 1969 and 1970. Last summer the Trail coordinated Old West activities for USTS's Man and His World Exhibition in Montreal.

Lincolnites who can place this building will know that a seasonal visitor has set up headquarters where Model T stands.

Last Week's Picture

This is the main street of Columbus, probably in the autumn of 1929. Close examination of the picture revealed a number of autos, including several Model A Fords, of 1929 manufacture, but no 1930 models were discovered.

Invasion of U.S. Profits BBC, Proves Enjoyable for Audience

By KENNETH L. DAVIS

London (AP) — Soames Forsyte breathed his respectable middle-class last. A saga had ended and millions of Americans sighed like mourning relatives.

The Forsyte Saga, the 26-part look at British middle-class life in the Victorian and Edwardian eras, produced by the British Broadcasting Corp., signalled an invasion of U.S. television by the British. It is sales adventure that has netted $2 million in nine months and the take appears likely to grow.

Sponsors Found

Saga's smash success on Public Broadcasting television prompted the Columbia Broadcasting System to buy BBC's The Six Wives of Henry VIII for prime time.

Public Broadcasting found a sponsor for the Masterpiece Theater series and for Lord Clark's Civilisation series.

The Masterpiece series includes The Spoils of Poynton by Henry James, The First Churchills Balzac's Pere Goriot and The Possessed by Dostoyevsky. Civilisation was a leisurely, low-key journey through man's culture.

Public Broadcasting also bought Elizabeth R, another series about the English monarch. The title role is played by Glenda Jackson, the recent Oscar winner.

Television unions and guilds in the United States, conscious of the decline of Hollywood and the film exodus abroad, note with some alarm the growing trend for British-made television drama.

The man to "blame" is Dennis Seuse, head of BBC enterprises and former New York BBC representative. Seuse got tired of banging his jovial head against the solid wall of sales resistance set up by U.S. commercial television.

Seuse said: "Nobody would listen to me. When I talked about BBC drama productions, they started shaking their heads before I finished the sentence. They said it wouldn't get any audience."

In those saleless days of the 1960s, one Midwest television chain manager told Seuse: "Look, all they want when they get home from work is beer and baseball."

BBC's Glow

Now in the 1970s, American television tubes glow with the Saga or The First Churchills or Civilisation or Six Wives—all BBC-produced.

BBC has a large foot in the U.S. television door. Seuse is the one who figured out the only way to sell BBC drama in the rating-conscious market

"Look, we can't sell straight to the commercial nets," he told his London bosses. "Let's sell to educational television at a lower rate and hook the nets into buying later."

Writer Ignored

Huw Wheldon, managing director of BBC television, said of U.S. television: "What becomes gradually and — to me at all events — even hatefully evident, is the almost total absence of the voice of the writer."

"I believe it is true to say that during the last calendar year the three great commercial networks in America did not between them put on any commissioned or new contemporary plays at all. The voice of the novelist and the scholar and the playwright is not there."

BBC points to writers like John Osborne, David Mercer, John Hopkins, Dennis Potter, Harold Pinter, Jeremy Sanford,

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

Dublin (UPI) — Bill Phillips pulled back the lace curtains and removed the "bed & breakfast" sign from the front room window.

"That's that," he said. "It stays down."

His wife, Sheila, shrugged her resigned acceptance. "It might as well," she agreed.

It had taken Sheila long months of gentle persuasion before her husband agreed to put the sign in the parlor window. "Everyone else was doing it, so why shouldn't we?" she said. "Everyone needs a little bit extra these days to keep going."

"It just didn't seem right," Bill said. "Strangers coming and going in the house and all that..."

Long, Vain Wait

Bill, who earns $4,200 a year as a clerk in an insurance office, thought it "unbecoming" to "go commercial." "We have never gone in for that sort of thing, you know," he explained.

In the end, economic considerations prevailed. There was $4.80 a day to be made. That would take care of the car payments.

So Bill painted a neat little black and white sign and placed it in the window of his two story home, only a mile from a popular northside beach. Then he sat back and waited.

He waited all through the summer months, but no one called at his door. It was little comfort to know that no one called at his neighbor's door either.

When he took down his sign and threw it away, it was Bill's acknowledgement that the days of easy money had gone: that Ireland's tourist boom was over.

Officially; Doldrums

Officially, of course, they do not say it is over, but they do admit it is in the doldrums. A combination of reasons are offered by officials for the dwindling in the tourist flow ranging from complaints of high prices at home to keener competition abroad. But one factor clearly emerges in the over-all pattern — the "troubles" in Northern Ireland have contributed greatly to the decline in traffic.

In an average year tourists from Northern Ireland itself account for 20 per cent of the over-all total.

This figure has steadily fallen since 1968 — considered a boom year in the republic's tourist industry — to a point where it is more than halved.

Eamon Ceannt, chief of the tourist industry, said: "The troubles in the North have had a very adverse effect and will make a significant difference to our total position."

In 1970 Ireland earned just short of $250 million from the tourist industry. This fell short by $5 million of the target set by the industry.

Any fall off this year will be a major blow. Tourism accounts for 15 per cent of all foreign currency and 160,000 persons are directly employed in it.

More Americans

Visitors from the United States — one in seven of every tourist coming to Ireland — were slightly up in 1970, but not enough to offset the steep decline in traffic from Britain and Northern Ireland.

In addition to the fall off of potential tourists, officials are also worried by the high per centage of those who never return after the first visit.

One official estimate put the figure as high as 80 per cent. "Naturally, a great number of visitors are once in a lifetime," the official said, "but there should be a greater percentage prepared to try it a second time."

The reasons uncovered by officials range from high prices, lack of public toilets and surprisingly, lack of civility.

Two Programs At Concordia

Seward — The College Band and Freshman Chorus of Concordia Teachers College will present a joint Christmas concert in Weller Chapel at 8 p.m. Friday.

At 8 p.m., next Sunday the Concordia Chorus and the Freshman Chorus join for an evening of Advent and Christmas music.

IPSA Issues Own Stamps

The Independent Postal System of America (IPSA) has issued its own "stamps" with formal ceremonies at the system's Oklahoma City headquarters. The adhesives will be used by IPSA, for all classes of mail except personal messages, which the government regards as its monopoly. Designed by the artist, Hans Roper, and based on an original idea by Thomas M. Murray, founder-president of the independent service, the stamps illustrate the IPSA acronym and the denomination. Somewhat larger than the usual stamp, the IPSA series is 75 millimeters by 22.5 millimeters. Differing color combinations identify five denominations; one-five, 10-25- and 50-cents.

The stamps, printed in sheets of 50, come in various assortment for philatelic purposes. Stamps used in the delivery of IPSA mail are cancelled with the system's indicia. Distribution will be from the IPSA's mid-continent headquarters, 1635 Tonne Road, Elk Grove Village, Chicago, Ill. 60007.

Not For U.S. Mail

The IPSA adhesives may not be used on matter being deposited in the U.S. mails, the U.S. Postal Service cautions. Putting such stamps on envelopes or packages would disqualify such envelopes or packages for mailing in the U.S. mails. This is true even if the mail should carry additional legal U.S. postage stamps, the Postal Service said. If deposited in receptacles for U.S. mail, letters carrying the so-called "stamps" are subject to return to mailers and postage due charges. Mailers should be certain that the only stamps affixed to letters and packages sent in the U.S. mail are the official U.S. postage stamps, if they want to insure prompt delivery.

Coin for S. Claus

By JOE PLANAS
Special Writer

Leave it to Coin World, the numismatics newspaper.

If nobody else has come out with a Santa Claus coin, Coin World has.

If you think you can't do without the Saint Nick tokens introduced, write to the Art-Gem Coins, 7916 Harvard Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, 44105.

They might make nice tree ornaments or maybe party favors — or perhaps just a Christmas souvenir.

Acrylics Shown

Peru — An art show of acrylics by Devon Adams, a 1967 graduate, will be on display at Peru State College Monday through Dec. 22. Miss Adams, an art teacher at Falls City, has done graduate work at the University of Nebraska.

Holiday Gift Books for Young People

By ELIZABETH L. BENTLEY
Chief of Services
For Young People
Lincoln City Libraries

Librarians are often asked whether children are reading as much today as they did before the advent of mass television and whether their tastes in reading have changed. Our answer to both questions is definitely yes.

Because society is no longer the same and the child's world has broadened, his tastes have become more sophisticated and selective. The language of realism and relevancy in today's books has more meaning to children than the dated language of many of the old classics. We see fewer books on the "helpless" role Mommy plays, more books on the role of a child in maintaining the balance of nature, and many books with the language of ghetto life.

We do not mean to imply that the classics have been entirely forgotten, but they are usually being read because of media influence, such as TV and motion pictures, or through school, home and library recommendations. For example, the recent presentation of Aladdin on TV produced a surge of requests for the book, so we must say that the classics are NOT dead.

The following 1971 books for preschool through junior high youngsters are particularly outstanding in text and illustrations and are worthy of consideration as holiday gifts.

Bright Colors

The Book of Puzzles by Brian Wildsmith (Franklin Watts) is a fantastic book. It has the bright colors that only Brian Wildsmith can create in a volume of 14 brainteasers ranging from simple choices to more difficult questions that have no set answer. A must for fanciful pages of this quaint tale of a shrew's gala day. The author has used half-page insertions between the pages to add an extra bit of action to the story. A fine companion to this is our favorite nonverbal book, Changes, by Pat Hutchins (Macmillan), in which two dolls construct a house with building blocks. Ages 2-5.

Witty Style

Amos and Boris by William Steig (Farrar, Straus & Giroux) has the same witty style that has made this author's name a familiar one to both child readers of his Sylvester and the Magic Pebble, winner of the 1970 Caldecott Medal, and adult readers of New Yorker magazine. Amos, the mouse and Boris, the whale, have nothing in common except good hearts and a willingness to help their fellow mammals. Ages 4 and up.

Bear Circus by William Pene du Bois (Viking). Here are the most enticing teddy bears and kangaroos that have ever hit the pages of a children's book. After the teddy bears of Koala Park are rescued by their friends the kangaroos, they spend seven years perfecting a circus act they will perform to repay the kangaroos for their kindness. Ages 4-8.

Heading the list of books for the middle years is one we have reviewed before, Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of NIMH by Robert O'Brien (Atheneum). Without question, it is our favorite book of 1971. Mrs. Frisby, the mother field mouse, reluctantly goes to the rats under the rosebush for help and Smith lives in two houses: her fatherless, nearly motherless apartment, where the "welfare lady comes around snooping," and the miniature home for Goldilocks and the three bears in her fourth-grade classroom. A sensitive story of the need to love and be loved.

The Provensen Book of Fairy Tales, compiled and illustrated by Alice and Martin Provensen (Random House). Among the dozen lavishly illustrated fairy grasshoppers falling into camp."

Fiction for junior high readers seems to reflect more realism and relevancy than before. The language is strong and the characters more solemn. By the Highway Home by Mary Stolz (Harper) is the bittersweet story of Catty, who must adjust to her brother's death in Vietnam, the provoking selfishness of her pretty and popular older sister, a new tales included here are some by Hans Christian Andersen, Oscar Wilde and Arthur Rackham. They are "literary" fairy tales because they are consciously created pieces of literature with themes borrowed from old folk tales. Ages 9-12.

Making Things

Books on making things are always popular with 9- to 12-year-olds. The Gadget Book by Harvey Weiss (Crowell) tells how to make a weathervane, magnet game, monorail system, Sunbeam alarm clock and cigar-box guitar.

The principles of flight and aircraft design are made clear in The Paper Airplane Book by Seymour Simon (Viking), with its easy step-by-step diagrams.

Tom Tichenor's Puppets (Abingdon) has patterns and instructions loaded with tips for making both marionettes and hand puppets, as well as costumes, stage props and original plays.

When a child says, "There's nothing to do," Creating With Papier-Mache by James Seidelman (Crowell) is a book with ideas of things to do with a material that is inexpensive and easy to come by.

Although geared to 9- to 12-year-olds, The Trees Stand Shining: Poetry of the North American Indians, selected by Hettie Jones (Dial Press) will appeal to all ages. It includes lullabies, prayers, war chants and stories in poetry form that were originally meant to be sung. The 14 full-color watercolor paintings are dreamlike and reflect the poems which were passed from one generation to the next.

Little Big Horn

In Haiku: The Mood of Earth by Ann Atwood (Scribner), a noted photographer uses her camera to tie together poems of nature and beauty.

Last in the "middle age" group is Once Upon the Little Big Horn by Evelyn Lampman (Crowell), which takes a fresh look at the most famous battle of the Indian wars. The author describes the four days in 1876 when Sitting Bull gathered his forces and waited for Custer to stumble into his trap "like home and falling in love at the age of 13.

The Mock Revolt by Vera and Bill Cleaver (Lippincott) revolves around 13-year-old Ussy Mock, who spends the summer of 1939 revolting against the "square" life he and all the other citizens of Medina are leading. While working on a local farm, Ussy meets a migrant farm worker who teaches him the real meaning of charity and poverty.

Gone and Back by Nathaniel

From Telephone by Kornei Chukovsky (Bobbs-Merrill). Grades K-2.

Benchley (Harper). "Despite catastrophe and death and doom," this fully fleshed historical novel of a family's losing out in the great land rush to Oklahoma is beautifully human, inevitable and true.

Precocious Girl

A Room Made of Windows by Eleanor Cameron (Little Brown), is a story in which precocious but emotionally immature Julia meets people who encourage her literary ambitions and teach her compassion, especially for her mother.

Wild in the World by John Donovan (Doubleday) tells of life and death on a remote New Hampshire farm. John's family had all died, and life on Rattlesnake Mountain was hard and lonesome until the day a wild dog came out of the woods.

The Tombs of Atuan by Ursula LeGuin (Atheneum) is about Ged the wizard (he appeared in The Wizard of Earthsea), who tries to rescue the missing half of the ring of Erroth-Akebe from the tombs of Atuan.

In Hunt Down the Prize by Sheila Moon (Atheneum), Maris and her dog, Seuro (from Knee Deep in Thunder), along with a cat named Nickclaws and a boy named Jetty, find themselves in what Maris calls the Great Land as the result of a frightening Halloween adventure.

Famous Modern Artists: From Cezanne to Pop Art by Charlotte Willard (Platt & Munk) turns art labels into meaningful language. Surrealism becomes "Dreams and Nightmares," op art "Painting Move" and expressionism "Painters Who Freed Their Emotions." There are 95 reproductions (50 in color) in the book's examination of 25 artists.

It Is the Poem Singing Into Your Eyes: Anthology of New Young Poets, edited by Arnold Adoff (Harper). From 6,006 entries the editor has selected poems representing every ethnic and economic background, most of them written by teens. They're about pollution, slums, a police station on a Chicago night, Vietnam war, black power, love and many other realities.

Indian Poems

In another vein is In The Trail of The Wind: American Indian Poems and Ritual Orations, edited by John Bierhorst (Farrar, Straus & Giroux). Translated from more than 40 languages, these poems represent all of the best-known Indian cultures of North and South America. The battle songs, long lyrics, incantations and prayers are illustrated with period engravings.

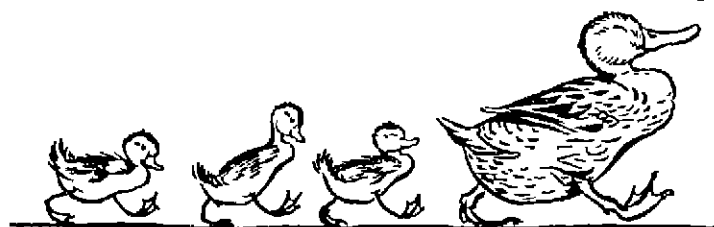

When snow falls, we think of Bruce Gavett's Skiing for Beginners (Scribner), a carefully illustrated description of the various phases of learning to ski properly. There are fine photographs of this popular sport.

We have searched for Christmas stories published in 1971 and find that Emmet Otter's Jug-Band Christmas by Russel Hoban (Parents Magazine Press) is our favorite, not only because it is well written, but because it describes the mutual love of a parent and child without sentimentality.

May you enjoy a happy and blessed holiday season with books.

From Various Specs by Janet McNeill (Thomas Nelson). Ages 8-11.

From Make Way for Ducklings by Robert McCloskey (Viking). Grades K-3.

every young child. It's one that will stimulate his ingenuity and powers of imagination. Ages 3-7.

One Dancing Drum by Gail Kredenser (S. G. Phillips) is a very exciting and different counting book which portrays musicians and their instruments — one dancing drum, two tinkling triangles, three bellowing bagpipes, etc. Ages 3-6.

Richard Scarry's ABC Word Book by Richard Scarry (Random House). In addition to teaching the alphabet, this big, colorful volume, filled with irresistible animals, shows how the letters are used in every day words and names. Rhymes, tongue twisters and short, short stories illustrate each letter. Ages 3-7.

Shrewbetta's Birthday by John Goodall (Harcourt). Preschoolers will be delighted as they leaf through the wordless but frivolous and discovers their strange way of life, for they have all been imprisoned in a laboratory known as NIMH, where injections made them wise, long-lived and inventive. Ages 9-12.

The Headless Cupid by Zilpha Snyder (Atheneum) adds another glowing entry to this author's list of excellent books, including The Velvet Room, Black and Blue Magic and The Egypt Game. The occult, a seance, an old house that once held a poltergeist, and a headless cupid statue are featured elements. Ages 8-12.

The Golden Coyote by Eileen Thompson (Simon & Schuster) is a sensitive and moving account of a young Pueblo Indian boy's growth to maturity through his devotion to an injured coyote pup, which he nurses back to health, and his sense of responsibility to his village. Ages 8-12.

The Bears' House by Marilyn Sachs (Doubleday). Fran Ellen

Q. Is it true that Joan Baez, 31, and her young husband, David Harris, 26, are getting divorced?—Molly Inglis, San Leandro, Calif.

A. According to Joan Baez's manager, Manny Greenhill of Boston, "Joan Baez and David Harris are currently separated although they are still working together politically. They remain on the best of terms. No legal action is planned." Says another friend who insists upon remaining nameless: "When you come back after 20 months in jail—separated from your wife—which happened in the case of Dave Harris, you find that you both are different people. Sometimes the love which held you together loosens."

"LOVE LOOSENS": JOAN BAEZ AND DAVID HARRIS.

Q. I would like to know if Albert Lasker, the great advertising tycoon, was the bag man for the crooked Administration of Warren G. Harding?—T.A.L., Cleveland, Ohio

A. Albert Lasker handled Senator Warren G. Harding's publicity when Harding ran for the Presidency in 1920. Harding used Lasker as the payoff man in the Carrie and Jim Phillips case. Carrie Phillips was Harding's secret love for 15 years. When Harding ran for the Presidency on the Republican ticket, Carrie confessed her infidelity to her husband. Lasker paid the Phillipses about $20,000 for their silence. When Harding was elected he appointed Lasker head of the U.S. Shipping Board.

Q. Nikita Khrushchev—will the Russians ever remember him, and if so, for what?—Victor Hoffman, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Attempts have been made to write Khrushchev out of Soviet history, but eventually he will be recognized by his people as the man whose most important contribution to Soviet society was de-Stalinization.

SHAH OF IRAN WITH EMPRESS AT ANNIVERSARY.

Q. How much did the Shah of Persia spend on the 2500th anniversary of the Persian Empire? Also, why did President Nixon, Queen Elizabeth, Brezhnev, Pompidou, and all the other top leaders decline invitations to attend?—Marcy Evans, Lake Charles, La.

A. Cost estimates vary from $20 million to $50 million. Nixon, Elizabeth, et al, could not spend the time for such an occasion, sent substitutes instead. Said Farah, the Shah's wife, if the European press is to be believed, "The whole thing was a rotten idea."

Q. Didn't Henry Kissinger take girls with him on his second trip to China?—A.H., Washington, D.C.

A. Yes, he took two secretaries who have slaved for him, Dianne Matthews of Quincy, Mass., and Julienne Pineau of Silver Spring, Md., as a way of showing his gratitude.

Q. Why did J. Edgar Hoover force William Sullivan, a top FBI administrator for the last 30 years, out of office? Is Hoover a dictator?—M.R., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Clashes in personality and philosophy led to Sullivan's force-out. For 47 years Hoover, unquestioned, has ruled the FBI with an iron hand, has made it into one of the most competent of all Federal agencies. The FBI is his child and understandably enough despite his age, 76, he is reluctant to leave it.

HOOVER

SULLIVAN

Q. When the U.S. Senate refused to confirm G. Harrold Carswell for the Supreme Court, President Nixon said the Senate would not confirm anyone who "had the misfortune of being born in the South." Why then did he nominate Lewis Powell of Richmond, Va., for the Court?—E.T., Richmond, Va.

A. Consistency is not one of President Nixon's virtues. He is a most flexible man. He also has a tendency to strike back in defeat. It has always been difficult for him to lose graciously, but he is learning.

Q. The author, please, of the following line: "Only great poets can talk of love without making bores or fools of themselves"?—Madeline Forsberg, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. British novelist Gerald Kersh.

Q. What is the anecdote Earl Wilson has published about Marilyn Monroe and the late President John F. Kennedy? I have heard conflicting versions.—Mrs. Lewis Thompson, N. Miami, Fla.

A. On page 369 in The Show Business Nobody Knows, Wilson writes "One night Marilyn slipped out to a meeting with the President of the United States. You must remember, incidentally, that he had back trouble."

"Marilyn had one confidant—a man who wasn't interested in girls. She could tell him anything. Next morning she giggled a little as she discreetly discussed the evening. Her confidant relayed her words to me."

"I think," she said, "I made his back feel better."

Cyrus Eaton and wife are driven in a horse-drawn victoria around the grounds of their model farm near Cleveland. Top Soviet statesmen always make a point of visiting Eaton and he has been host to many of the leading Communists. He is welcome in Moscow, Havana, Hanoi

Cyrus Eaton: The Communists' Best Capitalist Friend

by Connecticut Walker

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

According to the Russians the best friend they have in the United States is a multimillionaire capitalist named Cyrus Eaton who behaves like a self-delegated arbiter of international peace.

At 87, Eaton is a handsome, venerable, courtly, white-haired gentleman with a personal fortune estimated at $100 million and an industrial empire which includes interests in two railroads and six major steel corporations.

A protégé of sorts of the late John D. Rockefeller Sr., who hired him 70 years ago as a $5-per-week errand boy, Eaton has been regularly denounced as "a fellow-traveler . . . a pinko . . . a commie-symp, and one of those radical-libs soft on Communism."

The reason for this is that each time a top Soviet statesman visits this country he makes it a point to call on Eaton and envelop him in a crushing bear hug. Moreover, each time Eaton sets foot in Moscow, Havana, and Hanoi, the Communist functionaries roll out the red carpet for him.

Now Nixon

Although President Nixon flies to Moscow next year in an effort to promote Soviet-American friendship, such friendships in the past have always been considered suspect by the hard-liners in this country; hence the denunciations of Eaton as a Communist and a traitor rather than the prophet he's turned out to be.

A gentle, soft-spoken man with a high tolerance quotient, Eaton understands the splenetic ventings of his detractors.

"I know," he says, "my views aren't popular. One can't be as frank as I've been and not create critics. There are very sincere people in this country who hold that a man who'd visit with Khrushchev, and who is a friend of Kosygin, Brezhnev, and Gromyko must be an enemy of the nation. But they are wrong.

"I am a capitalist," he proudly declares. "I believe in our system. In the long run I think that it's probably the best yet devised, but it's far from perfect. It often goes wrong. The final answers to any of the great problems in economics or politics or government have not yet been found, so I've ceased to be dogmatic. If you've got a different system, try it out. If you're highly successful in it, fine and dandy. I don't think that there's anything sacred about any system of government or economics, so I've an open mind."

Host for journalists

Eaton's activities as an international agent for peace began in 1955 when a high-ranking U.S. State Department official persuaded him to host a group of visiting Russian journalists, among them Khrushchev's influential son-in-law, Alexsei Adzhubei. "They wanted to see how a typical capitalist lives," Eaton explains. "I wasn't particularly keen on the idea, and besides, I don't think I was typical."

Thus, reluctantly, the then 71-year-old chairman of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway began another career—promoting East-West understanding. His enthusiasm led him in 1957 to set up the now famous "Pugwash Conferences," named for the small Nova Scotia village of 800 where Eaton was born, maintains a lodge, and holds many of the talks. Eaton's motive for the conferences was to offer world scholars, statesmen, labor leaders and businessmen an opportunity to "relax together, exchange views, and sharpen their own thinking" about international issues.

Pugwash continues

To date 21 "Pugwash" meetings have been held throughout the world. Another is scheduled for next September in Oxford, England. William Polk, a former State Department official who heads the Adlai Stevenson Institute in Chicago, credits the conferences with laying the ground work for the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

Mr. Eaton's international interests have caused him also to become an exalted tour guide. He helped arrange for the U.S. visits of two Soviet Premiers. The late Nikita Khrushchev wanted to visit Eaton's 860-acre Acadia Farms just outside of Cleveland, but American and Soviet security agents vetoed the trip. Instead Eaton threw a banquet for Khrushchev at the Waldorf-Astoria in 1959. As a thank-you gift and in recognition of Eaton's earlier present of a prize Scotch Shorthorn bull, Khrushchev sent his American host a troika and a team of three matched white Russian stallions. Anastas Mikoyan, then Soviet deputy premier, presented the gift on Khrushchev's behalf, while irate Clevelanders staged a street demonstration, protesting the Soviet statesman's presence in their city.

Boar's head gift

The Eatons were also gifted with a wild boar's head shot by Khrushchev and a landscape oil painting. In May 1968 they hosted the entire company of the Bolshoi Ballet at their Cleveland estate which is where they've also entertained Kosygin's daughter.

Such lavish hospitality has paid off.

In January, 1967, Eaton's son, Cyrus Jr., joined forces with the Rockefeller brothers, another recognized band of capitalists, to stimulate worldwide trade with the Communist countries.

As head of Tower International Inc., Eaton Jr., along with the Rockefellers, has helped build hotels in Prague, Budapest, Bucharest, and Warsaw. The corporation also handled MGM's negotiations with Hungary for the production of The Fixer, a film based on Bernard Malamud's novel.

To avoid clashing with U.S. laws against lending money for major projects in Communist countries, the financing for many Tower projects is arranged through a subsidiary in Switzerland.

According to Congressman John R. Rarick of Louisiana, a Communist-hater of mountainous rage, the Eaton-Rockefeller partnership "is seen as a combining the investment skills and resources of the Rockefellers and the special entree to Communist officialdom that Tower enjoys largely as a result of contacts cultivated over the last 15 years by Cyrus Eaton Sr., always welcomed as a V.I.P. in Communist countries."

Nikita Khrushchev was Eaton's host in Moscow. The late premier wanted to visit Eaton's farm during 1959 U.S. trip, but security agents turned him down.

Eaton describes his model farm and cattle-raising activities to a group of visitors from Soviet Union. The multimillionaire first began to entertain Russians back in 1955.

Kosygin buys beef

Cyrus Eaton's most recent venture with the Soviets occurred a few weeks ago when he sold Premier Kosygin 350 head of choice beef cattle, 80 of which came from his own prize-winning stock.

This deal, Eaton points out, could lead to Soviet purchases of as many as 200,000 American beef and dairy cattle within the next two years.

"The Russians," he says, "are trying to expand meat consumption among their people. They want to change from their present dual-type of cattle, raised for meat and milk, to specialized breeds of fast-gaining beef cattle and high yielding dairy cattle which we raise in this country."

Eaton has urged U.S. authorities to allow giant transport planes to land in Illinois, Ohio, Colorado, and other states to load cattle and thereby avoid lengthy shipment by sea. He feels strongly that if a dollar can be earned by trading with the Soviets, the American farmer should get his rightful share. Why should the Soviets trade with France, England, West Germany, Japan, and other major capitalistic countries and not with us?

The industrialist says that his numerous international schemes "are really my attempts to make up for lost time.

"If I were 25 again," he muses, "I'd be more concerned with international relations than I was. I was born into the British Empire when Queen Victoria was still alive, and I was carried away with pride and joy at being a part of an institution of that size. But what happened to it?

"Two world wars impoverished and dissolved the empire. I had to go through two wars and visit many of the countries of the world and talk to many heads of state, to scientists, journalists and scholars to realize how the aggressive instinct of man, the readiness to fight, to wage war had taken possession of the world. How stupid and suicidal man has become."

In keeping with these sentiments Eaton has vociferously opposed the Vietnamese war from the beginning. He cites excessive military spending as the major reason for our present monetary crisis.

"The most obvious move to help the dollar," he wrote in a column for The New York Times a few months ago, "is to cut out the expense of maintaining Americans, troops, wives and children in the style to which they have become accustomed all over the world." He added a sentence not designed to win him friends in the White House: . . . "Three Wall Street lawyers, Nixon, Mitchell and Rogers are spending the taxpayers' money around the world like drunken sailors."

Frank and fearless

Eaton is transparently frank and fearless. "As a capitalist," he says, "I feel that the Communists are not trying to change us. They can't change us from capitalism. The only way to accomplish that is if we go broke trying to confine and restrain them. The greatest enemy of capitalism are those fanatics in the U.S. who are willing to have this country go bankrupt in its efforts to confine and destroy Communism."

Eaton was raised to be a Baptist minister by his shopkeeper father. Paradoxically he was turned away from the church and towards business by his uncle, the Reverend Charles A. Eaton, one of whose parishioners was John D. Rockefeller Sr. The Standard Oil magnate hired Eaton in 1901 as a clerk, errand boy. The young Eaton, in turn, adopted Rockefeller as his mentor and business as his profession.

After earning a B.A. in 1905 from McMaster University in Toronto, Eaton became a Rockefeller protégé. Two years later he borrowed enough money to build a power plant in Canada. Soon he was worth millions.

At one time or another Eaton has controlled Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., held major interests in B. F. Goodrich Co. and Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. He formed Republic Steel Corp. by merging several steel companies. Republic is now the nation's fourth largest steelmaker. Subsequently, Eaton became involved in the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, to which he was elected chairman of the board and director in 1954. That post is now his main business activity.

Eaton prides himself on accomplishments outside of business. "I like to think of myself as a philosopher," he says. (He was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1963 and received the Lenin Peace Prize in 1960.) "I've been a farmer for 60 years. I'm interested in producing good horses and cattle. And I've achieved good health, exercising a fair amount of self-control and getting plenty of physical exercise."

Rides horses

Eaton shuns tobacco, alcohol, and spicy foods. He gave up ice hockey at 70, tennis at 75, and skiing at 80, but he still rides horseback several times a week. He arrives at his downtown Cleveland office before 8:30 a.m., works there until early afternoon. He spends the remainder of his day tramping around his farm, horseback-riding, reading, or talking with his wife, Anne Kinder Eaton, who married for the second time when she was 35.

Eaton, a widower for 20 years and father of seven children, was 73 when he married Anne Kinder who had attended boarding school with his youngest daughter, Farlee.

Blonde, attractive, high-spirited and strong-willed, Anne Eaton is a vital companion to a husband whose growing deafness makes it necessary for her to repeat often remarks which he has not heard. Despite a severe handicap—she has been confined to wheelchair ever since she was stricken with polio 26 years ago—Mrs. Eaton accompanies her husband on his worldwide travels.

Speaks Russian

She is a Vassar graduate who taught herself Russian before she and her husband first visited there in 1958. Recently she has been busy restoring the original Eaton home in Pugwash. The house has been named Thinkers Lodge and is furnished with old English and Nova Scotian furniture. In the half-year which the house has been open to the public, 2800 tourists have visited the place. As a result the small picturesque village of Pugwash, famous for both Eaton and lobster, is enjoying a bit of welcome prosperity.

Anne Eaton's explanation of why the world pays attention to her maverick millionaire husband is modest and practical: "People all over the world want to know how to run better railroads. They want to know how to improve their crops and cattle. They want to know how to live peacefully and healthfully. My husband has been a successful railroad man, a successful farmer, and finally he's a healthy, reasonable man aware of others' and his own limitations.

"Thus, when he speaks people listen to him. Or at least," she adds smiling, "they should."

POSSIBLE MALE PILL Aspirin, ordinary aspirin, traditional household headache remedy, may turn out to be "the Pill" for men.

According to an article entitled "Effect of Aspirin on Human Seminal Prostaglandins" in "Lancet," a leading British medical journal, researchers at the Royal College of Surgeons have discovered that ordinary doses of aspirin may affect a man's fertility.

Two doctors, J.G. Collier and R.J.
Flower, writing in the October 16th edition of the magazine, suggest that aspirin appears to reduce the concentration of prostaglandins in semen.

A lack of prostaglandins, a substance first found in the prostate gland, has been associated with infertility. The British doctors warn that more and larger experiments must be conducted before the results concerning aspirin are conclusive.
They recommend, however, that doctors investigating cases of infertility, investigate the amount of aspirin being taken by their patients.

AUSTRALIAN INFANTRYMEN WADE AFTER ENEMY NEAR NUI DAT, VIETNAM.

COST Eight years of military involvement in Vietnam have cost Australia approximately $200 million, 476 soldiers killed, over 3000 wounded, $25 million in civil aid in Vietnam, and $440 million on the national service draft introduced in 1964.

All Australian troops will be out of Vietnam by the end of the year, which is more than can be said at this time for American troops.

WARRANTY Largest single automobile market in the United States is Southern California where 40 percent of the buyers now purchase foreign cars.

One reason they do is that they believe the foreign product is better than the domestic one.

To change that attitude American Motors Corporation several months ago developed its buyer protection plan.

In the words of 56-year-old Roy D. Chapin Jr., (Yale, '37), handsome, soft-spoken chairman of the board and American's chief executive, "We are determined to prove to the consumer that our product, quality and price-wise, is as good if not better than can be found anywhere.

"The person who buys one of our 1972 models," Chapin explains, "is guaranteed that for 12 months or 12,000 miles we will repair at no expense to him anything which goes wrong with that car. Our warranty includes everything but tires.

"If his car has to be held overnight for repairs we have arranged with our dealers to see that the owner is given a rent-free loaner.

"If the customer is still not satisfied with the work done on his car, if he has any complaint whatever we want him to phone us collect on our hot line which number we give him."

To extend such an all-inclusive warranty his customers, Chapin has had to increase quality control of his product at the factory and dealer level.

Whether General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler will follow suit by providing car-owners with similar warranties is problematical.

"Even if they do," Chapin asserts, "we will have attained the momentum which comes with being the first in the field. Since we introduced our buyer prouct, put together a sexy advertising campaign with plenty of bare flesh and erotic overtones?

In Germany, advertising companies compete with one man Jorg Nimmermehr in his book, "Selling with Sex," "Sex in advertising is like a germ with a shorter and shorter incubation period."

Further, market researchers point out, women are not only immune to the sex-sell, they often reject it outright. According to Dr. Michaela Rodling of the Institute for Motivation Research in Munich, "the closer you get to the bed, the stronger the rejection by women."

Both men and women are more strongly influenced by romance than sex, say the experts.

"Mister L," a line of German cosmetics owned by Warner-Lambert, decided recently after years of sales stagnation to switch from the sex-pitch to a more subtle romantic appeal. The result: in one year "Mister L" doubled its share of the German cosmetic market.

WEED GLOVE Farmers and gardeners have long complained of one major trouble in weed removal. When weeds are pulled up, the seeds are scattered, so that in a matter of weeks, other weeds grow, perpetuating the cycle.

To solve that problem John Holroyd, principal scientific officer at the Agricultural Research Council organization in Oxford, has developed a weed-killing glove.

All one has to do is to stroke the weed with this glove emits a lethal dose of herbicide. Inside of three days the weed withers and dies.

The Weed Research Organization has made arrangements to produce the glove commercially, and it will be marketed in England next spring at $7.50 per glove.

INTELLIGENCE continued

TRAVEL TIPS So many Japanese have become globe-hopping tourists in the past few years that the Japanese have seen fit to issue a booklet which offers tips on how to behave in the Western world.

For example, the booklet explains to Nipponese air tourists that it is permissible for them to remove their jackets in front of other passengers but not their trousers.

If they wish to change into something more comfortable, they are advised, they must change their clothes in the lavatory, not in the aisle, and preferably they should not change into pyjamas.

Also, if the lavatory is marked "Occupied," they must not bang on the door, but must wait until the sign reads "Vacant."

In American hotels, they are advised, they must soap themselves in the bathtub or in the shower and not outside and rinse themselves off, which is the Japanese custom.

Also when using American toilet facilities, they must not sit astride the toilet facing the wall.

ELASTIC ARTERIES Women are probably more flexible than men -- certainly insofar as their blood vessels are concerned.

Dr. Grace M. Fischer of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, believes that the more elastic arteries of premenopausal women is one reason why such women suffer fewer heart attacks than men.

At a recent meeting of the American Heart Association's Council on Arteriosclerosis, Dr. Fischer explained that on the basis of animal experiments, it appears most likely that the female sex hormones, the estrogens, work on the arteries to keep them supple. This greater flexibility helps to offset the fat-clogging and artery-narrowing and hardening which lead to heart attacks.

The walls of human arteries consist of large amounts of connective tissue, the structural material which serves as the scaffolding of body organs. This connective tissue consists chiefly of two kinds of fibers, collagen and elastin. Collagen is by far the more rigid and tougher substance.

In studying female rats with ovaries removed, Dr. Fischer discovered that those given shots of the female sex hormone, estradiol, produced a higher proportion of the more elastin fibers in the walls of the aorta, the body's main artery, than did rats not given estrogen.

Men who suffer from coronary heart attacks have been dosed with estrogen from time to time, but the female hormone feminizes them in many cases.

In short, women live longer than men because nature has endowed them with stronger organs and more efficacious hormones.

CHANGING TIMES Remember when a five-stick package of chewing gum cost five cents? Those days are gone.

Beech-Nut, a division of Squibb, is replacing its five-stick package with an eight-stick 10-cents pack.

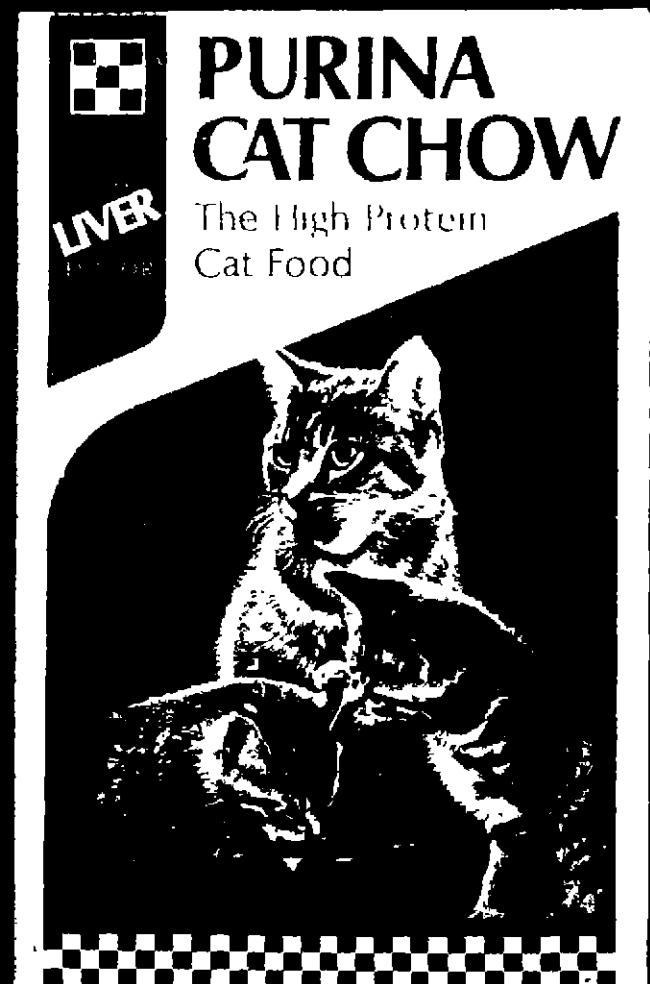

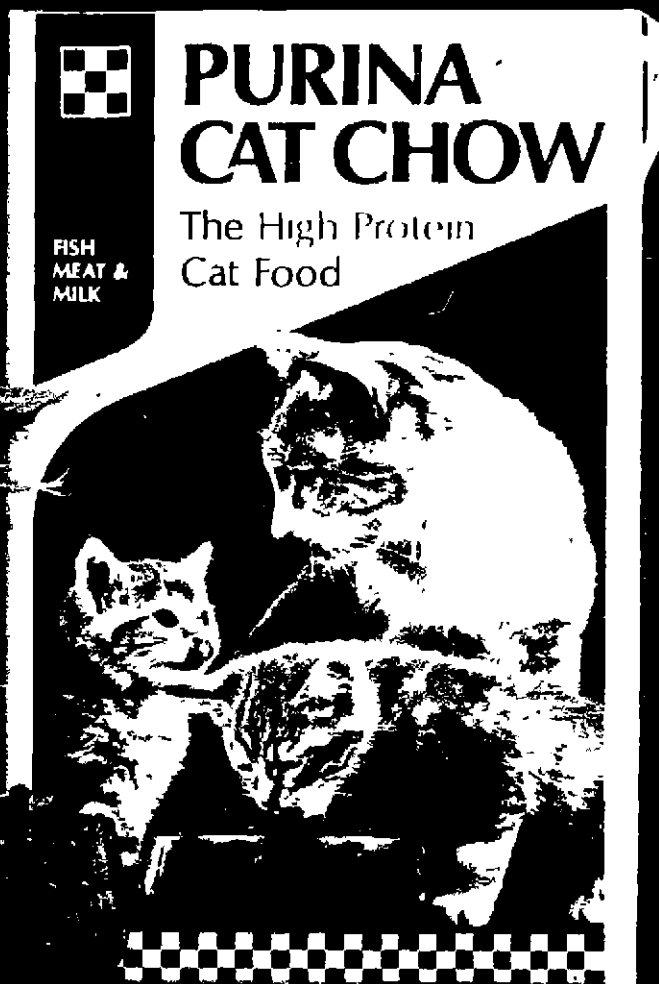

The move is an attempt to reduce the 50 percent share of the $350,000,000 chewing gum market now controlled by the Wrigley Jr. Company.

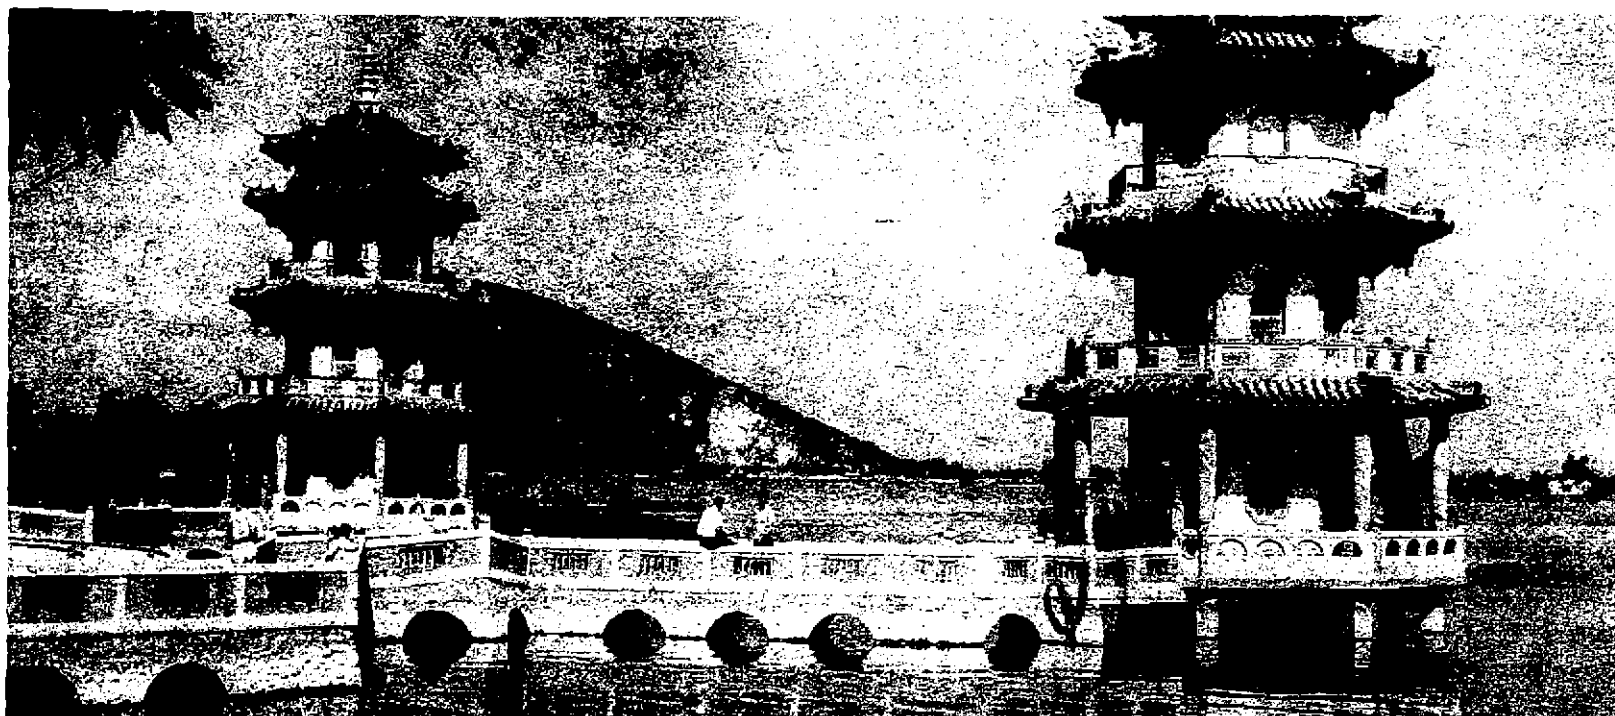

Beech-Nut has been testing its eight-stick ten-cents pack for the past eight months in Charlotte, Indianapolis, and Detroit. The company reports an average sales increase of 42 percent in those cities.

In rural areas of Nebraska and South Dakota, Wrigley's has already quietly tested a seven-stick 10-cents pack of gum.

No doubt, American Chicle, which has 25 percent of the gum market, and Clark Gum (owned by Philip Morris) with five percent of the market, will follow suit.

SHARE THE WEALTH

SHARE THE WEALTH Taiwan, freshly expelled from the United Nations, is considering a publicity campaign to convince women that Taiwan is also a vacationland for females.

For years, Taiwan has been considered a vacation paradise for male tourists.

largely because of the excellent service and fair prices offered by the sex establishments in Taipei and the nearby hot-springs resort of Peitou.

As a matter of fact, the call girls of Peitou have become so notorious that the police have told the proprietors of 36 "hotels"

there that they no longer will permit the girls to ride on the rear seats of motorcycles.

In explaining the ban, the police pointed out that the girls wearing bright-colored hotpants proved too much of a distraction to motorists.

Communications Minister

Philip Chang recently told a press conference at the newly inaugurated Taiwan Tourism Bureau that he would invite a group of Japanese women to Taiwan to prove that his country offers attractions for both men and women.

Most tourists to Taiwan come from Japan.

Company Chicken

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

For a company main dish that won't fracture the holiday-depleted budget, try this version of Eggs Benedict, substituting golden brown chicken breasts for the eggs. The Mock Hollandaise is a joy. It won't curdle or separate and it can be reheated without damage. Much less expensive than real Hollandaise, too. Asparagus goes well with this. Add a crisp salad. Serve fresh fruit and cheese for dessert (chilled Golden Delicious apples with Camembert, or chilled winter pears with blue cheese, for example).

Chicken Breasts Benedict

4 chicken breasts, cut in half and boned	4 English muffins, split and toasted
Gold 'n Crust	4 slices cooked ham, cut in half
	Mock Hollandaise Sauce

Rinse chicken breasts. Sprinkle enough Gold 'n Crust evenly on wet chicken breasts to coat all surfaces generously. Use no salt. Place chicken breasts skin side down on broiler pan, broil 20 minutes 6 inches from heat, turn, broil 7 minutes longer. Arrange muffins with a slice of ham and half a chicken breast on each. Cover generously with Mock Hollandaise Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Mock Hollandaise Sauce

2 tablespoons butter or margarine	3/4 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons flour	2 eggs, beaten
1 cup water	2 1/2 tablespoons strained lemon juice
1/8 teaspoon white pepper	Dash cayenne

Melt butter or margarine, blend well with flour; gradually add water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add salt and pepper to taste. Remove from heat. Pour slowly on beaten eggs; beat well. Cook 1 minute. Stir in lemon juice and cayenne.

The Trend

Coed living on American college campuses is here to stay

What is most surprising about it, however, is its acceptance by parents who previously "subscribed to more conventional ideas regarding morals"

This past summer Gallup pollsters asked 1501 adults this question

"Some colleges have dormitories where both male and female students live in the same building but in separate rooms. Suppose you had a daughter going to college, would you mind if she lived in one of these coed dormitories or not?"

The findings show that 50 percent of those interviewed were opposed to coed dorms, but nearly as many 46 percent, said they wouldn't mind if their daughter resided in a coed dorm

As usual, there was a positive correlation between age and opposition. Those people aged 50 and over objected most frequently to coed dorms. Fifty-eight percent to be exact. Also, the less educated a person, the more frequent his opposition to coed dorms. Fifty-three percent of those people with grade school or high school educational backgrounds objected to coed dorms, but only 40 percent who had themselves attended college, objected

Another research study which is sure to surprise and dismay many parents includes a survey of adolescent drug use by the Columbia University School of Public Health. It reveals that about 15 percent of young Americans from 12 to 17 have smoked marijuana. The results of this national household-based survey show that 17 percent of the boys and 14 percent of the girls in the 12 to 17 age group have smoked pot.

A third report shows that almost 500 college newspapers now accept advertisements for birth control devices, while more than 600 accept advertising for abortion agencies.

Peter Hanson of National Educational Advertising Services, the nation's largest collegiate advertising agency, reports that 493 college newspapers are currently carrying the ads of 10 different abortion agencies, many of them located in New York, Philadelphia and California.

As Seneca, the Roman philosopher, wrote two thousand years ago "What were once vices are now the manners of the day."

This, more than any other single aphorism, is the most difficult for parents to accept.

MOST OF THE DORMS IN VASSAR ARE COED AND 24-HOUR VISITING IS ALLOWED.

Long Hair Barber

Barbers who service youthful clienteles are rapidly going broke.

In many cities less than 20 percent of high school and college boys now visit their friendly neighborhood or campus barber. The boys either cut their own hair, or their girl friends do it for them, or they just let it grow.

"Years ago," sighs Joe LoPresti, 53, owner of three barber shops in New Haven, Conn., "a man could make a decent living in this business. The guys from Yale used to take a haircut at least once a month. I had four shops and 16 barbers. Now I'm down to three shops and nine barbers."

According to LoPresti, "I wouldn't be surviving if it wasn't for the Yale faculty and the New Haven townspeople. But I think things are changing for the better now that I've introduced European shear blending."

Several weeks ago LoPresti demonstrated a new method of hair styling in his Phil's Barber Shop on York Street. He invited a group of Yalies to watch him shape hair without cutting it shorter than it originally was.

"The demonstration was so good," the master barber points out, "that my business has since gone up 10 percent. I get $4.50 for a European shear blend, and the customer has long hair which is styled to perfection."

"Matter of fact," he adds, "I'm now giving demonstrations in the individual Yale colleges. I want the students to realize that a haircut no longer means a butch or a crew cut or even shorter hair. I've just got to get the student trade back and prove to these guys that hair styling adds to their sex appeal."

YALE STUDENTS ADMIRE MASTER BARBER JOE LOPRESTI AS HE DEMONSTRATES NEW EUROPEAN SHEAR BLEND.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS 1 OUT OF 3 DOES

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms... ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then — Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... small, easy-to-take tablets... special sizes for children and adults.

Sleep Away Dry Skin

Thief in Cedar Rapids service station, in simulated situation, will be caught as he steps out the door. Even small businesses can afford this new kind of protection.

A Silent Trap To Catch a Thief

by John G. Rogers

Burglars in this Midwest city are going out of their minds. The reason Cedar Rapids police—in a first-of-its-kind project—have rigged so many small businesses with such effective, secret, silent alarm systems that capture of nighttime prowling thieves has increased in a test period by more than 300 percent.

This innovation has caught the attention of lawmen all over the U.S. and in many countries abroad. But it's perhaps best saluted by one of its victims. Police Chief George J. Matias relates:

"One burglar we caught in a tavern after closing was downright indignant. He told the arresting officers: 'What's the idea, anyway? I cased this place after hours every night for a week and no cops ever came around to check it out. Then two minutes after I go in the back window you guys show up and grab me. It ain't right.'"

Mystery maintained

The cops shrugged and let him think he'd been caught by coincidence. Actually, it was imaginative law enforcement. Such establishments as banks, jewelers, furriers and department stores long ago had their own alarm systems with warning signals running into police headquarters. But the little fellows—tilling stations, taverns, retail shops—often are unable to meet the cost of a good burglar alarm system.

Patrolmen, in simulated situation, get their man. Cop explains, "We might be a mile away—but lots of times we get there while the guy's still working inside."

TRAP CONTINUED

"It was that gap that we decided to try to fill," says Matias. "We put in for a Federal grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and received $185,000 that enabled us to put silent alarm systems in 350 small businesses. Every one of these had previously been hit by burglars, some quite a few times."

A control group of similar small businesses, which did not receive the free alarms, was designated so that comparisons could be made. And during the test period that ran several months, burglars were nabbed in 48 percent of cases in the alarmed group against 14 percent in the non-alarmed.

Patrolman Jon Stahl works the mid-night to 8 a.m. shift—high crime hours—and well appreciates this new widespread burglar alarm network. "It's installed in so many places that never had alarms before. The burglar doesn't dream he's in trouble. And it gives us such a good chance because it's silent and quick—just shows up as a red light on a board at headquarters—and doesn't scare away any burglars. We might be a mile away in the patrol car when the dispatcher's call comes to us. But lots of times we get there while the guy is still working inside. He's always surprised."

Patrolman Bill Meyer, also of the night shift, has a more personal reason to applaud the alarm. "When I surprised this fellow in a service station, he had a loaded double-barreled shotgun and he said he would've used it on me if things hadn't happened so fast. I just wish it was possible to wire up the whole city with those alarms."

Cost is low

The alarm system—each costs $185.60 and uses only low-cost materials—consists of various vibrators and magnetic switches, which are difficult to detect, even by a seasoned professional. The systems are placed on doors and windows and connected over leased phone wires with the communications room at police headquarters. There, the system is remarkably compact. A vertical panel only three feet by five has a capacity of 450 numbered lights which are under observation around the clock by the regular communications officers. A beeper signal helps to call attention when one of the lights flashes red. The officer on duty quickly checks the address in a file and by radio he sends a patrol car on the run.

Says Assistant Chief Carl J. Badger: "It goes off so quickly and gives the patrolman such an advantage that some of our young eager beavers compete against each other to see who can get there first and make the arrest. Sometimes they even run out of their assigned districts looking for a piece of the action."

The system certainly seems to be more versatile than some of the burglars. Recently one of the night raiders placed his set of heavy tools outside a store's back door and then made an undetected entry through a skylight. So far, he was ahead. But when he opened the back door from the inside to fetch his tools, he set off an alarm and a few minutes later he was a guest of the police.

Such performances bring great comfort to Cedar Rapids' small merchants. Says Greg Michel, owner of a vending machine supply house stocked with such burglar-favored stuff as cigarettes, candy bars and various small articles: "I have peace of mind when I go home at nights. I don't have to lie there in bed worrying about the store."

Some burglars avoid capture—but they don't get any loot. Assistant Chief Badger explains: "Sometimes the guy will break a window or force a door and then hide nearby to see whether police respond. At first, when our men arrived in a rush, the burglar would quietly leave the area. Now, we often move in indirectly to lull the man into a false sense of safety."

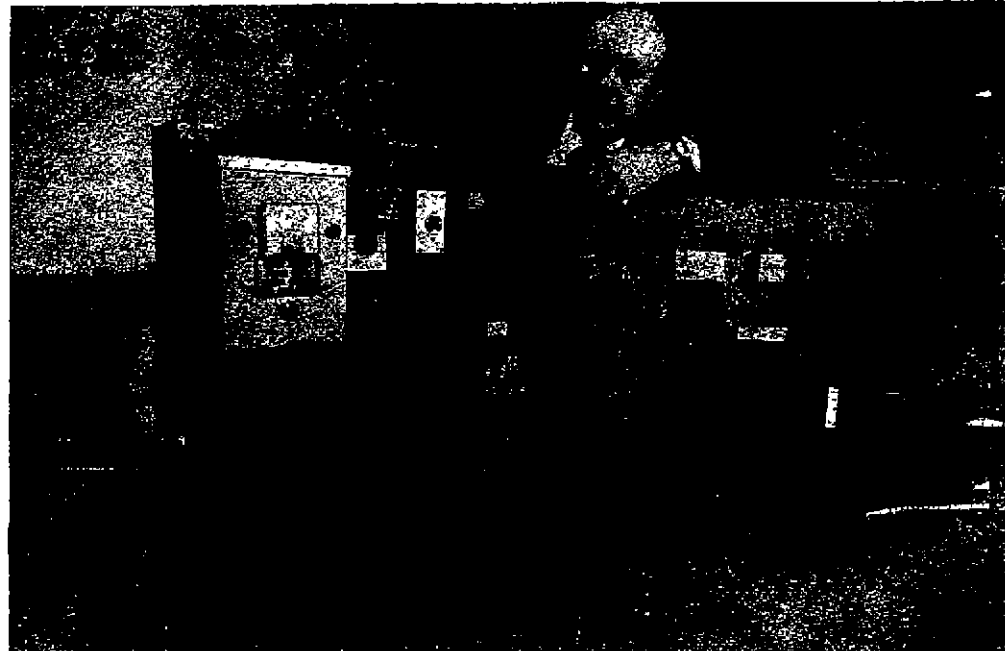

Cedar Rapids Police Chief George J. Matias got grant money to put silent alarms into 350 small businesses.

Chief Matias perceives a social benefit in the system: "A lot of burglaries are attempted on impulse by juveniles. If we catch him the first or second time, and we often do, his family and juvenile authorities have a chance to work with the kid and, before it's too late, may save him from becoming a career criminal."

Odds changed

Feedback from the Cedar Rapids detective bureau says the word is out among small-time drifters who practice breaking and entering: "Don't try to pull your job in Cedar Rapids. The odds are against you."

After the free installation of the first 350 systems, and completion of the test period, about 50 more systems have been installed—the city and small businesses splitting the cost down the middle. Depending on the number and sophistication of devices used, installations now run between $100 and $500.

Burglar alarm expert John Kellogg demonstrates the different kinds of sensor units that police department has installed in business premises throughout Cedar Rapids

Convictions of burglars caught by the network stand at 100 percent. And another dividend of the system is that while the alarms are watching for burglars in nearly 400 places, the night-shift patrolmen are free to cover more ground, making conventional patrols in high-crime areas.

Saves manpower

Says Chief Matias: "There are not now and probably never will be enough policemen to hold crime at present levels or reduce it without aid from technical systems. So far, with our alarm system, we've been able to hold the line on non-residential burglaries. We feel that we can keep this up."

The program is attracting wide attention. The Small Business Administration in Washington has complimented the Cedar Rapids police for their pioneering performance in extending protection to hundreds of small enterprises. And there's a growing file of letters from hundreds of police departments and others interested. "Why," says Cedar Rapids Chief Matias, with satisfaction, "we even have one from Scotland Yard in London. And we're happy to share this experience with anyone."

My Favorite Jokes

by Mal Z. Lawrence

EDITOR'S NOTE: "The first time I worked at the Copacabana I was in complete shock. I had seen Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis there on my prom night. My writer kept telling me not to get into a high nervous voice. I heard my name announced, walked out, and my voice was so high that only four dogs in the neighborhood heard it."

But the second time that Mal Z. Lawrence worked there, his usually sonorous voice was in good shape. Like most comedians, he takes the nerve-racking aspects of a comedian's life philosophically. "You feel so good when the pain ends. It's great after a show. I think that's why you do it. I remember my family came back to my dressing room after one of my first successes and they looked at me differently. They said, 'He's gotten better looking. Look, he's got more hair.'"

Lawrence has entertained in resort areas and top clubs across the country. He performs at least six weeks a year in Las Vegas. In fact he's one of the few comedians who made a solid reputation solely on the basis of his nightclub performances. He's gaining a television following as well, having appeared on the Johnny Carson and Merv Griffin shows.

Because he loves going to the racetrack Lawrence has a special dream: "I'd like to accumulate about $50,000 in cash. Then I can put it in my will that on one weekday at the track $2 be put into 25,000 envelopes which say 'Compliments of Mal Z. Lawrence. Make a bet for me.'"

Herewith, some Lawrence jokes:

Did you ever notice driving on a highway there's a trooper car up ahead of you? Did you ever notice the lineup of cars behind this car? Follow the leader. He does 40; they do 40. He backs up; they back up. It once took me an hour and a half to pass a trooper—he was parked!

My wife loves to travel. In my wallet I carry a family portrait—me, my kids and the babysitter.

A guy in Vegas comes over to me and says: "Can you lend me $100? I have a wife and kid. . . . They kicked us out of the hotel room. We're starving."

"How do I know," I asked him, "that you're not going to take the money and gamble with it?"

"No," he says, "gambling money I've got!"

A funeral procession is going by and many people are watching it. One fellow turns to another and says, "Who died?" The other man answers: "The gentleman in the first car."

The thing about the population explosion that's really interesting to me is that there are thousands of ways to die; there's only one way to be born. In other words, birth is doing a lot better than death. It's a better business. The other's a dying concern. Birth is the coming thing. If I'd invested in birth in 1800, my stock would have split three for one now. I'd be 170 years old but with a good investment in birth.

Some good news and bad news jokes:

The scene is a big corporation on Madison Avenue. A man comes into the board meeting and addresses the chairman: "Sir, I have good news and bad news. First the good news. We can buy the property at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street for only $20 million. Now the bad news—they want $100 in cash."

The pilot on a plane: "Ladies and gentlemen I have some good news and bad news. We're flying at 800 miles an hour. Altitude is 18,000 feet. But we're lost. Now the good news—we're making very good time."

In China the space program suffered a heartbreaking setback. With minutes to go before the takeoff the astronaut ate the fortune cookie that held the flight plan.

Hotels are sometimes so bad—in one they gave me a room with no ceiling. I called down to the manager and said, "There's no ceiling in my room." He said: "Don't worry, the fellow upstairs don't walk around much."

On one of our superhighways a woman in a Volkswagen is parked on the side of the road with the hood of the car up, and a distress signal on her face. Another woman in a Volkswagen comes to her rescue, and asks what the problem is. "I think I lost my motor." "Well, then," says the second woman. "It's a good thing I stopped by because I just happen to have an extra one in the back!"

Subway fares are going up to 50 cents. But for the extra 20 cents you can spit and put your feet up on the seat.

I'M WITH YOU, BROTHER!

WELL, THIS SHOULD PRETTY DO IT! WITH ZONKER VOTING FOR US, THE VIETNAM RESOLUTION WILL BE A BREEZE. THIS IS JUST THE KIND OF IDEOLOGICAL VICTORY I'VE BEEN WAITING FOR...

35¢ AN HOUR?

SHE PUT HER NAME ON THE BULLETIN BOARD DOWN AT THE MARKET!

I'D BETTER HANG UP, MARCIA—MR. AND MRS. FLINTSTONE JUST CAME HOME!

NONSENSE! GO RIGHT AHEAD!

MR. FLINTSTONE SAID IT WAS O.K.—GO GO AHEAD WITH THE STORY!

I'LL GET HER A COLA.

ISN'T THAT A RIOT?... I CAN'T BELIEVE IT... NO FOOLING?... LIKE WOW!!... THAT'S A REAL BUMMER!

HUH?... YOU HAVE TO GO TO BED?... OKAY... I'LL CALL YOU AGAIN NEXT WEEK!

YOGI BEAR

By Bill Hanna & Joe Barbera

RIGHT, MRS. RANGER, MA'AM... AND FOR ONLY $5.00, TOO.

I'M SURE HE WON'T MIND MY WAKING HIM FOR PAYMENT!

HERE'S YOUR $5.00, YOGI... ARE YOU SURE IT'S FIXED?

THIS IS BETTER THAN BEING HOME JUST WATCHIN' THE FOOTBALL GAME ON TV-- RIGHT, DADDY?

MY POPCORN IS ALMOST GONE-- CAN WE GET A SODA NOW?

DADDY, YOU'LL SEE A LOT BETTER IF YOU KNEEL ON THE SEAT.

POOR MOMMY-- SHE COULDN'T COME TO THE 'KIDDIES' MATINEE 'CAUSE SHE HAD SOME READING TO DO.

I WISH THAT LADY OVER THERE WOULD STOP SAYING "SHH"-- SHE'S BOTHERIN' US.

I LIKED THE THEATER WE WENT TO LAST WEEK-- THEY HAD BETTER CANDY BARS.

MY DIME JUST ROLLED UP THERE ABOUT FOUR ROWS.

IF THERE'S ANY KISSING JUNK IN THIS PICTURE I'M GONNA THROW UP!

DADDY, CAN YOU TURN UP THE BRIGHTNESS?

LET'S ALL GO TO THE MEN'S ROOM -- EXCEPT DOLLY-- SHE CAN MIND OUR SEATS.

A KID I KNOW SAW THIS PICTURE-- I'LL TELL YOU WHAT HAPPENS...

THE FRONT ROW'S EMPTY-- WHY DON'T WE SIT UP THERE?

DADDY, WHY DID WE HAVE TO CLOSE OUR EYES WHILE THE COMING ATTRACTIONS WERE ON?

I FOUND SOME CHEWIN' GUM-- IT WAS STUCK UNDER THE SEAT.
